"The natural maister Aristotell saith that every body be the course of nature is enclyned to here & se all that refressheth & quickeneth the spretys of man¹/wherfor I have thus in this boke folowinge²" gathered together divers treatises touching the Manners & Meals of Englishmen in former days, & have added therto divers figures of men of old, at meat & in bed,³ to the end that, to my fellows here & to come, the home life of their forefathers may be somewhat more plain, & their own minds somewhat rejoiced.

The treatises here collected consist of two main ones—John Russell's Boke of Nurture and Hugh Rhodes's Boke of Nurture, to which I have written separate prefaces <sup>4</sup>—and certain shorter poems addressed partly to those whom Cotgrave calls "Enfans de famille, Yonkers of account, youthes of good houses, children of rich parents

&lt;sup>4</sup> If any one thinks it a bore to read these Prefaces, I can assure him it was a much greater bore to have to hunt up the material for them, and set aside other pressing business for it. But the Boke of Curtasye binding on editors does not allow them to present to their readers a text with no coat and trowsers on. If any Members should take offence at any expressions in this or any future Preface of mine, as a few did at some words in the last I wrote, I ask sumbers to consider the first maxim in their Boke of Curtasye, Don't look a gift horse in the mouth. Prefaces are gift horses; and if mine buck or shy now and then, I ask their riders to sit steady, and take it easy. On the present one at least they'll be carried across some fresh country worth seeing.

The persons to whom the first poems of the present collection are addressed, the yonge Babees, whome bloode Royalle Withe grace, feture, and hyhe habylite Hathe enourmyd, the "Bele Babees" and "swete Children," may be likened to the "young gentylmen, Henxmen,—VI Enfauntes, or more, as it shall please the Kinge,"—at Edward the Fourth's Court; and the authors or translators of the Bokes in this volume, somewhat to that sovereign's Maistyr of Henxmen, whose duty it was

"to shew the schooles of urbanitie and nourture of England, to lerne them to ryde clenely and surely; to drawe them also to justes; to lerne them were theyre harneys; to have all curtesy in wordes, dedes, and degrees; dilygently to kepe them in rules of goynges and sittinges, after they be of honour. Moreover to teche them sondry languages, and other lerninges vertuous, to harping, to pype, sing, daunce, and with other honest and temperate behaviour and patience; and to kepe dayly and wekely with these children dew convenity, with corrections in theyre chambres, according to suche gentylmen; and eche of them to be used to that thinge of vertue that he shall be moste apt to lerne, with remembraunce dayly of Goddes servyce accustumed. This maistyr sittith in the halle, next unto these Henxmen, at the same boarde, to have his respecte unto theyre demeanynges, howe manerly they ete and drinke, and to theyre communication and other formes curiall, after the booke of urbanitie." (Liber Niger in Household Ordinances, p. 45.)

That these young Henxmen were gentlemen, is expressly stated,2

and they had "everyche of them an honest servaunt to keepe theyre chambre and harneys, and to aray hym in this courte whyles theyre maisters be present in courte." I suppose that when they grew up, some became Esquires, and then their teaching would prove of use, for "These Esquiers of houshold of old [were] accustumed, wynter and sumer, in aftyrnoones and in eveninges, to drawe to lordes chambres within courte, there to kepe honest company aftyr theyre cunnynge, in talkyng of cronycles of Kings and of other polycyes, or in pypeyng or harpyng, synging, or other actes martialles, to help occupy the courte, and accompany straungers, tyll the tyme require of departing."

But that a higher station than an Esquier's was in store for some of these henchmen, may be known from the history of one of them. Thomas Howard, eldest son of Sir John Howard, knight (who was afterwards Duke of Norfolk, and killed at Bosworth Field), was among these henchmen or pages, 'enfauntes' six or more, of Edward IV.'s. He was made Duke of Norfolk for his splendid victory over the Scots at Flodden, and Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard were his granddaughters. Among the 'othyr lerninges vertuous' taught

The Promptorium has "Heyncemann (henchemanne) Gerolocista, duorum generum (gerolocista)," and Mr Way in his note says, "The pages of distinguished personages were called henxmen, as Spelman supposes, from Ger. hengst, a warhorse, or according to Bp. Percy, from their place being at the side or haunch of their lord." See the rest of Mr Way's note. He is a most provokingly careful editor. If ever you hit on a plum in your wanderings through other books you are sure to find it afterwards in one of Mr Way's notes when you bethink yourself of turning to the Promptorium.

In Lord Percy's Household (North. H. Book, p. 362) the Henchemen are mentioned next to the Earl's own sons and their tutor (?) in the list of "Persones that shall attende upon my Lorde at his Borde Daily, ande have no more but his Revercion Except Brede and Drynk."

The question of the social rank of these Bele Babees, children, and Pueri who stood at tables, opens up the whole subject of upper-class education in early times in England. It is a subject that, so far as I can find, has never yet been separately treated, and I therefore throw together such few notices as the kindness of friends2 and my own chance grubbings have collected; these as a sort of stopgap till the appearance of Mr Anstey's volume of early Oxford Statutes in the Chronicles and Memorials, a volume which will, I trust, give us a complete account of early education in our land. If it should not, I hope that Mr Quick will carry his pedagogic researches past Henry VIII.'s time, or that one of our own members will take the subject up. It is worthy of being thoroughly worked out. For convenience' sake, the notices I have mentioned are arranged under six heads:

- 2. At Home and at Private Tutors', p. xvii.
- 3. At English Universities, p. xxvi. 6. At Grammar Schools, p. lii.
- 1. Education in Nobles' houses. | 4. At Foreign Universities, p. xl.
  - 5. At Monastic and Cathedral Schools, p. xli.

One consideration should be premised, that manly exercises, manners and courtesy, music and singing, knowledge of the order of precedency of ranks, and ability to carve, were in early times more important than Latin and Philosophy. 'Aylmar be kyng' gives these directions to Athelbrus, his steward, as to Horn's education:

<sup>2</sup> First of these is Mr Charles H. Pearson, then the Rev. Prof. Brewer, and Mr

William Chappell.

When writing this I had forgotten Warton's section on the Revival of Learning in England before and at the Reformation, Hist. English Poetry, v. iii. ed. 1840. It should be read by all who take an interest in the subject. Mr Bruce also refers to Kynaston's Museum Minervæ. P.S.-Mr Bullein and Mr Watts have since referred me to Henry, who has in each volume of his History of England a regular account of learning in England, the Colleges and Schools founded, and the learned men who flourished, in the period of which each volume treats. Had I seen these earlier I should not have got the following extracts together; but as they are for the most part not in Henry, they will serve as a supplement to him.

1. The chief places of education for the sons of our nobility and gentry were the houses of other nobles, and specially those of the Chancellors of our Kings, men not only able to read and write, talk Latin and French themselves, but in whose hands the Court patronage lay. As early as Henry the Second's time (A.D. 1154-62), if not before , this system prevailed. A friend notes that Fitz-Stephen says of Becket:

"The nobles of the realm of England and of neighbouring kingdoms used to send their sons to serve the Chancellor, whom he trained with honourable bringing-up and learning; and when they had received the knight's belt, sent them back with honour to their fathers and kindred: some he used to keep. The king himself, his master, entrusted to him his son, the heir of the realm, to be brought up; whom he had with him, with many sons of nobles of the same age, and their proper retinue and masters and proper servants in the honour due."—Vita S. Thomæ, pp. 189, 190, ed. Giles.

Roger de Hoveden, a Yorkshireman, who was a clerk or secretary to Henry the Second, says of Richard the Lionheart's unpopular chancellor, Longchamps the Bishop of Ely:

"All the sons of the nobles acted as his servants, with downcast looks, nor dared they to look upward towards the heavens unless it so happened that they were addressing him; and if they attended to anything else they were pricked with a goad, which their lord held in his hand, fully mindful of his grandfather of pious memory, who, being of servile condition in the district of Beauvais, had, for his occupation, to guide the plough and whip up the oxen; and who at length, to gain his liberty, fled to the Norman territory." (Riley's Hoveden, ii. 232, quoted in The Cornhill Magazine, vol. xv. p. 165.)

<sup>1</sup> It was in part a principle of Anglo-Saxon society at the earliest period, and attaches itself to that other universal principle of fosterage. A Teuton chieftain always gathered round him a troop of young retainers in his hall who were voluntary servants, and they were, in fact, almost the only servants he would allow to touch his person. T. Wright.

ye not to Courte (quoted in Ellis's Letters, v. ii. p. 3).

"For and this curre do gnarl, They must stande all afar All Chancellors were not brutes of this kind, but we must remember that young people were subjected to rough treatment in early days. Even so late as Henry VI.'s time, Agnes Paston sends to London on the 28th of January, 1457, to pray the master of her son of 15, that if the boy "hath not done well, nor will not amend," his master Greenfield "will truly belash him till he will amend." And of the same lady's treatment of her marriageable daughter, Elizabeth, Clere writes on the 29th of June, 1454,

"She (the daughter) was never in so great sorrow as she is now-a-days, for she may not speak with no man, whosoever come, ne not may see nor speak with my man, nor with servants of her mother's, but that she beareth her on hand otherwise than she meaneth; and she hath since Easter the most part been beaten once in the week or twice, and sometimes twice on a day, and her head broken in two or three places." (v. i. p. 50, col. 1, ed. 1840.)

The treatment of Lady Jane Grey by her parents was also very severe, as she told Ascham, though she took it meekly, as her sweet nature was:

"One of the greatest benefites that God ever gave me, is, that he sent me so sharpe and severe Parentes, and so jentle a scholemaster. For when I am in presence either of father or mother, whether I speake, kepe silence, sit, stand, or go, eate, drinke, be merie or sad, be sewyng, plaiyng, dauncing, or doing anie thing els, I must do it, as it were, in soch weight, mesure, and number, even so perfitelie as God made the world, or els I am so sharplie taunted, so cruellie threatened, yea presentlie some tymes, with pinches, nippes, and bobbes, and other waies which I will not name for the honor I beare them, so without measure misordered, that I thinke my self in hell till tyme cum that I must go to M. Elmer, who teacheth me so jentlie, so pleasantlie, with soch faire allurementes to learning, that I thinke all the tyme nothing whiles I am with him. And when I am called from him, I fall on weeping."—The Scholemaster, ed. Mayor.

calls in different places 'sharp, fond, & lewd'<sup>1</sup>—Ascham denounces strongly in the first book of his Scholemaster, and he contrasts their folly in beating into their scholars the hatred of learning with the practice of the wise riders who by gentle allurements breed them up in the love of riding. Indeed, the origin of his book was Sir Wm. Cecil's saying to him "I have strange news brought me this morning, that divers scholars of Eton be run away from the school for fear of beating."

Sir Peter Carew, says Mr Froude, being rather a troublesome boy, was chained in the Haccombe dog-kennel till he ran away from it.

But to return to the training of young men in nobles' houses. I take the following from Fiddes's Appendix to his Life of Wolsey:

John de Athon, upon the Constitutions of Othobon, tit. 23, in respect to the Goods of such who dyed intestate, and upon the Word Barones, has the following Passage concerning Grodsted Bishop of Lincoln<sup>2</sup> (who died 9th Oct., 1253),—

"Robert surnamed Grodsted of holy memory, late Bishop of Lincoln, when King Henry asked him, as if in wonder, where he learnt the Nurture in which he had instructed the sons of nobles (&) peers of the Realm, whom he kept about him as pages (domisellos³),—since he was not descended from a noble lineage, but from humble (parents)—is said to have answered fearlessly, 'In the house or guest-

1 "And therfore do I the more lament that soch [hard] wittes commonlie be either kepte from learning by fond fathers, or bet from learning by lewde schole-masters," ed. Mayor, p. 19. But Ascham reproves parents for paying their masters so badly: "it is pitie, that commonlie more care is had, yea and that emonges verie wise men, to finde out rather a cunnynge man for their horse than a cunnyng man for their children. They say nay in worde, but they do so in deede. For, to the one they will gladlie give a stipend of 200. Crounes by yeare, and loth to offer to the other, 200. shillinges. God, that sitteth in heauen, laugheth their choice to skorne, and rewardeth their liberalitie as it should: for he suffereth them to have tame and well ordered horse, but wilde and unfortunate Children." Reyner, in his Apostol. Bened. from Saunders acquaints us, that the Sons of the Nobility were placed with Whiting Abbot of Glastenbury for their Education, who was contemporary with the Cardinal, and which Method of Education was continued for some Time afterward.

There is in the Custody of the present Earl of Stafford, a Nobleman of the greatest Humanity and Goodness, an Original of Instructions, by the Earl of Arundell, written in the Year 1620, for the Benefit of his younger Son, the Earl of Stafford's Grandfather, under this Title;

Instructions for you my Son William, how to behave your self at Norwich.

In these Instructions is the following paragraph, "You shall in all Things reverence honour and obey my Lord Bishop of Norwich, as you would do any of your Parents, esteeminge whatsoever He shall tell or Command you, as if your Grandmother of Arundell, your Mother, or my self, should say it; and in all things esteem your self as my Lord's Page; a breeding which youths of my house far superior to you were accustomed unto, as my Grandfather of Norfolk, and his Brother my good Uncle of Northampton were both bred as Pages with Rishopps, &c."

Sir Thomas More, who was born in 1480, was brought up in the house of Cardinal Morton. Roper says that he was "received into the house of the right reverend, wise, and learned prelate Cardinal Morton, where, though he was young of years, yet would he at Christmas-tide suddenly sometimes step in among the players, and never studying for the matter make a part of his own there presently among them, which made the lookers on more sport than all the players beside. In whose wit and towardness the Cardinal much delighting would say of him unto the nobles that divers times dined with him, This child here waiting at the table, whosoever shall live to see it, will prove a marvellous man. Whereupon for his better furtherance in learning he placed him at Oxford, &c." (Roper's Life of More, ed. Singer, 1822, p. 3.)

Cresacre More in his Life of More (ed. 1828, p. 17) states the same thing more fully, and gives the remark of the Cardinal more accurately, thus:—" that that boy there waiting on him, whoever should live to see it, would prove a marvellous rare man."

Through Wolsey's household, says Professor Brewer, almost all the Officials of Henry the Eighth's time passed. Cavendish, in his Life of Wolsey (vol. i. p. 38, ed. Singer, 1825) says of the Cardinal, "And at meals, there was continually in his chamber a board kept for his Chamberlains, and Gentlemen Ushers, having with them a mess of the young Lords, and another for gentlemen." Among these young Lords, we learn at p. 57, was

"my Lord Percy, the son and heir of the Earl of Northumberland, [who] then attended upon the Lord Cardinal, and was also his servitor; and when it chanced the Lord Cardinal at any time to repair to the court, the Lord Percy would then resort for his pastime unto the queen's chamber, and there would fall in dalliance among the queen's maidens, being at the last more conversant with Mistress Anne Boleyn than with any other; so that there grew such a secret love between them that, at length they were insured together, intending to marry 1."

Among the persons daily attendant upon Wolsey in his house, down-lying and up-rising, Cavendish enumerates "of Lords nine or ten, who had each of them allowed two servants; and the Earl of Derby had allowed five men" (p. 36-7). On this Singer prints a note, which looks like a guess, signed Growe, "Those Lords that were placed in the great and privy chambers were Wards, and as such paid for their board and education." It will be seen below that he had a particular officer called "Instructor of his Wards" (Cavendish, p. 38, 1. 2). Why I suppose the note to be a guess is, because at p. 33 Cavendish has stated that Wolsey "had also a great number daily attending upon him, both of noblemen and worthy gentlemen, of great estimation and possessions,—with no small number of the tallest yeomen that he could get in all his realm; in so much that well was that nobleman and gentleman that might prefer any tall and comely yeoman unto his service."

In the household of the Earl of Northumberland in 1511 were "... yong gentlemen at their fryndes fynding,<sup>2</sup> in my lords house for the hoole yere" and "Haunsmen ande Yong Gentlemen at thir Fryndes fynding v[j] (As to say, Hanshmen iij. And Yong Gentlemen iij" p. 254,) no doubt for the purpose of learning manners, &c. And that such youths would be found in the house of every noble of importance I believe, for as Walter Mapes (? ab. 1160-90 A.D.) says of the great nobles, in his poem De diversis ordinibus hominum, the example of manners goes out from their houses, Exemplar morum domibus procedit eorum. That these houses were in some instances only the finishing schools for our well-born young men after previous teaching at home and at College is possible (though the cases of Sir Thomas More and Ascham are exactly the other way), but the Lord Percy last named had a schoolmaster in his house, "The Maister of Graimer j", p. 254; "Lyverays for the Maister of Gramer 1 in Housholde: Item Half a Loof of Houshold Breide, a Pottell of Beere, and two White Lyghts," p. 97. "Every Scolemaister techyng Grammer in the Hous C s." (p. 47, 51). Edward IV.'s henxmen were taught grammar; and if the Pastons are to be taken as a type of their class, our nobles and gentry at the end of the 15th century must have been able to read and write freely. Chaucer's Squire could write, and though the custom of sealing deeds and not signing them prevailed, more or less, till Henry VIII.'s time, it is doubtful whether this implied inability of the sealers to write. Mr Chappell says that in Henry VIII.'s time half our nobility were then writing ballads. Still, the bad spelling and grammar of most of the letters up to that period, and the general ignorance of our upper classes were, says Professor Brewer, the reason why the whole government of the country was in the hands of ecclesiastics. Even in Henry the Eighth's time, Sir Thomas Boleyn is said to have been the only noble at Court who could speak French with any degree of fluency, and so was learned enough to be sent on an embassy abroad. But this may be questioned. Yet Wolsey, speaking to his Lord Chamberlain and Comptroller when they "showed him that it seemed to them there should be some noblemen and strangers [Henry VIII. and his courtiers masked] arrived at his bridge, as ambassadors from some foreign prince. With that, quoth the Cardinal, 'I shall desire you, because ye can speak French, to take the pains to go down into the hall to encounter and to receive them, according to their estates, and to conduct them into this chamber' (Cavendish, p. 51). Then spake my Lord Chamberlain unto them in French, declaring my Lord Cardinal's mind (p. 53)."

The general opinion of our gentry as to the study of Letters, before and about 1500 A.D., is probably well represented by the opinion of one of them stated by Pace, in his Prefatory Letter to Colet, prefixed

It remains that I now explain to you what moves me to compile and publish a treatise with this title. When, two years ago, more or less, I had returned to my native land from the city of Rome, I was present at a certain feast, a stranger to many; where, when enough had been drunk, one or other of the guests—no fool, as one might infer from his words and countenance—began to talk of educating his children well. And, first of all, he thought that he must search out a good teacher for them, and that they should at any rate attend school. There happened to be present one of those whom we call gentle-men (generosos), and who always carry some horn hanging at their backs, as though they would hunt during dinner. He, hearing letters praised, roused with sudden anger, burst out furiously with these words. "Why do you talk nonsense, friend?" he said; "A curse on those stupid letters! all learned men are beggars: even Erasmus, the most learned of all, is a beggar (as I hear), and in a certain letter of his calls τήν κατάρατον πενίαν (that is, execrable poverty) his wife, and vehemently complains that he cannot shake her off his shoulders right into  $\beta a\theta \nu \kappa \dot{\eta} \tau \epsilon a \pi \acute{\sigma} \nu \tau \sigma \nu$ , that is, into the deep sea. I swear by God's body I'd rather that my son should hang than study letters. For it becomes the sons of gentlemen to blow the horn nicely (apte), to hunt skilfully, and elegantly carry and train a hawk. But the study of letters should be left to the sons of rustics." At this point I could not restrain myself from answering something to this most talkative man, in defence of good letters. "You do not seem to me, good man," I said, "to think rightly. For if any foreigner were to come to the king, such as the ambassadors (oratores) of princes are, and an answer had to be given to him, your son, if he were educated as you wish, could only blow his horn, and the learned sons of rustics would be called to answer, and would be far preferred to your hunter or fowler son; and they, enjoying their learned liberty, would say to your face, 'We prefer to be learned, and, thanks to our learning, no fools, than boast of our fool-like nobility.'" Then he upon this, looking round, said, "Who is this person that is talking like this? I don't know the fellow." And when some one whispered in his ear who I was, he muttered something or other in a low voice to himself; and finding a fool to listen to him, he then caught hold of a cup of wine. And when he Et quum nihil haberet respondendum, cœpit bibere, & in alia sermonem transferre. could get nothing to answer, he began to drink, and change the conversation to other things. And thus I was freed from the disputing of this mad fellow,—which I was dreadfully afraid would have lasted a long time,—not by Apollo, like Horace was from his babbler, but by Bacchus.

On the general subject it should be noted that Fleta mentions nothing about boarders or apprentices in his account of household economy; nor does the Liber Contrarctulatoris Garderobæ Edw.  $I^{mi}$  mention any young noblemen as part of the King's household. That among tradesmen in later times, putting out their children in other houses, and apprenticeships, were the rule, we know from many statements and allusions in our literature, and "The Italian Relation of England" (temp. Hen. VII.) mentions that the Duke of Suffolk was boarded out to a rich old widow, who persuaded him to marry her (p. 27). It also says

The want of affection in the English is strongly manifested towards their children; for after having kept them at home till they arrive at the age of 7 or 9 years at the utmost, they put them out, both males and females, to hard service in the houses of other people, binding them generally for another 7 or 9 years. And these are called apprentices, and during that time they perform all the most menial offices; and few are born who are exempted from this fate. for every one, however rich he may be, sends away his children into the houses of others, whilst he, in return, receives those of strangers into his own. And on inquiring their reason for this severity, they answered that they did it in order that their children might learn better manners. But I, for my part, believe that they do it because they like to enjoy all their comforts themselves, and that they are better served by strangers than they would be by their own children. Besides which, the English being great epicures, and very avaricious by nature, indulge in the most delicate fare themselves and give their household the coarsest bread, and beer, and cold meat baked on Sunday for the week, which, however, they allow them in great abundance. That if they had their own children at home, they would be obliged to give them the same food they made use of for themselves. That if the English sent their children away from home to learn virtue and good manners, and took them back again when their apprenticeship was over, they might, perhaps, be excused; but they never return, for the girls are settled by their patrons, and the boys make the best marriages they can, and, assisted by their patrons, not by their fathers, they also open a house and strive diligently by this means to make some fortune for themselves; whence it proceeds that, having no hope of their paternal inheritance, that all become so greedy of gain that they feel no shame in asking, almost "for the love of God," for the smallest sums of money; and to this it may be attributed, that there is no injury that can be committed against the lower orders of the English, that may not be atoned for by money.—

A Relation of the Island of England (Camden Society, 1847), pp. 24-6.

"This evidently refers to tradesmen. The note by the Editor however says it was the case with the children of the first nobility, and gives the terms for the Duke of Buckingham's children with Mrs Hexstall. The document only shows that Mrs Hexstall boarded them by contract 'during the time of absence of my Lord and my Ladie."

The Earl of Essex says in a letter to Lord Burleigh, 1576, printed in Murdin's State Papers, p. 301-2.

"Neverthelesse, uppon the assured Confidence, that your love to me shall dissend to my Childrenne, and that your Lordship will declare yourself a Frend to me, both alive and dead, I have willed Mr Waterhouse to shew unto you how you may with Honor and Equity do good to my Sonne Hereford, and how to bind him with perpetual Frendship to you and your House. And to the Ende I wold have his Love towardes those which are dissended from you spring up and increase with his Yeares, I have wished his Education to be in your Household, though the same had not bene allotted to your Lordship as Master of the Wardes; and that the whole Tyme, which he shold spend in England in his Minority, might be devided in Attendance uppon my Lord Chamberlayne and you, to the End, that as he might frame himself to the Example of my Lord of Sussex in all the Actions of his Life, tending either to the Warres, or to the Institution of a Nobleman, so that he might also reverence your Lordship for your Wisdome and Gravyty, and lay up your Counsells and Advises in the Treasory of his Hart."

That girls, as well as boys, were sent out to noblemen's houses for their education, is evident from Margaret Paston's letter of the 3rd of April, 1469, to Sir John Paston, "Also I would ye should purvey for your sister [? Margery] to be with my Lady of Oxford, or with my Lady of Bedford, or in some other worshipful place whereas ye think best, and I will help to her finding, for we be either of us weary of other." Alice Crane's Letter, in the Paston Letters, v. i. p.

35, ed. 1840, also supports this view, as does Sir John Heveningham's to Margaret Paston, asking her to take his cousin Anneys Loveday for some time as a boarder till a mistress could be found for her. "If that it please you to have her with you to into the time that a mistress may be purveyed for her, I pray you thereof, and I shall content you for her board that ye shall be well pleased." Similarly Anne Boleyn and her sister were sent to Margaret of Savoy, aunt of Charles V., who lived at Brussels, to learn courtesy, &c., says Prof. Brewer. Sir Roger Twysden says that Anne was "Not above seven yeares of age, Anno 1514," when she went abroad. He adds:

"It should seeme by some that she served three in France successively; Mary of England maryed to Lewis the twelfth, an. 1514, with whome she went out of England, but Lewis dying the first of January following, and that Queene (being) to returne home, sooner than either Sir Thomas Bullen or some other of her frendes liked she should, she was preferred to Clauda, daughter to Lewis XII. and wife to Francis I. then Queene (it is likely upon the commendation of Mary the Dowager), who not long after dying, an. 1524, not yet weary of France she went to live with Marguerite, Dutchess of Alançon and Berry, a Lady much commended for her favor towards good letters, but never enough for the Protestant religion then in the infancy—from her, if I am not deceived, she first learnt the grounds of the Protestant religion; so that England may seem to owe some part of her happyness derived from that Lady." (Twysden's Notes quoted by Singer in his ed. of Cavendish's Life of Wolsey, 1825, p. 57.)

As Henry VIII. fell in love with his wife's maid of honour,—"began to kindle the brand of amours" at the light of Anne Boleyn's beauty, "her excellent gesture and behaviour,"—so we find in later times rich young men became enamoured of poor young women staying in the same house with them. Mr Bruce sends me an instance:

"the young lady was niece, you will perceive, to a well-beneficed clergyman, and a thriving gentleman well-advanced in the public service. She had lost her mother, and her father was in debt and difficulties. She was therefore placed by the influence of her uncles in a well-known family in Wiltshire."

State Papers. Dom. Car. I. Vol. ccclii. No. 29. Dr Matthew Nicholas, afterwards Dean of St Paul's, to Edward Nicholas, Clerk of the Council, and afterwards Secretary of State. Dated, West

Dean, April 4, 1637.

"I have spoken with Miss Evelyn since I wrote last unto you, and enquired of her the cause which moued her to displace my coson Hunton. She told me much accordinge to what she had sayd unto my coson Hunton, with this addition, that she had respect in it as well unto her good as her owne convenience, for hauinge nowe noe employment for her but her needle, she founde that sittinge still at her worke made her sickly, and therefore thought she might doe better in another service where she might have the orderinge of an huswifely charge, for which (she told me) she had made her very able. I expressed myselfe tender of the disgrace which would lay uppon my coson in beinge displaced in such a manner by warninge giuen, wherof whatsoeuer were the cause, it would be imagined by all that knowe it not, to be in her ill carriage, and wished she had done me that fauour as to have acquainted me with her intents in such time as I might have taken some course to have disposed of her before it had bin knowne that she was to leave her: she slubbered it ouer with a slight excuse that she had acquainted my wife . . . . but for my satisfaction she told me that she would be as mindfull of her when God should call her as if she were with her, and in testimony of her good likinge of her seruice she would allowe her forty shillings yearly towarde her maintainance as longe as herself should liue. am soe well acquainted with what she hath as yet disposed to her by will, and soe little value forty shillings to my coson Hunton's credit, as I gaue her noe thankes. Mr Downes (I heare) is sent for home by his father with an intent to keepe him with him, but I doe imagine that when my coson Hunton shall be other where disposed off, he shall returne; for my conceit is stronge that the feare of his beinge match'd to his disadvantage, who was placed with Mr Evelyn a youth to be bred for his preferment, hath caused this alteration; howsoever there be noe wordes made of it. I confess that when I have bin told of the good will that was observed betweene my coson Hunton and Mr Downes, I did put it by with my coson Huntons protestation to the contrary, and was willinge by that neglect to have suffered it to have come to pass (if it mought have bin) because I thought it would haue bin to her aduantage, but nowe that the busines is come to this issue (as whatsoeuer be pretended I am confident this is the cause of my cosons partinge) I begin to quæstion my discretion. . . . Good brother, let me have your aduise what to do."

2. Home and Private Education. Of these, more or less must have been going on all over England, by private tutors at home, or in the houses of the latter. "In five years (after my baptism) I was handed over by my father to Siward, a noble priest, to be trained in letters, to whose mastery I was subdued during five years learning the first rudiments. But in the eleventh year of my age I was given up by my own father for the love of God, and destined to enter the service of the eternal King."—Orderic, vol. ii. p. 301, ed. Prevost.

From Adam de Marisco's Letters, 53, we find that Henry and Almeric, the eldest and youngest sons of the Earl of Montfort, were put under Grosseteste for tuition, he being then a Bishop. At Paris, John of Salisbury (who died in 1180) gained a living by teaching the sons of noblemen,—(instruendos susceperam, ?took them in to board).—Metalogicus, lib. 11, c. 10.

Henry of Huntingdon says, "Richard, the king's (Henry I.'s) bastard son, was honourably brought up (festive nutritus) by our Bishop Robert (Blote of Lincoln), and duly reverenced by me and others in the same household I lived in."—Anglia Sacra, vol. ii. p. 696. Giraldus Cambrensis speaks of beating his coætanei et conscolares terræ suæ, of being reproved for idleness by his uncle, the Bishop of St David's, and of being constantly chaffed by two of his uncle's chaplains, who used to decline durus and stultus to him. Also he alludes to the rod. Probably there was some sort of school at either Pembroke or St David's.—De Rebus a se Gestis, lib. 1, c. 2.1

The Statutes of a Gild of young Scholars formed to burn lights in honour of some saint or other, and to help one another in sickness, old age, and to burial, will be printed for us by Mr Toulmin Smith in the Early English Text Society's books this year.

Under this head of Private Tuition we may class the houses of Abbots, where boys of good birth were educated. In his History of English Poetry, section 36, vol. iii. p. 9, ed. 1840, Warton says:

"It appears to have been customary for the governors of the most considerable convents, especially those that were honoured with the mitre, to receive into their own private lodgings the sons of the principal families of the neighbourhood for education. About the year 1450, Thomas Bromele, abbot of the mitred monastery of Hyde near Winchester, entertained in his own abbatial house within that monastery eight young gentlemen, or gentiles pueri, who were placed there for the purpose of literary instruction, and constantly dined at the abbot's table. I will not scruple to give the original words, which are more particular and expressive, of the obscure record which preserves this curious anecdote of monastic life. 'Pro octo gentilibus pueris apud dominum abbatem studii causa perhendinantibus, et ad mensam domini victitantibus, cum garcionibus suis ipsos comitantibus, hoc anno, xviil. ixs. was more extraordinary, as William of Wykeham's celebrated seminary was so near. And this seems to have been an established practice of the abbot of Glastonbury, "whose apartment in the abbey was a kind of well-disciplined court, where the sons of noblemen and young gentlemen were wont to be sent for virtuous education, who returned thence home excellently accomplished.\(^1\)" Richard Whiting, the last abbot of Glastonbury, who was cruelly executed by the king, during the course of his government educated near three hundred ingenuous youths, who constituted a part of his family; beside many others whom he liberally supported at the universities.\(^2\) Whitgift, the most excellent and learned archbishop of Canterbury in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was educated under Robert Whitgift his uncle, abbot of the Augustine monastery of black canons at Wellhow in Lincolnshire, "who," says Strype "had several other young gentlemen under his care for education." Of Lydgate—about 1420-30 A.D. I suppose—Prof. Morley says in his English Writers, vol. ii. Pt. I. p. 423:

"After studying at Oxford, Paris, and Padua, and after mastering with special delight the writings of such poets as Dante, Boccaccio, and Alain Chartier, Lydgate opened at his monastery of Bury St Edmund's a school of rhetoric in which he taught young nobles literature and the art of versifying!"

Richard Pace says in his De Fructu, 1517:

"Now the learning of music too demands its place, especially from me whom it distinguished when a boy amongst boys. For Thomas Langton, bishop of Winchester (the predecessor of him who is now living), whose secretary I was, when he had marked that I was making a proficiency in music far beyond my age (as himself-perchance from his too great affection for me-would point out and repeatedly say), 'The talent of this lad,' he said, 'is born for greater things,' and a few days afterwards he sent me, to pursue the study of literature, into Italy, to the school at Padua, which then was at its greatest prime, and benevolently supplied the annual expenses, as he showed wonderful favour to all men of letters, and in his day played the part of a second Mecænas, well remembering (as he ofttimes said) that he had been advanced to the episcopal dignity on account of his learning. For he had gained, with the highest commendation, the distinctions of each law<sup>3</sup> (as they say now-a-days). Also he so highly prized the study of Humanity 4 that he had boys and youths

In this competition he who had borne himself notably went away with a present of something suitable to his character, and with commendation expressed in the most refined language; for that excellent governor had ever in his mouth the maxim that merit grows with praise."

Palsgrave in 1530 speaks of "maister Petrus Vallensys, scole maister to his [Charles, Duke of Suffolk's] excellent yong sonne the Erle of Lyncolne."

Roger Ascham, author of the Scholemaster, &c., born in 1515,

"was received at a very youthful age into the family of Sir Antony Wingfield, who furnished money for his education, and placed Roger, together with his own sons, under a tutor whose name was Bond. The boy had by nature a taste for books, and showed his good taste by reading English in preference to Latin, with wonderful eagerness. This was the more remarkable from the fact that Latin was still the language of literature, and it is not likely that the few English books written at that time were at all largely spread abroad in places far away from the Universities and Cathedral towns. In or about the year 1530, Mr Bond the domestic tutor resigned the charge of young Roger, who was now about fifteen years old, and by the advice and pecuniary aid of his kind patron Sir Antony, he was enabled to enter St John's College, Cambridge, at that time the most famous seminary of learning in all England . . he took his bachelor's degree in 1531, Feb. 18, in the 18th year of his age ["being a boy, new bachelor of art," he says himself,] a time of life at which it is now more common to enter the University than to take a degree, but which, according to the modes of education

What a young nobleman learnt in Henry the Eighth's time may be gathered from the following extracts (partly given by Mr Froude, Hist., v. i. p. 39-40) from the letters of young Gregory Cromwell's tutor, to his father, the Earl of Essex, the King's Chief Secretary.

"The order of his studie, as the houres lymyted for the Frenche tongue, writinge, plaienge att weapons, castinge of accomptes, pastimes of instruments, and suche others, hath bene devised and directed by the prudent wisdome of Mr Southwell; who with a ffatherly zeale and amitie muche desiringe to have hime a sonne worthy suche parents, ceaseth not aswell concerninge all other things for hime mete and necessary, as also in lerninge, t'expresse his tendre love and affection towardes hime, serchinge by all meanes possible howe he may moste proffitte, dailie heringe hime to rede sumwhatt in thenglishe tongue, and advertisenge hime of the naturell and true kynde of pronuntiacon therof, expoundinge also and declaringe the etimologie and native signification of suche wordes as we have borowed of the Latines or Frenche menne, not evyn so comonly used in our quotidiene speche. The next Letter gives further details of Gregory's studies—

"But forcause somer was spente in the servyce of the wylde goddes, it is so moche to be regarded after what fashion yeouth is educate and brought upp, in whiche tyme that that is lerned (for the moste parte) will nott all holelie be forgotten in the older yeres, I thinke it my dutie to asserteyne yor Maistershippe how he spendith his tyme. . . . . Of the course of study of 'well-bred youths' in the early years of Elizabeth's reign we have an interesting account by Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper, father of the great Bacon, in a Paper by Mr J. Payne Collier in the Archwologia, vol. 36, Part 2, p. 339, Article xxxi.<sup>2</sup> "Before he became Lord Keeper, Sir Nicholas Bacon had been Attorney of that Court" [the Court of Wards and Liveries] "a most lucrative appointment; and on the 27th May, 1561, he addressed a letter to Sir William Cecil, then recently (Jan., 1561) made Master of the Wards, followed by a paper thus entitled: -- 'Articles devised for the bringing up in vertue and learning of the Queenes Majesties Wardes, being heires males, and whose landes, descending in possession and coming to the Queenes Majestie, shall amount to the cleere yearly value of c. markes, or above." Sir Nicholas asks the new Master of Wards to reform what he justly calls most "preposterous" abuses in the department:-"That the proceeding hath bin preposterous, appeareth by this: the chiefe thinge, and most of price, in wardeship, is the wardes mynde; the next to that, his bodie; the last and meanest, his land. Nowe, hitherto the chiefe care of governaunce hath bin to the land, being the meaneste; and to the bodie. being the better, very small; but to the mynde, being the best, none at all, which methinkes is playnely to sett the carte before the horse" (p. 343). Mr Collier then summarises Bacon's Articles for the bringing up of the Wards thus: "The wards are to attend divine service at six in the morning: nothing is said about breakfast, but they are to study Latin until eleven; to dine between 11 and 12; to study with the music-master from 12 till 2; from 2 to 3 they are to be with the French master; and from 3 to 5 with the Latin and Greek masters. At 5 they are to go to evening prayers; then they are to sup; to be allowed honest pastimes till 8; and, last of all, before they go to bed at 9, they are again to apply themselves to music under the instruction of the master. At and after the age of 16 they were to attend lectures upon temporal and civil law, as well as de disciplina militari. It is not necessary to insert farther details; but what I have stated will serve to show how well-bred youths of that period were usually brought up, and how disgracefully the duty of education as regards wards was neglected. . . It may appear singular that in these articles drawn up by Sir Nicholas, so much stress is laid upon instruction in music2; but it only serves to confirm the notion that the science was then most industriously cultivated by nearly every class of society." Pace in 1517 requires that every one should study it, but should join with it some other study, as Astrology or Astronomy. He says also that the greatest part of the art had perished by men's negligence; "For all that our musicians do now-a-days, is almost trivial if compared with what the old ones (antiqui) did, so that now hardly one or two (unus aut alter) can be found who know what harmony is, though the word is always on their tongue." (De Fructu, p. 54-5.) Ascham, while lamenting in 1545 (Toxophilus, p. 29) 'that the laudable custom of

England to teach children their plain song and prick-song' is 'so decayed throughout all the realm as it is,' denounces the great practise of instrumental music by older students: "the minstrelsy of lutes, pipes, harps, and all other that standeth by such nice, fine, minikin fingering, (such as the most part of scholars whom I know use, if they use any,) is far more fit, for the womanishness of it, to dwell in the Court among ladies, than for any great thing in it which should help good and sad study, to abide in the University among scholars."

By 1574 our rich people, according to Harrison, attended properly to the education of their children. After speaking "of our women, whose beautie commonlie exceedeth the fairest of those of the maine," he says:

"This neuerthelesse I vtterlie mislike in the poorer sort of them, for the wealthier doo sildome offend herein: that being of themselues without competent wit, they are so carelesse in the education of their children (wherein their husbands also are to be blamed,) by means whereof verie manie of them neither fearing God, neither regarding either manners or obedience, do oftentimes come to confusion, which (if anie correction or discipline had beene vsed toward them in youth) might haue prooued good members of their common-wealth & countrie, by their good seruice and industrie."—Descr. of Britaine, Holinshed, i. 115, col. 2.

This is borne out by Ascham, who says that young men up to 17 were well looked after, but after that age were turned loose to get into all the mischief they liked:

"In deede, from seven to seventene, yong jentlemen commonlie be carefullie enough brought up: But from seventene to seven and twentie (the most dangerous tyme of all a mans life, and most slipperie to stay well in) they have commonlie the rein of all licens in their owne hand, and speciallie soch as do live in the Court. And that which is most to be merveled at, commonlie the wisest and also best men be found the fondest fathers in this behalfe. And if som good father wold seek some remedie herein, yet the mother (if the household of our Lady) had rather, yea, and will to, have her sonne cunnyng and bold, in making him to lyve trimlie when he is yong, than by learning and travell to be able to serve his Prince & his countrie, both wiselie in peace, and stoutlie in warre, whan he is old.

"The fault is in your selves, ye noble mens sonnes, and therfore ye deserve the greater blame, that commonlie the meaner mens children cum to be the wisest councellours, and greatest doers, in the weightie affaires of this realme."—Scholemaster, ed. Mayor, p. 39-40.

Note lastly, on this subject of private tuition, that Mulcaster in his Elementarie, 1582, complains greatly of rich people aping the custom of princes in having private tutors for their boys, and withdrawing them from public schools where the spirit of emulation against other boys would make them work. The course he recommends is, that rich people should send their sons, with their tutors, to the public schools, and so get the advantage of both kinds of tuition.

Girls' Home Education. The earliest notice of an English Governess that any friend has found for me is in "the 34th Letter of Osbert de Clare in Stephen's reign, A.D. 1135-54. He mentions what seems to be a Governess of his children, 'quædam matrona quæ liberos ejus (sc. militis, Herberti de Furcis) educare consueverat.' She appears to be treated as one of the family: e. g. they wait for her when she goes into a chapel to pray. I think a nurse would have been 'ancilla quæ liberos ejus nutriendos susceperat.'" Walter de Biblesworth was the tutor of the "lady Dionysia de Monchensi, a Kentish heiress, the daughter of William de Monchensi, baron of Swanescombe, and related, apparently, to the Valences, earls of Pembroke, and wrote his French Grammar, or rather Vocabulary 1, for her. She married Hugh de Vere, the second son of Robert, fifth earl of Oxford. (Wright.) Lady Jane Grey was taught by a tutor at home, as we have seen. Palsgrave was tutor to Henry VIII.'s "most dere and most entirely beloved suster, quene Mary, douagier of France," and no doubt wrote his Lesclaircissement de la Langue Francoise mainly for her, though also "desirous to do some humble service unto the nobilitie of this victorious realme, and universally unto all other estates of this my natyfe country." Giles Du Guez, or as Palsgrave says to Henry VIII., "the synguler clerke, maister Gyles Dewes, somtyme instructor to your noble grace in this selfe tong, at the especiall instaunce and request of dyvers of your highe estates and noble men, hath also for his partye written in this matter." His book is entitled "An Introductorie for to lerne to rede, to pronounce & to speke French trewly: compyled for the Right high, excellent, and most vertuous lady The Lady Mary of

3. English University Education. In early days Cambridge and Oxford must be looked on, I suppose, as mainly the great schools for boys, and the generality of scholars as poor men's children, like Chaucer's 'poore scolares tuo that dwelten in the soler-halle of Cantebregge,' his Clerk of Oxenford, and those students, gifts to whom are considered as one of the regular burdens on the husbandman, in "God speed the Plough." Mr Froude says, Hist. of England, I. 37:

"The universities were well filled, by the sons of yeomen chiefly. The cost of supporting them at the colleges was little, and wealthy men took a pride in helping forward any boys of promise (Latimer's Sermons, p. 64). It seems clear also, as the Reformation drew nearer, while the clergy were sinking lower and lower, a marked change for the better became perceptible in a portion at least of the laity."

But Grosseteste mentions a "noble" scholar at Oxford (Epist. 129), and Edward the Black Prince and Henry V. are said to have been students of Queen's College, Oxford. Wolsey himself was a College tutor at Oxford, and had among his pupils the sons of the Marquess of Dorset, who afterwards gave him his first preferment, the living of Lymington. (Chappell.)

<sup>2</sup> Was this in return for the raised rents that Ascham so bitterly complains of the new possessors of the monastic lands screwing out of their tenants, and thereby ruining the yeomen? He says to the Duke of Somerset on Nov. 21, 1547 (ed. Giles, i. p. 140-1), Qui auctores sunt tantæ miseriæ? . . Sunt illi qui hodie passim, in Anglia, prædia monasteriorum gravissimis annuis reditibus auxerunt. Hinc omnium rerum exauctum pretium; hi homines expilant totam rempublicam. Villici et coloni universi laborant, parcunt, corradunt, ut istis satisfaciant. . . Hinc tot familiæ dissipatæ, tot domus collapsæ . . Hinc, quod omnium miserrinum est, nobile illud decus et robur Angliæ, nomen, inquam, *Fomanorum Anglorum,* fractum et collisum est. . . Nam vita, quæ nunc vivitur a plubimis, non vita, sed miseria est.

When will these words cease to be true of our land? They should be burnt into all our hearts.

The legend runs that the first school at Oxford was founded by King Alfred<sup>1</sup>, and that Oxford was a place of study in the time of Edward the Confessor (1041-66). If one may quote a book now considered to be 'a monkish forgery and an exploded authority,' Ingulfus, who was Abbot of Croyland, in the Isle of Ely, under William the Conqueror, says of himself that he was educated first at Westminster, and then passed to Oxford, where he made proficiency in such books of Aristotle as were then accessible to students,<sup>2</sup> and in the first two books of Tully's Rhetoric.—Malden, On the Origin of Universities, 1835, p. 71.

In 1201 Oxford is called a University, and said to have contained 3000 scholars; in 1253 its first College (University) is founded. In 1244, Hen. III. grants it its first privileges as a corporate body, and confirms and extends them in 1245. In his reign, Wood says the number of scholars amounted to 30,000, a number no doubt greatly exaggerated.

In the reign of Stephen it is said that Vacarius, a Lombard by birth, who had studied the civil law at Bologna, came into England, and formed a school of law at Oxford<sup>3</sup>. . he remained in England in the reign of Henry II. On account of the difficulty and expense of obtaining copies of the original books of the Roman law, and the poverty of his English scholars, Vacarius [ab. 1149, A.D.] compiled an abridgment of the Digests and Codex, in which their most essential parts were preserved, with some difference of arrangement, and illustrated from other law-books. . . It bore on its title that it was "pauperibus presertim destinatus;" and hence the Oxford students of law obtained the name of Pauperists.—Malden, p. 72-3.

Roger Bacon (who died 1248) speaks of a young fellow who came <sup>1 &</sup>quot;He placed Æthelweard, his youngest son, who was fond of learning, together with the sons of his nobility, and of many persons of inferior rank, in schools which he had established with great wisdom and foresight, and provided with able masters. In these schools the youth were instructed in reading and writing both the Saxon and Latin languages, and in other liberal arts, before they arrived at sufficient strength of body for hunting, and other manly exercises becoming their rank." Henry, History of England, vol. ii. pp. 354-5 (quoted from Asser).

to him, aged 15, not having wherewithal to live, or finding proper masters: "because he was obliged to serve those who gave him necessaries, during two years found no one to teach him a word in the things he learned."—Opus Tertium, cap. xx. In 1214 the Commonalty of Oxford agreed to pay 52s. yearly for the use of poor scholars, and to give 100 of them a meal of bread, ale, and pottage, with one large dish of flesh or fish, every St Nicholas day.—Wood's An. i. 185. Wood's Annals (ed. Gutch, v. i. p. 619-20) also notes that in 1461 a.d. divers Scholars were forced to get a license under the Chancellor's hand and seal (according to the Stat. 12 Ric. II., a.d. 1388, Ib., p. 519) to beg: and Sir Thos. More says "then may wee yet, like poor Scholars of Oxford, go a begging with our baggs & wallets, & sing salve Regina at rich mens dores." On this point we may also compare the Statutes of Walter de Merton for his College at Oxford, a.d. 1274, ed. Halliwell, 1843, p. 19:

Cap. 13. De admissione scholarium.

Hoc etiam in eadem domo specialiter observari volo et decerno, ut circa eos, qui ad hujusmodi eleemosinæ participationem admittendi fuerint, diligenti solicitudine caveatur, ne qui præter castos, honestos, pacificos, humiles, indigentes, ad studium habiles ac proficere volentes, admittantur. Ad quorum agnitionem singulis, cum in dicta societate fuerint admittendi sustentationis gratia in eadem, ad annum unum utpote probationis causa primitus concedatur, ut sic demum si in dictis conditionibus laudabiliter se habuerint, in dictam congregationem admittantur.

Lodgings were let according to the joint valuation of 2 Magistri (scholars) and two townsmen (probi et legales homines de Villa). Wood, i. 255. An. 15 Hen. III. A.D. 1230-1.

In the beginning of the 15th century it had become the established rule that every scholar must be a member of some college or hall. The scholars who attended the public lectures of the university, without entering themselves at any college or hall, were called chamber dekyns, as in Paris they were called martinets; and frequent enactments were made against them.—Malden, p. 85, ref. to Wood's Annals, 1408, -13, -22, and 1512, &c.

'The Paston Letters' do not give us much information about studies or life at Oxford, but they do give us material for estimating the cost of a student there (ii. 1242); they show us the tutor reporting to a mother her son's progress in learning (ii. 130), and note the custom of a man, when made bachelor, giving a feast: "I was made bachelor.. on Friday was se'nnight (18 June, 1479), and I made my feast on the Monday after (21 June). I was promised venison against my feast, of my Lady Harcourt, and of another person too, but I was deceived of both; but my guests held them pleased with such meat as they had, blessed be God." The letter as to the costs is dated May 19, 1478.

"I marvel sore that you sent me no word of the letter which I sent to you by Master William Brown at Easter. I sent you word that time that I should send you mine expenses particularly; but as at this time the bearer hereof had a letter suddenly that he should come home, & therefore I could have no leisure to send them to you on that wise, & therefore I shall write to you in this letter the whole sum of my expenses since I was with you till Easter last past, and also the receipts, reckoning the twenty shillings that I had of you to Oxon wards, with the bishop's finding:— and yet I reckon none expenses since Easter; but as for them, they be not great."

On this account Fenn says,

"he (Wm. Paston) had expended £6 5s.  $5\frac{3}{4}d$ . from the time he left his mother to Easter last, which this year fell on the 22nd March, from which time it was now two months, & of the expenses 'since incurred' he says 'they be not great.' We may therefore conclude the former account was from the Michaelmas preceding, and a moderate one; if so, we may fairly estimate his university education at £100 a-year of our present money. I mean that £12 10s.  $11\frac{1}{2}d$ . would then procure as many necessaries and comforts as £100 will at this day."

What was the basis of Fenn's calculation he does not say. In 1468, the estimates for the Duke of Clarence's household expenses give these prices, among others:

		8.	d.		£	S.	d.
Wheat, a quarter		6	0	now, say	3	0	0
Ale, a gallon			$1\frac{1}{2}$	,,		1	0
Muttons ,, ,,		1	4	"	2	10	0*
Velys ",		2	6	,	4	0	0*
Porkés ",		2	0	"	5	0	0
Rice, a pound			3	"			5
Sugar ,,			6	2)			6
Holland, an ell (6d., 8d., 16d.)			10	"		1	3
Diapre "		4	6	"		3	0
Towelles ,,		1	8	"		1	6
Napkyns, a dozen, $12s$ ., £1, £2,		17	4	>>	2	0	0
	£2	7	$0\frac{1}{2}$	,	£31	17	8

This sum would make the things named nearly 14 times as dear now as in 1468, and raise Fenn's £100 to about £180; but no reliance can be placed on this estimate because we know nothing of the condition of the beves, muttons, veles, and porkys, then, as contrasted with ours. Possibly they were half the size and half the weight. Still, I have referred the question to Professor Thorold Rogers, author of the History of Prices 1250-1400 A.D., and he says:

"In the year to which you refer (1478) bread was very dear, 50 per cent. above the average. But on the whole, wheat prices in the 15th century were lower than in the 14th. Fenn's calculation, a little below the mark for wheat, is still less below it in most of the second necessaries of life. The multiple of wheat is about 9, that of meat at least 24, those of butter and cheese nearly as much. But that of clothing is not more than 6, that of linen from 4 to 5. Taking however one thing with another, 12 is a safe general multiplier."

This would make the cost of young Paston's university education £150 11s. 6d. a year.

Mr Whiston would raise Fenn's estimate of £100 to £200. He says that the rent of land in Kent in 1540 was a shilling or eighteen-pence an acre,—see Valor Ecclesiasticus,—and that the tithes and glebes of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester, which were worth about £480 a-year in 1542, are now worth £19,000.

The remaining Oxford letter in the Paston volumes seems to allude to the students bearing part of the expenses of the degree, or the feast at it, of a person related to royal family.

"I supposed, when that I sent my letter to my brother John, that the Queen's brother should have proceeded at Midsummer, and therefore I beseeched her to send me some money, for it will be some cost to me, but not much."

The first school at Cambridge is said to have been founded by Edward the Elder, the son of Alfred, but on no good authority. In 1223 the term University was applied to the place. The dates of the foundations of its Colleges, as given in its Calendar, are:

Lord Henry Brandon, son of the Duke of Suffolk, died of the sweating sickness then prevalent in the University, on the 16th July, 1551, while a student of Cambridge. His brother, Lord Charles Brandon, died on the same day. Their removal to Buckden was too late to save them (Ath. Cant., i. 105, 541). Of them Ascham says 'two noble Primeroses of Nobilitie, the yong Duke of Suffolke and Lord H. Matrevers were soch two examples to the Courte for learnyng, as our tyme may rather wishe, than look for agayne.'—Scholemaster, ed. Mayor, p. 62. Besides these two young noblemen, the first 104 pages of Cooper's Athenæ Cantabrigienses disclose only one other, Lord Derby's son, and the following names of sons of knights: 1

CAMBRIDGE MEN.

- 1443 Thomas Rotherham, Fellow of King's, son of Sir Thomas Rotherham, knight, and Alice his wife.
- 1494 Reginald Bray, high-steward of the university of Oxford, son of Sir Richard Bray, knight, and the lady Joan his second wife.
- 1 Other well-born men, in the Ath. Cant., then connected with the University, or supposed to be, were,
  - 1504 Sir Roger Ormston, knight, died. Had been High Steward of the
    - University.
      1504 Sir John Mordaunt, High Steward.

    - 1478 George Fitzhugh, 4th son of Henry lord Fitzhugh, admitted B.A. 1488 Robert Leyburn, born of a knightly family, Fellow of Pembroke-hall, and proctor.
    - 1457 John Argentine, of an ancient and knightly family, was elected from Eton
    - to King's.
      1504 Robert Fairfax, of an ancient family in Yorkshire, took the degree of Mus. Doc.
    - 1496 Christopher Baynbrigg, of a good family at Hilton, near Appleby, educated at and Provost of Queen's, Oxford, incorporated of Cambridge.
       1517 Sir Wm. Fyndern, knight, died, and was a benefactor to Clare Hall, in - which it is supposed he had been educated.
    - 1481 Robert Rede, of an ancient Northumbrian family, was sometime of Buckingham College, and the Fellow of King's-hall (?), and was autumn reader at Lincoln's Inn in 1481.
- ab. 1460 Marmaduke Coustable, son of Sir Robert Constable, knight, believed to have been educated at Cambridge.
  - So, Edward Stafford, heir of Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, is also believed to have been educated at Cambridge, because his father was a munificent patron of the University, constantly maintaining, or assisting to maintain, scholars therein. So, Thomas Howard, son of Sir John Howard, knight, and afterwards
  - Duke of Norfolk, who defeated the Scots at Flodden, is believed, &c.
  - 1484 John Skelton, the poet, probably of an ancient Cumberland family. 1520? Henry Howard, son of Lord Thomas Howard, ultimately Duke of Norfolk. Nothing is known as to the place of his education. If it were either of the English Universities, the presumption is in favour of Cambridge.
- The only tradesman's son mentioned is,
  - 1504 Sir Richard Empson, son of Peter Empson, a sieve-maker, High-Steward.

1502 Humphrey Fitzwilliam, of Pembroke Hall, Vice-Chancellor, appears to have been the son of Sir Richard Fitzwilliam of Ecclesfield, and Elizabeth his wife.

ab. 1468 Richard Redman, son of Sir Richard Redman and Elizabeth [Aldburgh] his wife; made Bp. of St Asaph.

1400 The Carry of Gir Tale Govern

1492 Thomas Savage, son of Sir John Savage, knight, Bp. of Rochester. Was LL.D. ? educated at Cambridge.

1485 James Stanley, younger son of Thomas Earl of Derby, educated at both universities, graduated at Cambridge, and became prebendary of Holywell in 1485, Bp. of Ely in 1506.

1497 William Coningsby, son of Sir Humphrey Coningsby, elected from Eton to King's.

1507 Thomas Elyot, son of Sir Richard Elyot, made M.A.

ab. 1520 George Blagge, son of Sir Robert Blagge.

Queen Elizabeth's favourite, Lord Essex, was at Trinity College, Cambridge. See his letter of May 13, from there, in Ellis, series II. v. iii. p. 73; the furniture of his room, and his expenses, in the note p. 73-4; and his Tutor's letter asking for new clothes for 'my Lord,' or else 'he shall not onely be thrid bare, but ragged.'

Archbp. Whitgift<sup>1</sup>, when B.D. at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, A.D. 1563, "bestowed some of his time and abilities in the instruction of ingenious youth, sent to the college for education, in good learning and Christian manners. And among such his pupils, were two noblemen's sons, viz. the Lord Herbert, son and heir to the Earl of Pembroke; and John, son and heir to the Lord North." (Life, by Strype, ed. 1822, vol. i. p. 14.)

While Whitgift was Master of Trinity, Strype says he had bred up under him not only several Bishops, but also "the Earls of Worcester and Cumberland, the Lord Zouch, the Lord Dunboy of Ireland, Sir Nicolas and Sir Francis Bacon. To which I may add one more, namely, the son of Sir Nicolas White, Master of the Rolls in Ireland, who married a Devereux." (Life, i. 157, ed. 1822.)

A search through the whole of the first volume of Wood's Athenæ Oxonienses, comprising a period of nearly 100 years, has resulted in the following meagre list of men of noble or knightly birth who distinguished themselves. There are besides many men of "genteel ab. 1483 John Colet, the eldest son of Sir Henry Colet, twice lord mayor of London.. was educated in grammaticals, partly in London or Westminster.

1478 Edmund Dudley, son of John Dudley, Esq., 2nd son of John Lord Dudley, of Dudley Castle in Staffordshire.

The number of friars and monks at the Universities before the Reformation, and especially at Oxford, must have been large. Tanner says,

In our universities . . . were taught divinity and canon law (then, t. Hen. III., much in vogue), and the friers resorting thither in great numbers and applying themselves closely to their studies, outdid the monks in all fashionable knowledge. But the monks quickly perceived it, and went also to the universities and studied hard, that they might not be run down by the friers. And as the friers got houses in the universities, the monks also got colleges founded and endowed there 1 for the education of their novices, where they were for some years instructed in grammar, philosophy, and school divinity, and then returning home, improved their knowledge by their private studies, to the service of God and the credit of their respective societies. So that a little before the Reformation, the greatest part of the proceeders in divinity at Oxford were monks and Regular canons.

By Harrison's time, A.D. 1577<sup>2</sup>, rich men's sons had not only pressed into the Universities, but were scrooging poor men's sons out of the endowments meant only for the poor, learning the lessons that Mr Whiston so well shows our Cathedral dignitaries have carried out with the stipends of their choristers, boys and men. "Les gros poissons mangent les menus. Pro. Poore men are (easily) supplanted by the rich, the weake by the strong, the meane by the mighty." (Cotgrave, u. manger.) The law of "natural selection" prevails. Who shall say nay in a Christian land professing the principles of the great "Inventor of Philanthropy"? Whitgift for one, see his Life of Strype, Bk. I. chap. xiii. p. 148-50, ed. 1822. In 1589 an act 31 Eliz. c. 6, was passed to endeavour to prevent the abuse, but, like modern Election-bribery Acts with their abuse, did not do it.

<sup>1</sup> It was customary then at Oxford for the Religious to have schools that bore the name of their respective orders; as the Augustine, Benedictine, Carmelite, and Franciscan schools; and there were schools also appropriated to the benefit of particular Religious houses, as the Dorchester and Eynsham schools, &c. The monks of Gloucester had Gloucester convent, and the novices of Pershore an apartment in the same house. So likewise the young monks of Canterbury, Westminster, Durham, St Albans, &c. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq., p. 214. So also Leland saith, Itin. vol. vi. p. 28, that at Stamford the names of Peterborough Hall, Semplingham, and Vauldey yet remain, as places whither the Religious of those houses sent their scholars to study. FOREWORDS. XXXVII

"at this present, of one sort & other, there are about three thousand students nourished in them both (as by a late serveie it manifestlie appeared). They [the Colleges at our Universities] were created by their founders at the first, onelie for pore men's sons, whose parents were not able to bring them up unto learning: but now they have the least benefit of them, by reason the rich do so incroch upon them. And so farre hath this inconvenence spread itself, that it is in my time an hard matter for a pore man's child to come by a fellowship (though he be neuer so good a scholer & worthie of that roome.) Such packing also is used at elections, that not he which best deserveth, but he that hath most friends, though he be the worst scholer, is alwaies surest to speed; which will turne in the end to the overthrow of learning. That some gentlemen also, whose friends have been in times past benefactors to certeine of those houses, doe intrude into the disposition of their estates, without all respect of order or statutes devised by the founders, onelie thereby to place whome they think good (and not without some hope of gaine) the case is too too evident, and their attempt would soone take place, if their superiors did not provide to bridle their indevors. In some grammar schooles likewise, which send scholers to these universities, it is lamentable to see what briberie is used; for yer the scholer can be preferred, such briberye is made, that pore men's children are commonly shut out, and the richer sort received (who in times past thought it dishonour to live as it were upon almes) and yet being placed, most of them studie little other than histories, tables, dice & trifles, as men that make not the living by their studie the end of their purposes; which is a lamentable bearing. Besides this, being for the most part either gentlemen, or rich men's sonnes, they oft bring the universities into much slander.<sup>2</sup> For

standing upon their reputation and libertie, they ruffle and roist it out, exceeding in apparell, and hanting riotous companie (which draweth them from their bookes into an other trade). And for excuse, when they are charged with breach of all good order, thinke it sufficient to saie, that they be gentlemen, which grieveth manie not a little. But to proceed with the rest.

"Everie one of these colleges have in like manner their professors or readers of the tongs and severall sciences, as they call them, which dailie trade up the youth there abiding privatlie in their halles, to the end they may be able afterwards (when their turne commeth about, which is after twelve termes) to show themselves abroad, by going from thence into the common schooles and publike disputations (as it were In aream) there to trie their skilles, and declare how they have profited since their coming thither.

"Moreover in the publike schooles of both the universities, there are found at the prince's charge (and that verie largelie) five professors & readers, that is to saie, of divinitie, of the civill law, physicke, the Hebrew and the Greek tongues. And for the other lectures, as of philosophie, logike, rhetorike and the quadriuials, although the latter (I mean, arithmetike, musike, geometrie and astronomie, and with them all skill in the perspectives are now smallie regarded in either of them) the universities themselves do allowe competent stipends to such as reade the same, whereby they are sufficiently provided for, touching the maintenance of their estates, and no less encouraged to be diligent in their functions."

On the introduction of the study of Greek into the Universities, Dr S. Knight says in his Life of Colet:

"As for Oxford, its own History and Antiquities sufficiently confess, that nothing was known there but Latin, and that in the most pedimenta to their course of study: (1.) that so few old men will stop up to encourage study by their example; (2.) " quod illi fere omnes qui huc Cantabrigiam confluunt, pueri sunt, divitumque filii, et hi etiam qui nunquam inducunt animum suum, ut abundanti aliqua perfectaque eruditione perpoliantur, sed ut ad alia reipublicæ munera obeunda levi aliqua et inchoata cognitione paratiores efficiantur. Et hic singularis quædam injuria bifariam academiæ intentata est; vel quia hoc modo omnis expletæ absolutæque doctrinæ spes longe ante messem, in ipsa quasi herbescenti viriditate, præciditur; vel quia omnis pauperum inopumque expectatio, quorum ætates omnes in literarum studio conteruntur, ab his fucis eorum sedes occupantibus, exclusa illusaque præripitur. Ingenium, enim, doctrina, inopia judicium, nil quicquam domi valent, ubi gratia, favor, magnatum literæ, et aliæ persimiles extraordinariæ illegitimæque rationes vim foris adferunt. Hinc quoque illud accedit incommodum, quod quidam prudentes viri nimis ægre ferunt partem aliquam regiæ pecuniæ in collegiorum socios inpartiri; quasi illi non maxime indigeant, aut quasi ulla spes perfectæ cruditionis in ullis aliis residere potest, quam in his, qui in perpetuo literarum studio perpetuum vitæ suæ tabernaculum collocarunt. Ed. Giles, i. p. 69-70. See also p. 121-2.

depraved Style of the School-men. Cornelius Vitellius, an Italian, was the first who taught Greek in that University 1; and from him the famous Grocyne learned the first Elements thereof.

"In Cambridge, Erasmus was the first who taught the Greek Grammar. And so very low was the State of Learning in that University, that (as he tells a Friend) about the Year 1485, the Beginning of Hen. VII. Reign, there was nothing taught in that publick Seminary besides Alexander's Parva Logicalia, (as they called them) the old Axioms of Aristotle, and the Questions of John Scotus, till in Process of time good Letters were brought in, and some Knowledge of the Mathematicks; as also Aristotle in a new Dress, and some Skill in the Greek Tongue; and, by Degrees, a Multitude of Authors, whose Names before had not been heard of.<sup>2</sup>

"It is certain that even Erasmus himself did little understand Greek, when he came first into England, in 1497 (13 Hen. VII.), and that our Countryman Linacer taught it him, being just returned from Italy with great Skill in that Language: Which Linacer and William Grocyne were the two only Tutors that were able to teach it." Saml. Knight, Life of Dr John Colet, pp. 17, 18.

The age at which boys went up to the University seems to have varied greatly. When Oxford students were forbidden to play marbles they could not have been very old. But in "The Mirror of the Periods of Man's Life" (lab. 1430 a.d.), in the Society's Hymns to the Virgin and Christ of this year, we find the going-up age put at twenty.

Quod resoun, in age of .xx. 3eer, Goo to oxenford, or lerne lawe<sup>3</sup>.

This is confirmed by young Paston's being at Eton at nineteen (see below, p. lvi). In 1612, Brinsley (Grammar Schoole, p. 307) puts the age at fifteen, and says,

"such onely should be sent to the Vniuersities, who proue most ingenuous and towardly, and who, in a loue of learning, will begin to

4. Foreign University Education. That some of our nobles sent their sons to be educated in the French universities (whence they sometimes imported foreign vices into England 1) is witnessed by some verses in a Latin Poem "in MS. Digby, No. 4 (Bodleian Library) of the end of the 13th or beginning of the 14th century," printed by Mr Thomas Wright in his Anecdota Literaria, p. 38.

Filii nobilium, dum sunt juniores, Mittuntur in Franciam fieri doctores; Quos prece vel pretio domant corruptores, Sic prætaxatos referunt artaxata mores.

An English nation or set of students of the Faculty of Arts at Paris existed in 1169; after 1430 the name was changed to the German nation. Besides the students from the French provinces subject to the English, as Poictou, Guienne, &c., it included the English, Scottish, Irish, Poles, Germans, &c.—Encyc. Brit. John of Salisbury (born 1110) says that he was twelve years studying at Paris on his own account. Thomas a Becket, as a young man, studied at Paris. Giraldus Cambrensis (born 1147) went to Paris for education; so did Alexander Neckham (died 1227). Henry says,

"The English, in particular, were so numerous, that they occupied several schools or colleges; and made so distinguished a figure by their genius and learning, as well as by their generous manner of living, that they attracted the notice of all strangers. This appears from the following verses, describing the behaviour of a stranger on

Et quia non metuunt animæ discrimen, Principes in habitum verterunt hoc crimen, Varium viro turpiter jungit novus hymen, Exagitata procul non intrat fœmina limen. his first arrival in Paris, composed by Negel Wircker, an English student there, a.d. 1170:—

The stranger dress'd, the city first surveys,
A church he enters, to his God he prays.

Next to the schools he hastens, each he views,
With care examines, anxious which to chuse.
The English most attract his prying eyes,
Their manners, words, and looks, pronounce them wise.
Theirs is the open hand, the bounteous mind;
Theirs solid sense, with sparkling wit combin'd.
Their graver studies jovial banquets crown,
Their rankling cares in flowing bowls they drown.

Montpelier was another University whither Englishmen resorted, and is to be remembered by us if only for the memory of Andrew Borde, M.D., some bits of whose quaintness are in the notes to Russell in the present volume.

Padua is to be noted for Pace's sake. He is supposed to have been born in 1482.

Later, the custom of sending young noblemen and gentlemen to Italy—to travel, not to take a degree—was introduced, and Ascham's condemnation of it, when no tutor accompanied the youths, is too well known to need quoting. The Italians' saying, Inglese Italianato è un diabolo incarnato, sums it up.<sup>2</sup>

5. Monastic and Cathedral Schools. Herbert Losing, Bp. of Thetford, afterwards Norwich, between 1091 and 1119, in his 37th Letter restores his schools at Thetford to Dean Bund, and directs that no other schools be opened there.

Tanner (Not. Mon. p. xx. ed. Nasmith), when mentioning "the use and advantage of these Religious houses"—under which term Pixus et ablutus tandem progressus in urbem, Intrat in ecclesiam, vota precesque facit. Inde scholas adiens, secum deliberat, utrum Expediat potius illa vel ista schola. Et quia subtiles sensu considerat Anglos, Pluribus ex causis se sociavit iis. Moribus egregii, verbo vultuque venusti, Ingenio pollent, consilioque vigent. Dona pluunt populis, et detestantur avaros, Fercula multiplicant, et sine lege bibunt.

A. Wood, Antiq. Oxon., p. 55, in Henry's Hist. of Eng., vol. iii. p. 440-1.

That Colet used his travels abroad, A.D. 1493-7, for a different purpose, see his Life by Dr Knight, pp. 23-4.

"are comprehended, cathedral and collegiate churches, abbies, priories, colleges, hospitals, preceptories (Knights Templars' houses), and frieries"—says,

"Secondly, They were schools of learning & education; for every convent had one person or more appointed for this purpose; and all the neighbours that desired it, might have their children taught grammar and church musick without any expence to them.

In the nunneries also young women were taught to work, and to read English, and sometimes Latin also. So that not only the lower rank of people, who could not pay for their learning, but most of the noblemen and gentlemen's daughters were educated in those places."<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Fuller, book vi. p. 297. Collier, vol. ii. p. 165. Stillingfleet's Orig. Britan. p. 206. Bishop Lloyd of Church Government, p. 160. This was provided for as early as A.D. 747, by the seventh canon of council of Clovesho, as Wilkins's Councils, vol. i. p. 95. See also the notes upon that canon, in Johnson's Collection of canons, &c. In Tavistock abbey there was a Saxon school, as Willis, i. 171. Tanner. (Charlemagne in his Capitularies ordained that each Monastery should maintain a School, where should be taught 'la grammaire, le calcule, et la musique.' See Démogeot's Histoire de la Littérature Française, p. 44, ed. Hachette. R. Whiston.) Henry says "these teachers of the cathedral schools were called The scholastics of the diocess; and all the youth in it who were designed for the church, were intitled to the benefit of their instructions.* Thus, for example, William de Monte, who had been a professor at Paris, and taught theology with so much reputation in the reign of Henry II., at Lincoln, was the scholastic of that cathedral. By the eighteenth canon of the third general council of Lateran, A.D. 1179, it was decreed, That such scholastics should be settled in all cathedrals, with sufficient revenues for their support; and that they should have authority to superintend all the schoolmasters of the diocess, and grant them licences, without which none should presume to teach. The laborious authors of the literary history of France have collected a very distinct account of the scholastics who presided in the principal cathedralschools of that kingdom in the twelfth century, among whom we meet with many of the most illustrious names for learning of that age. . . . . The sciences that were taught in these cathedral schools were such as were most necessary to qualify their pupils for performing the duties of the sacerdotal office, as Grammar, Rhetoric, Logic, Theology, and Church-Music."—Ibid. p. 442.

<sup>2</sup> Fuller and Collier, as before; Bishop Burnet (Reform. vol. i. p. . .) saith so of Godstow. Archbishop Greenfield ordered that young gentlewomen who came to the nunneries either for piety or breeding, should wear white veils, to distinguish them from the professed, who wore black ones, 11 Kal. Jul. anno pontif. 6. M. Hutton. ex registr. ejus, p. 207. In the accounts of the cellaress of Carhow, near Norwich, there is an account of what was received "pro prehendationibus," or the board of young ladies and their servants for education "rec. de domina Margeria Wederly prehendinat, ibidem xi. septimanas xiii s. iv d. . . pro mensa unius famulæ dictæ Margeriæ per iii. septimanas viii d. per sept." &c. Tanner.

At these monastic schools, I suppose, were educated mainly the boys whom the monks hoped would become monks, cleric or secular; mostly the poor, the Plowman's brother who was to be the Parson, not often the ploughman himself. sit by kings, nay, beard them to their face. Thomas a Becket, himself the son of poor parents, was sent to be brought up in the "religious house of the Canons of Merton."

In 1392 the writer of Piers Plowman's Crede sketches the then state of things thus:

Now mot ich soutere hys sone 'seten to schole,
And ich a beggeres brol 'on the book lerne,
And worth to a writere 'and with a lorde dwelle,
Other falsly to a frere 'the fend for to serven;

Knyghtes crouketh hem to 'and cruccheth ful lowe;
And his syre a soutere 'y-suled in grees,
His teeth with toylyng of lether 'tatered as a sawe.

Now every cobbler's son and beggar's brat turns writer, then Bishop, and lords' sons crouch to him, a cobbler's son!

Here I might stop the quotation, but I go on, for justice has never yet been done <sup>3</sup> to this noble Crede and William's Vision as pictures of the life of their times,—chiefly from the profound ignorance of us English of our own language; partly from the grace, the freshness, and the brilliance of Chaucer's easier and inimitable verse:—

There is one side of the picture, the workman's son turned monk, and clerk to a lord. Let us turn to the other side, the ploughman's son who didn't turn monk, whose head was 'shet' in the straw, who delved and ditched, and dunged the earth, eat bread of corn and bran, worts fleshless (vegetables, but no meat), drank water, and went miserably (Crede, l. 1565-71). What education did he get? To whom could he be apprenticed? What was his chance in life? Let the Statute-Book answer:—

A.D. 1388. 12° Rich. II., Cap. v.

Item. It is ordained & assented, That he or she which used to labour at the Plough and Cart, or other Labour or Service of Husbandry till they be of the Age of Twelve Years, that from thenceforth they shall abide at the same Labour, without being put to any Mystery or Handieraft; and if any Covenant or Bond of Apprentie (so) be from henceforth made to the Contrary, the same shall be holden for none.

A.D. 1405-6. 7º Henri IV., Cap. xvii.

. . . . And Whereas in the Statutes made at Canterbury among other Articles it is contained That he or she that useth to labour at the Plough or Cart, or other Labour or Service of Husbandry, till he be of the age of Twelve Years, that from the same time forth he shall abide at the same Labour, without being put to any Mystery or Handicraft; and if any Covenant or Bond be made from that time forth to the contrary, it shall be holden for none: Notwithstanding which Article, and the good Statutes afore made through all parts of the Realm, the Infants born within the Towns and Seignories of Upland, whose Fathers & Mothers have no Land nor Rent nor other Living, but only their Service or Mystery, be put by their said Fathers and Mothers and other their Friends to serve, and bound Apprentices, to divers Crafts within the Cities and Boroughs of the said Realm sometime at the Age of Twelve Years, sometime within the said Age, and that for the Pride of Clothing and other evil Customs that Servants do use in the same; so that there is so great Scarcity of Labourers and other Servants of Husbandry that the Gentlemen and other People of the Realm be greatly impoverished for the Cause aforesaid: Our Sovereign Lord the King considering the said Mischief, and willing thereupon to provide Remedy, by the advice & assent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and at the request of the said Commons, hath ordained and stablished, That no Man nor Woman, of what Estate or Condition they be, shall put their Son or Daughter, of whatsoever Age he or she be, to Serve as Apprentice to no Craft nor other Labour within any City or Borough in the Realm, except he have Land or Rent to the Value of Twenty Shillings by the Year at the least, but they shall be put to other labours as their Estates doth require, upon Pain of one Year's Imprisonment, and to make Fine and Ransom at the King's Will. And if any Covenant be made of any such Infant, of what Estate that he be, to the contrary, it shall be holden for none. Provided Always, that every Man and Woman, of what Estate or Condition that he be, shall be free to set their Son or Daughter to take Learning at any manner School that pleaseth them within the Realm.

FOREWORDS.

A most gracious saving clause truly, for those children who were used to labour at the plough and cart till they were twelve years old. Let us hope that some got the benefit of it!

These Acts I came across when hunting for the Statutes referred to by the Boke of Curtasye as fixing the hire of horses for carriage at fourpence a piece, and they caused me some surprise. They made me wonder less at the energy with which some people now are striving to erect "barriers against democracy" to prevent the return match for the old game coming off.-However improving, and however justly retributive, future legislation for the rich by the poor in the spirit of past legislation for the poor by the rich might be, it could hardly be considered pleasant, and is surely worth putting up the true barrier against, one of education in each poor man's mind. (He who americanizes us thus far will be the greatest benefactor England has had for some ages.)—These Statutes also made me think how the old spirit still lingers in England, how a friend of my own was curate in a Surrey village where the kindhearted squire would allow none of the R's but Reading to be taught in his school; how another clergyman lately reported his Farmers' meeting on the school question: Reading and Writing might be taught, but Arithmetic not; the boys would be getting to know too

&quot;Be it also enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no manner of Artificer or Craftsman of any Handicraft or Occupation, Husbandman, Apprentice, Labourer, Servant at Husbandry, Journeyman or Servant of Artificer, Mariners, Fishermen, Watermen or any Serving man, shall from the said feast of the Nativity of St John Baptist play at the Tables, Tennis, Dice, Cards, Bowls, Clash, Coyting, Logating, or any other unlawful Game out of Christmas, under the Pain of xx s. to be forfeit for every Time; (2) and in Christmas to play at any of the said Games in their Master's Houses, or in their Master's Presence; (3) and also that no manner of persons shall at any time play at any Bowl or Bowls in open places out of his Garden or Orchard, upon the Pain for every Time so offending to forfeit vis. viiii d." much about wages, and that would be troublesome; how, lastly, our gangs of children working on our Eastern-counties farms, and our bird-keeping boys of the whole South, can almost match the children of the agricultural labourer of 1388.

The early practice of the Freemasons, and other crafts, refusing to let any member take a bondsman's son as an apprentice, was founded on the reasonable apprehension that his lord would or might afterwards claim the lad, make him disclose the trade-secrets, and carry on his art for the lord's benefit. The fourth of the 'Fyftene artyculus or fyftene poyntus' of the Freemasons, printed by Mr Halliwell (p. 16), is on this subject.

Articulus quartus (MS. Bibl. Reg. 17 A, Art. I., fol. 3, &c.)

The fourthe artycul thys moste be, That the mayster hym wel be-se That he no bondemon prentys make, Ny for no covetyse do hym take; For the lord that he ys bond to, May fache the prentes whersever he go. 3ef yn the logge he were y-take, Muche desese hyt myath ther make, And suche case hyt my3th befalle That hyt myzth greve summe or alle: For alle the masonus that ben there Wol stonde togedur hol y-fere. 3ef suche won yn that craft schulde dwelle, Of dyvers desesys 3e my3th telle. By olde tyme, wryten y fynde That the prentes schulde be of gentyl kynde; And so sumtyme grete lordys blod Toke thys gemetry that ys ful good.

I should like to see the evidence of a lord's son having become a working mason, and dwelling seven years with his master 'hys craft to lurne.'

Cathedral Schools. About the pre-Reformation Schools I can find only the extract from Tanner given above, p. xlii. On the post-Reformation Schools I refer readers to Mr Whiston's Cathedral Trusts, 1850. He says:

"The Cathedrals of England are of two kinds, those of the old and those of the new foundation: of the latter, Canterbury (the old archiepiscopal see) and Carlisle, Durham, Ely, Norwich, Rochester, and Worcester, old episcopal sees, were A.D. 1541-2 refounded, or rather reformed, by Henry VIII. . . Besides these, he created five other cathedral churches or colleges, in connexion with the five new episcopal sees of Bristol, Chester, Gloucester, Oxford, and Peterborough. He further created the see of Westminster, which was . . subsequently (A.D. 1560) converted to a deanery collegiate by Queen Elizabeth. . . (p. 6). The preamble of the Act 31 Henry VIII. c. 9, for founding the new cathedrals, preserved in Henry's own handwriting, recites that they were established 'To the intente that Gods worde myght the better be sett forthe, cyldren broght up in lernynge, clerces nuryshyd in the universities, olde servantes decayed, to have lyfing, allmes housys for pour folke to be sustayned in, Reders of grece, ebrew, and latyne to have good stypende, dayly almes to be mynistrate, mending of hyght wayes, and exhybision for mynisters of the chyrche."

"A general idea of the scope and nature of the cathedral establishments, as originally planned and settled by Henry VIII., may be formed from the first chapter of the old statutes of Canterbury, which is almost identical with the corresponding chapter of the statutes of all the other cathedrals of the new foundation. It is as follows:

"On 1 the entire number of those who have their sustentation (qui sustentantur) in the cathedral and metropolitical church of Canterbury:

- "First of all we ordain and direct that there be for ever in our aforesaid church, one dean, twelve canons, six preachers, twelve minor canons, one deacon, one subdeacon, twelve lay-clerks, one master of the choristers, ten choristers, two teachers of the boys in grammar, one of whom is to be the head master, the other, second master, fifty boys to be instructed in grammar, twelve poor men to be maintained at the costs and charges of the said church, two vergers, two subsacrists (i.e., sextons), four servants in the church to ring the bells, and arrange all the rest, two porters, who shall also be barber-tonsors, one caterer, one butler, and one under butler, one cook, and one under-cook, who, indeed, in the number prescribed, are to serve in our church every one of them in his own order, according to our statutes and ordinances."
- <sup>1</sup> Translated from the Latin copy in the British Museum, MS. Harl. 1197, art. 15, folio 319 b.
  - <sup>2</sup> Duodecim pauperes de sumptibus dictæ Ecclesiæ alendi.
- <sup>3</sup> Duo unus Pincernæ, et unus subpincerna, duo unus cociquus, et unus subcoquus. Sie in MS.

In the Durham statutes, as settled in the first year of Philip and Mary, the corresponding chapter is as follows:

On 1 the total number of those who have their sustentation (qui sustentantur) in the cathedral church of Durham.

"We direct and ordain that there be for ever in the said church, one dean, twelve prebendaries, twelve minor canons, one deacon, one sub-deacon, ten clerks, (who may be either clerks or laymen,) one master of the choristers, ten choristers, two teachers of the boys in grammar, eighteen boys to be instructed in grammar, eight poor men to be maintained at the costs of the said church, two subsacrists, two vergers, two porters, one of whom shall also be barber-tonsor, one butler, one under-butler, one cook, and one under-cook."

"The monastic or collegiate character of the bodies thus constituted, is indicated by the names and offices of the inferior ministers above specified, who were intended to form a part of the establishment of the Common Hall, in which most of the subordinate members, including the boys to be instructed in grammar, were to take their meals. There was also another point in which the cathedrals were meant to resemble and supply the place of the old religious houses, i. e., in the maintenance of a certain number of students at the universities."

Rt. Whiston, Cathedral Trusts and their Fulfilment, p. 2—4.

"The nature of these schools, and the desire to perpetuate and improve them, may be inferred from 'certein articles noted for the reformation of the cathedral churche of Excestr', submitted by the commissioners of Henry VIII., unto the correction of the Kynges Majestie, as follows:

The tenth Article submitted. "That ther may be in the said Cathedral churche a free songe scole, the scolemaster to have yerly of the said pastor and prechars xx. marks for his wages, and his howss free, to teache xl. children frely, to rede, to write, synge and playe upon instruments of musike, also to teache ther A. And every of the said xl. children to have wekely xiid. for ther meat and drink, and yerly vis viiid. for a gowne; they to be bound dayly to syng and rede within the said Cathedral churche such divine service as it may please the Kynges Majestie to allowe; the said childre to be at comons alltogether, with three prests hereaffter to be spoke off, to see them well ordered at the meat and to reforme their manners."

Article the eleventh, submitted. "That ther may be a fre grammer scole within the same Cathedral churche, the scole-master to have xx<sup>li</sup>. by yere and his howss fre, the ussher x<sup>li</sup>. & his howss

"Now £300 at that time was worth about £5,000 now, so that these schools were designed for the lower ranks of society, and open to the sons of the poorer gentry.

"An interesting illustration of this [and of the class-feeling in education at this time] is supplied," says Mr Whiston, "by the narrative of what took place—

"when the Cathedral Church of Canterbury was altered from menks to secular men of the clergy, viz.: prebendaries or canons, petty-canons, choristers and scholars. At this erection were present, Thomas Cranmer, archbishop, with divers other commissioners. And nominating and electing such convenient and fit persons as should serve for the furniture of the said Cathedral church according to the new foundation, it came to pass that, when they should elect the children of the Grammar school, there were of the commissioners more than one or two who would have none admitted but sons or younger brethren of gentlemen. As for other, husbandmen's children, they were more meet, they said, for the plough, and to be artificers, than to occupy the place of the learned sort; so that they wished none else to be put to school, but only gentlemen's children. Whereunto the most reverend father, the Archbishop, being of a contrary mind, said, 'That he thought it not indifferent so to order the matter; for,' said he, 'poor men's children are many times endued with more singular gifts of nature, which are also the gifts of God, as, with eloquence, memory, apt pronunciation, sobriety, and such like; and also commonly more apt to apply their study, than is the gentleman's son, delicately educated.' Hereunto it was on the other part replied, 'that it was meet for the ploughman's son to go to plough, and the artificer's son to apply the trade of his parent's vocation; and the gentleman's children are meet to have the knowledge of government and rule in the commonwealth. For we have,' said they, 'as much need of ploughmen as any other state; and all sorts of men may not go to school.' 'I grant,' replied the Archbishop, 'much of your meaning herein as needful in a commonwealth; but yet utterly to exclude the ploughman's son and the poor man's son from the benefits of learning, as though they were unworthy to have the gifts of the Holy Ghost bestowed upon them as well as upon others, is as much to say, as that Almighty God should not be at liberty to bestow his great gifts of grace upon any person, nor nowhere else but as we and other men shall appoint them to be employed, according to our fancy, and not according to his most goodly will and pleasure, who giveth his gifts both of learning, and other perfections in all sciences, unto all kinds and states of people indifferently. Even so doth he many times withdraw from them and their posterity again those beneficial gifts, if they be not thankful. If we should shut up into a strait corner the bountiful grace of the Holy Ghost, and thereupon attempt to build our fancies, we should make as perfect a work thereof as those that took upon them to build the Tower of Babel; for God would so provide that the offspring of our first-born children should peradventure become most unapt to learn, and very dolts, as I myself have seen no small number of them very dull and without all manner of capacity. And to say the truth, I take it, that none of us all here, being gentlemen born (as I think), but had our beginning that way from a low and base parentage; and through the benefit of learning, and other civil knowledge, for the most part all gentlemen ascend to their estate.' Then it was again answered, that the most part of the nobility came up by feats of arms and martial acts. 'As though,' said the Archbishop, 'that the noble captain was always unfurnished of good learning and knowledge to persuade and dissuade his army rhetorically; who rather that way is brought unto authority than else his manly looks. To conclude; the poor man's son by pains-taking will for the most part be learned when the gentleman's son will not take the pains to get it. And we are taught by the Scriptures that Almighty God raiseth up from the dunghill, and setteth him in high authority. And whensoever it pleaseth him, of his divine providence, he deposeth princes unto a right humble and poor estate. Wherefore, if the gentleman's son be apt to learning, let him be admitted; if not apt, let the poor man's child that is apt enter his room.' With words to the like effect."

R. Whiston, Cathedral Trusts, p. 12—14.

The scandalous way in which the choristers and poor boys were done out of their proportion of the endowments by the Cathedral clergy, is to be seen in Mr Whiston's little book.

6. Endowed Grammar Schools. These were mainly founded for citizens' and townsmen's children. Winchester (founded 1373) was probably the only one that did anything before 1450 for the education of our gentry. Eton was not founded till 1440. About 1174 A.D., Fitzstephen speaks of the London schools and scholars thus:—I use Pegge's translation, 1772, to which Mr Chappell referred me,—

"The three principal churches in London<sup>2</sup> are privileged by grant and ancient usage with schools, and they are all very flourishing. Often indeed through the favour and countenance of persons eminent in philosophy, more schools are permitted. On festivals, at those churches where the Feast of the Patron Saint is solemnized, the masters convene their scholars. The youth, on that occasion, dispute, some in the demonstrative way, and some logically. These produce their enthymemes, and those the more perfect syllogisms. Some, the better to shew their parts, are exercised in disputation, contending with one another, whilst others are put upon establishing some truth by way of illustration. Some sophists endeavour to apply, on feigned topics, a vast heap and flow of words, others to impose upon you with false conclusions. As to the orators, some with their rhetorical harangues employ all the powers of persuasion, taking care to observe the precepts of art, and to omit nothing opposite to the subject. The boys of different schools wrangle with one another in verse; contending about the principles of Grammar, or the rules of the Perfect Tenses and Supines. Others there are, who in Epigrams, or other compositions in numbers, use all that low ribaldry we read of in the Ancients; attacking their school-masters, but without mentioning names, with the old Fescennine licentiousness, and discharging their scoffs and sarcasms against them; touching the foibles of their school-fellows, or perhaps of greater personages, with true Socratic wit, or biting them more keenly with a Theonine tooth: The audience, fully disposed to laugh,

Of the sports of the boys, Fitzstephen gives a long description. On Shrove-Tuesday, each boy brought his fighting cock to his master, and they had a cock-fight all morning in the school-room.¹ After dinner, football in the fields of the suburbs, probably Smithfield. Every Sunday in Lent they had a sham-fight, some on horseback, some on foot, the King and his Court often looking on. At Easter they played at the Water-Quintain, charging a target, which if they missed, souse they went into the water. 'On holidays in summer the pastime of the youths is to exercise themselves in archery, in running, leaping, wrestling, casting of stones, and flinging to certain distances, and lastly with bucklers.' At moonrise the maidens danced. In the winter holidays, the boys saw boar-fights, hog-fights, bull and bear-baiting, and when ice came they slid, and skated on the legbones of some animal, punting themselves along with an iron-shod pole, and charging one another. A set of merry scenes indeed.

"In general, we are assured by the most learned man of the thirteenth century, Roger Bacon, that there never had been so great an appearance of learning, and so general an application to study, in so many different faculties, as in his time, when schools were erected in every city, town, burgh, and castle." (Henry's Hist. of England, vol. iv. p. 472-3.)

In the twenty-fifth year of Henry VI., 1447, four Grammar Schools were appointed to be opened in London<sup>2</sup> for the education of the City youth (Carlisle). But from the above lists it will be seen that Grammar Schools had not much to do with the education of our nobility and gentry before 1450 A.D.

Of Eton studies, the Paston Letters notice only Latin versifying, but they show us a young man supposed to be nineteen, still at school, having a smart pair of breeches for holy days, falling in love, eating figs and raisins, proposing to come up to London for a day or two's holiday or lark to his elder brother's, and having 8d. sent him in a letter to buy a pair of slippers with. William Paston, a younger brother of John's, when about nineteen years old, and studying at Eton, writes on Nov. 7, 1478, to thank his brother for a noble in gold, and says,

"my creanser (creditor) Master Thomas (Stevenson) heartily recommendeth him to you, and he prayeth you to send him some money for my commons, for he saith ye be twenty shillings in his debt, for a month was to pay for when he had money last; also I beseech you to send me a hose cloth, one for the holy days of some colour, and another for working days (how coarse soever it be, it maketh no matter), and a stomacher and two shirts, and a pair of slippers: and if it like you that I may come with Alweder by water "—would they take a pair-oar and pull down? (the figs and raisins came up by a barge;)—"and sport me with you at London a day or two this term-time, then ye may let all this be till the time that I come, and then I will tell you when I shall be ready to come from Eton by the grace of God, who have you in his keeping." Paston Letters, modernised, vol. 2, p. 129.

This is the first letter; the second one about the figs, raisins, and love-making (dated 23 Feb. 1478-9) is given at vol. ii. p. 122-3.

other Schooles in London," in his Third Vniuersitie of England (t. i. London). He notices the old schools of the monasteries, &c., 'in whose stead there be some few founded lately by good men' as the Merchant Taylors, and Thomas Sutton, founder of the great new Hospitall in the Charter house, [who] hath translated the Tenis court to a Grammar Schoole. . for 30 schollers, poore mens children . . There be also other Triuiall Schooles for the bringing up of youth in good literature, viz., in S. Magnus, in S. Michaels, in S. Thomas, and others.

For fault but small · or none at all It come to pass · thus beat I was. See, Udall, see · the mercy of thee To me poor lad!"

I was rather surprised to find no mention of any Eton men in the first vol. of Wood's Athenæ Oxonienses (ed. Bliss) except two, who had first taken degrees at Cambridge, Robert Aldrich and William Alley, the latter admitted at Cambridge 1528 (Wood, p. 375, col. 2). Plenty of London men are named in Wood, vol. 1. No doubt in early times the Eton men went to their own foundation, King's (or other Colleges at) Cambridge, while the Winchester men went to their foundation, New College, or elsewhere at Oxford. In the first volume of Bliss's edition of Wood, the following Winchester men are noticed:

- p. 30, col. 2, William Grocyn, educated in grammaticals in Wykeham's school near Winchester.
- p. 78, col. 2, William Horman, made fellow of New Coll. in 1477. Author of the Vulgaria Puerorum, &c. (See also Andrew Borde, p. xxxiv, above, note.)

That the post-Reformation Grammar Schools did not at first educate as many boys as the old monastic schools is well known. Strype says,

"On the 15th of January, 1562, Thomas Williams, of the Inner Temple, esq. being chosen speaker to the lower house, was presented to the queen: and in his speech to her. took notice of the want of schools; that at least an hundred were wanting in England which before this time had been, [being destroyed (I suppose he meant) by the dissolution of monasteries and religious houses, fraternities and colleges.] He would have had England continually flourishing with ten thousand scholars, which the schools in this nation formerly brought up. That from the want of these good schoolmasters sprang up ignorance: and covetousness got the livings by impropriations; which was a decay, he said, of learning, and by it the tree of knowledge grew downward, not upward; which grew greatly to the dishonour, both of God and the commonwealth. He mentioned likewise the decay of the universities; and how that great market-towns were without schools or preachers: and that the poor vicar had but 201. [or some such poor allowance,] and the rest, being no small sum, was impropriated. And so thereby, no preacher there; but the people, being trained up and led in blindness for want of instruction, became obstinate: and therefore advised that this should be seen to, and impropriations redressed, notwithstanding the laws already made [which favoured them].—Strype, Annals of the Reformation, vol. i. p. 437.

Of the Grammar Schools in his time (A.D. 1577) Harrison says:

Besides these universities, also there are a great number of Grammer Schooles throughout the realme, and those verie liberallie endued for the better relief of pore scholers, so that there are not manie corporate townes, now under the queene's dominion that have not one Gramer Schole at the least, with a sufficient living for a master and usher appointed to the same.

There are in like manner divers collegiat churches, as Windsor, Wincester, Eaton, Westminster (in which I was sometime an unprofitable Grammarian under the reverend father, master Nowell, now dean of Paules) and in those a great number of pore scholers, dailie maintained by the liberality of the founders, with meat, bookes, and apparell; from whence after they have been well entered in the knowledge of the Latine and Greek tongs, and rules of versifying (the triall whereof is made by certain apposers, yearlie appointed to examine them), they are sent to certain especiall houses in each universitie<sup>1</sup>, where they are received & trained up in the points of higher knowledge in their privat halls till they be adjudged meet to show their faces in the schooles, as I have said alreadie.

Greek was first taught at a public school in England by Lillye soon after the year 1500. This was at St Paul's School in London, then newly established by Dean Colet, and to which Erasmus alluded as the best of its time in 1514, when he said that he had in three years taught a youth more Latin than he could have acquired in any school in England, ne Liliana quidem excepta, not even Lillye's excepted. (Warton, iii. 1.) The first schoolmaster who stood up for the study of English was, I believe, Richard Mulcaster, of King's College, Cambridge, and Christ Church, Oxford. In 1561 he was appointed the first head-master of Merchant-Taylors School in London, then just founded as a feeder or pro-seminary for St John's College, Oxford (Warton, iii. 282). In his Elementarie, 1582, he has a long passage on the study of English, the whole of which I print here, at Mr Quick's desire, as it has slipt out of people's minds, and Mulcaster deserves honour for it:—

"But bycause I take vpon me in this Elementarie, besides som frindship to secretaries for the pen, and to correctors for the print, to direct such peple as teach childern to read and write English, and the reading must nedes be such as the writing leads vnto, thererfor, (sic) befor I medle with anie particular precept, to direct the Reader, I will thoroughlie rip vp the hole certaintie of our English writing, so far furth and with such assurance, as probabilitie can make me, bycause it is a thing both proper to my argument, and profitable to my cuntrie. For our natural tung being as beneficial vnto vs for our nedefull deliuerie, as anie other is to the peple which vse it: & hauing as pretie, and as fair observations in it, as anie other hath: and being as readie to yield to anie rule of Art, as anie other is: why should I not take som pains to find out the right writing of ours, as other cuntrimen haue don to find the like in theirs? & so much the rather. bycause it is pretended, that the writing thereof is meruellous vncertain, and scant to be recovered from extreme confusion, without som change of as great extremitie? I mean therefor so to deall in it, as I maie wipe awaie that opinion of either vncertaintie for confusion, or impossibilitie for direction, that both the naturall English maie haue wherein to rest, & the desirous st[r]anger maie haue whereby to learn. For the performance whereof, and mine own better direction, I will first examin those means, whereby other tungs of most sacred antiquitie haue bene brought to Art and form of discipline for their right writing, to the end that by following their waie, I maie hit vpon their right, and at the least by their president deuise the like to theirs, where the vse of our tung, & the propertie of our dialect will not yeild flat to theirs. That don, I will set all the varietie of our now writing, & the vncertaine force of all our letters, in as much certaintie, as anie writing can be, by these seuen precepts,—1. Generall rule, which concerneth the propertie and vse of ech letter: 2. Proportion which reduce thall words of one sound to the same writing: 3. Composition, which teacheth how to write one word made of mo: 4. Derivation, which examineth the ofspring of eueric originall: 5. Distinction which bewraieth the difference of sound and force in letters by som writen figure or accent: 6. Enfranchisment, which directeth the right writing of all incorporat foren words: 7. Prerogatiue, which declareth a reservation, wherein common vse will continew hir precedence in our English writing, as she hath don euerie where else, both for the form of the letter, in som places, which likes the pen better: and for the difference in writing, where som particular caueat will chek a common rule. In all these seuen I will so examin the particularities of our tung, as either nothing shall seme strange at all, or if anie thing do seme, yet it shall not seme so strange, but that either the self same, or the verie like vnto it, or the more strange then it is, shal appear to be in, those things, which ar more familiar vnto vs for extraordinarie learning, then required of vs for our ordinarie vse. And forasmuch as the eie will help manie to write right by a sene president, which either cannot vnderstand, or cannot entend to vnderstand the reason of a rule, therefor in the end of this treatis for right writing, I purpos to set down a generall table of most English words, by waie of president, to help such plane peple, as cannot entend the vnderstanding of a rule, which requireth both time and conceit in perceiuing, but can easilie run to a generall table, which is readier to their hand. By the which table I shall also confirm the right of my rules, that their hold thoroughout, & by multitude of examples help som maim (so) in precepts. Thus much for the right writing of our English tung, which maie seme (so) for a preface to the principle of Reading, as the matter of the one is the maker of the other.—1582. Richd. Mulcaster. The First Part of the Elementarie, pp. 53-4.

Brinsley follows Mulcaster in exhorting to the study of English:

"there seemes vnto mee, to bee a verie maine want in all our Grammar schooles generally, or in the most of them; whereof I have heard som great learned men to complain; That there is no care had in respect, to traine vp schollars so as they may be able to expresse their minds purely and readily in our owne tongue, and to increase in the practice of it, as well as in the Latine or Greeke; whereas our chiefe indeuour should bee for it, and that for these reasons. 1. Because that language which all sorts and conditions of men amongst vs are to haue most vse of, both in speech & writing, is our owne native tongue. 2. The purity and elegancie of our owne language is to be esteemed a chiefe part of the honour of our nation: which we all ought to advance as much as in vs lieth. As when Greece and Rome and other nations have most florished, their languages also have beene most pure: and from those times of Greece & Rome, wee fetch our chiefest patterns, for the learning of their tongues. 3. Because of those which are for a time trained vp in schooles, there are very fewe which proceede in learning, in comparison of them that follow other callings.

Ibid., side-notes, p. 22, 23.

On this question of English boys studying English, let it be remembered that in this year of grace 1867, in all England there is just one public school at which English is studied historically—the City of London School—and that in this school it was begun only last year by the new Head-Master, the Rev. Edwin A. Abbot, all honour to him. In every class an English textbook is read, Piers Plowman being that for the highest class. This neglect of English as a subject of study is due no doubt to tutors' and parents' ignorance. None of them know the language historically; the former can't teach it, the latter don't care about it; why should their boys learn it? Oh tutors and parents, there are such things as asses in the world.

Of the school-life of a Grammar-school boy in 1612 we may get a notion from Brinsley's p. 296, "chap. xxx. Of Schoole times, intermissions and recreations," which is full of interest. '1. The Schooletime should beginne at sixe: all who write Latine to make their exercises which were given overnight, in that houre before seven'. -To make boys punctual, 'so many of them as are there at sixe, to have their places as they had them by election or the day before: all who come after six, every one to sit as he commeth, and so to continue that day, and vntill he recouer his place againe by the election of the fourme or otherwise. . . If any cannot be brought by this, them to be noted in the blacke Bill by a speciall marke, and feele the punishment thereof: and sometimes present correction to be vsed for terrour. . . Thus they are to continue vntill nine [at work in class], signified by Monitours, Subdoctour or otherwise. Then at nine . . to let them to have a quarter of an houre at least, or more, for intermission, eyther for breakefast . . or else for the necessitie of euery one, or their honest recreation, or to prepare their exercises against the Masters comming in. [2.] After, each of them to be in his place in an instant, vpon the knocking of the dore or some other sign. . so to continue vntill eleuen of the clocke, or somwhat after, to countervaile the time of the intermission at nine.

(3.) To be againe all ready, and in their places at one, in an instant; to continue vntill three, or halfe an houre after: then to have another quarter of an houre or more, as at nine for drinking and necessities; so to continue till halfe an houre after five: thereby in that halfe houre to counteruaile the time at three; then to end so as was shewed, with reading a peece of a Chapter, and with singing two staues of a Psalme: lastly with prayer to be vsed by the Master.'

To the objectors to these intermissions at nine and three, who may reproach the schoole, thinking that they do nothing but play, Brinsley answers,—'2. By this meanes also the Schollars may bee kept euer in their places, and hard to their labours, without that running out to the Campo (as the[y] tearme it) at school times, and the manifolde disorders thereof; as watching and striuing for the clubbe, and loytering then in the fields; some hindred that they cannot go forth at all. (5.) it is very requisite also, that they should have weekly one part of an afternoone for recreation, as a reward of their diligence, obedience and profiting; and that to be appointed at the Masters discretion, eyther the Thursday, after the vsuall custom; or according to the best opportunity of the place. . All recreations and sports of schollars, would be meet for Gentlemen. Clownish sports, or perilous, or yet playing for money, are no way to be admitted.'

On the age at which boys went to school, Brinsley says, p. 9,

"For the time of their entrance with vs, in our countrey schooles, it is commonly about 7. or 8. yeares olde: six is very soone. If any begin so early, they are rather sent to the schoole to keepe them from troubling the house at home, and from danger, and shrewd turnes, then for any great hope and desire their friends have that they should learne anything in effect."

To return from this digression on Education. Enough has been said to show that the progress of Education, in our sense of the word, was rather from below upwards, than from above downwards; and I conclude that the young people to whom the Babees Boke, &c., were addressed, were the children of our nobility, knights, and squires, and that the state of their manners, as left by their home training, was such as to need the inculcation on them of the precepts contained in the Poems. If so, dirty, ill-mannered, awkward young gawks, must most of these hopes-of-England have been, to modern notions. The directions for personal cleanliness must have been much needed when one considers the small stock of linen and clothes that men not rich must have had; and if we may judge from a passage in Edward the Fourth's Liber Niger, even the King himself did not use his footpan every Saturday night, and would not have been the worse for an occasional tubbing:—

"This barbour shall have, every satyrday at nyght, if it please the Kinge to cleanse his head, legges, or feet, and for his shaving, two loves, one picher wyne. And the ussher of chambre ought to testyfye if this is necessaryly dispended or not."

So far as appears from Edward the Fourth's Liber Niger Domus, soap was used only for washing clothes. The yeoman lavender, or washer man, was to take from the Great Spicery 'as muche whyte soape, greye, and blacke, as can be thought resonable by prcufe of the Countrollers,' and therewith 'tenderly to waysshe . . the stuffe for the Kinges propyr persone' (H. Ord. p. 85); but whether that cleansing material ever touched His Majesty's sacred person (except doubtless when and if the barber shaved him), does not appear. The Ordinances are considerate as to sex, and provide for "weomen lavendryes" for a Queen, and further that "these officers oughte to bee sworne to keepe the chambre counsaylle." But it is not for one of a nation that has not yet taken generally to tubbing and baths, or left off shaving, to reproach his forefathers with want of cleanliness, or adherence to customs that involve contradiction of the teachings of physiologists, and the evident intent of Nature or the Creator. Moreover, reflections on the good deeds done, and the high thoughts thought, by men of old dirtier than some now, may prevent us concluding that because other people now talk through their noses, and have manners different from our own, they and their institutions must be wholly abominable; that because others smell when heated, they ought to be slaves; or that eating peas with a knife renders men unworthy of the franchise. The temptation to value manners above morals, and pleasantness above honesty, is one that all of us have to guard against. And when we have held to a custom merely because it is old, have refused to consider fairly the reasons for its change, and are inclined to grumble when the change is carried out, we shall be none the worse for thinking of the people. young and old, who, in the time of Harrison and Shakspere, the "Forgotten Worthies" and Raleigh, no doubt 'hated those nasty new oak houses and chimnies,' and sighed for the good old times:

"And yet see the change, for when our houses were builded of willow, then had we oken men; but now that our houses are come to be made of oke, our men are not onlie become willow, but a great manie through Persian delicacie crept in among vs, altogither of straw, which is a sore alteration. . Now haue we manie chimnies, and yet our tenderlings complaine of rheumes, catarhs and poses. Then had we none but reredosses, and our heads did neuer ake. For as the smoke in those daies was supposed to be a sufficient hardning for the timber of the house; so it was reputed a far better medicine to keepe the goodman and his familie from the quack or pose, wherewith as then verie few were oft acquainted." Harrison, i. 212, col. 1, quoted by Ellis.

If rich men and masters were dirty, poor men and servants must have been dirtier still. William Langlande's description of Hawkyn's one metaphorical dress in which he slept o' nightes as well as worked by day, beslobbered (or by-moled, bemauled) by children, was true of the real smock; flesh-moths must have been plentiful, and the sketch of Coveitise, as regards many men, hardly an exaggeration:

. . as a bonde-man of his bacon 'his berd was bi-draveled, With his hood on his heed 'a lousy hat above, And in a tawny tabard 'of twelf wynter age Al so torn and baudy 'and ful of lys crepyng, But if that a lous<sup>3</sup> couthe 'han lopen the bettre, <sup>2</sup> Their eyes must have smarted. The natives' houses in India have (generally) no chimneys still, and Mr Moreshwar says the smoke does make your eyes water.

"In the first beginning whilest man was in his innocency, and free from wickednesse, he was subject to no corruption and filth, but when he was seduced by the wickednesse of that great and cunning deceiver, and proudly affected to know as much as God knew, God humbled him with divers diseases, and divers sorts of Worms, with Lice, Hand-worms, Belly-worms, others call Termites, small Nits and Acares.. a Lowse.. is a beastly Creature, and known better in Innes and Armies then it is wellcome. The profit it bringeth, Achilles sheweth, Iliad I. in these words: I make no more of him then I doe of a Lowse; as we have an English Proverb of a poor man, He is not worth a Lowse. The Lice that trouble men are either tame or wilde ones, those the English call Lice, and these Crab-lice; the North English call them Pert-lice, that is, a petulant Lowse comprehending both kindes; it is a certain sign of misery, and is sometimes the inevitable scourge of

The colour of washerwomen's legs was due partly to dirt, I suppose. The princess or queen Clarionas, when escaping with the laundress as her assistant, is obliged to have her white legs reduced to the customary shade of grey:

Right as she should stoupe a-doun,
The quene was tukked wel on high;
The lauender perceived wel therbigh

God." Rowland's Mouffet's Theater of Insects, p. 1090, ed. 1658 (published in Latin, 1634). By this date we had improved. Mouffet says, "These filthy creatures . . are hated more than Dogs or Vipers by our daintiest Dames," ib. p. 1093; and again, p. 1097, "Cardan, that was a fancier of subtilties, writes that the Carthusians are never vexed with Wall-lice, and he gives the cause, because they eat no flesh. . . He should rather have alledged their cleanliness, and the frequent washing of their beds and blankets, to be the cause of it, which when the French, the Dutch, and Italians do less regard, they more breed this plague. But the English that take great care to be cleanly and decent, are seldom troubled with them." Also, on p. 1092, he says, 'As for dressing the body: all Ireland is noted for this, that it swarms almost with Lice. But that this proceeds from the beastliness of the people, and want of cleanly women to wash them is manifest, because the English that are more careful to dress themselves, changing and washing their shirts often, having inhabited so long in Ireland, have escaped that plague. . . Remedies. The Irish and Iseland people (who are frequently troubled with Lice, and such as will fly, as they say, in Summer) anoint their shirts with Saffron, and to very good purpose, to drive away the Lice, but after six moneths they wash their shirts again, putting fresh Saffron into the Lye.' Rowland's Mouffet (1634), Theater of Insects, p. 1092, ed. 1658.

"And for the better avoydyng of corruption and all uncleannesse out of the Kings house, which doth ingender danger of infection, and is very noisome and displeasant unto all the noblemen and others repaireing unto the same; it is ordeyned by the Kings Highnesse, that the three master cookes of the kitchen shall have everie of them by way of reward yearly twenty marks, to the intent they shall prouide and sufficiently furnish the said kitchens of such scolyons as shall not goe naked or in garments of such vilenesse as they now doe, and have been acustomed to doe, nor lie in the nights and dayes in the kitchens or ground by the fireside; but that they of the said money may be found with honest and whole course garments, without such uncleannesse as may be the annoyance of those by whom they shall passe"...

That our commonalty, at least, in Henry VIII.'s time did stink (as is the nature of man to do) may be concluded from Wolsey's custom, when going to Westminster Hall, of

"holding in his hand a very fair orange, whereof the meat or substance within was taken out, and filled up again with the part of a sponge, wherein was vinegar, and other confections against the pestilent airs; the which he most commonly smelt unto, passing among the press, or else when he was pestered with many suitors." (Cavendish, p. 43.)

On the dirt in English houses and streets we may take the testimony of a witness who liked England, and lived in it, and who was not likely to misrepresent its condition,—Erasmus. In a letter to Francis, the physician of Cardinal Wolsey, says Jortin,

"Erasmus ascribes the plague (from which England was hardly ever free) and the sweating-sickness, partly to the incommodious form and bad exposition of the houses, to the filthiness of the streets, and to the sluttishness within doors. The floors, says he, are commonly of clay, strewed with rushes, under which lies unmolested an ancient collection of beer, grease (?), fragments, bones, spittle, excrements [t. i. urine] of dogs and cats [t. i. men,] and every thing that is nasty, &c." (Life of Erasmus, i. 69, ed. 1808, referred to in Ellis, i. 328, note.)

The great scholar's own words are,

Tum sola fere sunt argilla, tum scirpis palustribus, qui subinde sic renovantur, ut fundamentum maneat aliquoties annos viginti, sub se fovens sputa, vomitus, mictum canum et hominum, projectam cervisiam, et piscium reliquias, aliasque sordes non nominandas. Hinc mutato cœlo vapor quidam exhalatur, mea sententia minime salubris humano corpori.

After speaking also De salsamentis (rendered 'salt meat, beef, pork, &c.,' by Jortin, but which Liber Cure Cocorum authorises us in translating 'Sauces', quibus vulgus mirum in modum delectatur, he says the English would be more healthy if their windows were made so as to shut out noxious winds, and then continues,

"Conferret huc, si vulgo parcior victus persuaderi posset, ac salsamentorum moderatior usus. Tum si publica cura demandaretur Ædilibus, ut viæ mundiores essent a cœno, mictuque: Curarentur et ea quæ civitati vicina sint. If it be objected that I have in the foregoing extracts shown the dark side of the picture, and not the bright one, my answer is that the bright one—of the riches and luxury in England—must be familiar to all our members, students (as I assume) of our early books, that the Treatises in this Volume sufficiently show this bright side, and that to me, as foolometer of the Society, this dark side seemed to need showing. But as The Chronicle of May 11, 1867, in its review of Mr Fox Browne's English Merchants, seems to think otherwise, I quote its words, p. 155, col. 2.

"All the nations of the world, says Matthew of Westminster, were kept warm by the wool of England, made into cloth by the men of Flanders. And while we gave useful clothing to other countries, we received festive garments from them in return. For most of our information on these subjects we are indebted to Matthew Paris, who tells us that when Alexander III. of Scotland was married to Margaret, daughter of Henry III., one thousand English knights appeared at the wedding in cointises of silk, and the next day each knight donned a new robe of another kind. This grand entertainment was fatal to sixty oxen, and cost the then Archbishop of York no less a sum than 4000 marks. Macpherson remarks on this great display of silk as a proof of the wealth of England under the Norman kings, a point which has not been sufficiently elaborated. In 1242 the streets of London were covered or shaded with silk, for the reception of Richard, the King's brother, on his return from the Holy Land. Few Englishmen are aware of the existence of such magnificence at that early period; while every story-book of history gives us the reverse of the picture, telling us of straw-covered floors, scarcity of body linen, and the like. Long after this, in 1367, it is recorded, as a special instance of splendour of costume, that 1000 citizens of Genoa were clothed in silk; and this tale has been repeated from age to age, while the similar display, at an earlier date, in England, has passed unnoticed."

Turning at last to notice the several pieces in the present volume, I have only to say of number 1, The Babees Boke, that I have not had time to search for its Latin original, or other copies of the text. Its specialty is its attributing so high birth to the Bele Babees whom it addresses, and its appeal to Lady Facetia to help its writer. Of the short alphabetic poems that follow,—The A B C of Aristotle, Nos. 2 and 3,—copies occur elsewhere; and that in Harl. MS. 1304, which has a different introduction, I hope to print in the companion volume to this, already alluded to. No. 4, Vrbanitatis, I was glad to find, because of the mention of the booke of urbanitie in Edward the Fourth's Liber Niger (p. ii. above), as we thus know what the Duke of Norfolk of "Flodden Field" was taught in his youth as to his demeanings, how mannerly he should eat and drink, and as to his communication and other forms of court. He was not to spit or snite before his Lord the King, or wipe his nose on the table-cloth. Nos. 5 and 6, The Lytylle Chyldrenes Lytil Boke or Edyllys Be 1 (a title made up from the text) and The Young Children's. Book, are differing versions of one set of maxims, and are printed opposite one another for contrast sake. The Lytil Boke was printed from a later text, and with an interlinear French version, by Wynkyn de Worde in 'Here begynneth a lytell treatyse for to lerne Englisshe and Frenshe.' This will be printed by Mr Wheatley in his Collection of Early Treatises on Grammar for the Society, as the copy in the Grenville Library in the Brit. Mus. is the only one known. (By the way, what member will find some additional tracts for this volume? There must be some lying about somewhere.)

<sup>1</sup> What this Edyllys Be means, I have no idea, and five or six other men I have asked are in the same condition. A.S. Epel is noble, Epeling, a prince, a noble; that may do for edyllys. Be may be for A B C, alphabet, elementary grammar of behaviour.

Other copies of this Lytil Boke are at Edinburgh, Cambridge, and Oxford. Of two of these Mr David Laing and Mr Henry Bradshaw have kindly given me collations, which are printed at the end of the Prefaces here. Of No. 7, Stans Puer ad Mensam, attributed to Lydgate -as nearly everything in the first half of the 15th century was-I have printed two copies, with collations from a third, the Jesus (Cambridge) MS. printed by Mr Halliwell in Reliquice Antiquee, v. 1, p. 156-8, and reprinted by Mr W. C. Hazlitt in his Early Popular Poetry, ii. 23-8. Mr Hazlitt notices 3 other copies, in Harl. MS. 4011, fol. 1, &c.; Lansdowne MS. 699; and Additional MS. 5467, which he collated for his text. There must be plenty more about the country, as in Ashmole MS. 61, fol. 16, back, in the Bodleian. Of old printed editions Mr Hazlitt notes one "from the press of Caxton, but the only copy known is imperfect. It was printed two or three times by Wynkyn de Worde. Lowndes mentions two, 1518, 4to, and 1524, 4to; and in the public library at Cambridge there is said by Hartshorne (Book Rarities, 156) to be a third without date. It is also appended to the various impressions of the Boke of Nurture by Hugh Rhodes." This is printed below, and its Stans Puer is Rhodes's own expansion of one of these shorter versions of the original Latin<sup>2</sup> (Part II. p. 30). No. 8 is an incomplete poem on Manners from the Lambeth MS. 853. Nos. 9 and 10 are short bits that Mr W. Aldis Wright was kind enough to send me. Of the latter of these Mr Thomas Wright says, "The verses at the bottom of p. 35, 'with this bytel,' &c., belong to a medieval story, which you will find, with the verses, in my 'Latin Stories' (printed for the Percy Society), pp. 28, 29. It is, in fact, the same story as King Lear and his Dauthers. You will find more about it in the note at the end of my volume, and another copy of the verses."

No. 11, The Good Wijf, is a mother's advice to her daughter as to her behaviour generally, her choice of a husband, and the management of her household. 'It bears trace of the greater freedom of action allowed to women in early times than now, a freedom shown in Langlande's 'Cesse the souteresse' and 'Rose the dyssheres' in the celebrated alehouse scene (Vision of Piers Pl.), in Chaucer's Wif of Bathe, in women's membership of gilds, &c. The injunction not to get drunk often, as that would be shameful (1. 39), is a sign of the times. And the advice to the girl to scorn no wooer, whatsoever he might be (II. 32-3), looks as if husbands were as scarce an article then as they are now. In 1838, Sir Frederic Madden printed a few copies of this poem for private distribution from a Henry the Sixth MS., which contained 35 stanzas against our 31, but the text is inferior to our Lambeth one, especially in the tags of the stanzas. This text Mr Hazlitt reprinted in the 1st volume of his most interesting collection of Early Popular Poetry (4 vols. J. R. Smith, £1), and I have not collated it with the text printed in the present collection, because Mr Hazlitt's volumes should be in all our members' hands. The Trinity College (Cambridge) MS. of the poem, Mr Aldis Wright has kindly collated with our text, in the notes to it. Another version of it, different in almost every stanza, is in the Porkington MS. No. 10, and this I hope to print for the Society some day or other. Mr Lumby will, I believe, print yet another version for us this year from the Lancelot-of-the-Laik MS.; and a MS. also containing the poem, Ashmole 61, fol. 7, has not been examined for or by me. Lastly, Mr Hazlitt notes that a poor copy of the text was printed in 1597 (in 33 stanzas) under the title of The Northern Mothers Blessing. The Way of Thrift<sup>1</sup>. Written nine years before the death of G. Chaucer. This latter date is possible, for I feel certain that all the copies above mentioned are but variations from some original type that has not yet turned up. The Good Wijf contains an odd instance of how even good editors are sometimes thrown off the scent. In it occurs the proverb, "aftir be wrenne hab veynes, Men must lete hir blood," that is, bleed her according to her tiny veins, or as we say, 'cut your coat according to your cloth,' spend according to your income.2 On this Proverb in his Text, Mr Hazlitt says (Early Popular Poetry, vol. i. p. 187),

"The edition of 1597 reads:—

'After the wren has veines men may let blood.'

That is to say, at that season of the year when the young bird is of a certain growth, men shall, if they require it, undergo cupping! In the MS., and in the edition of 1838 (Sir Frederic Madden's,) on the contrary, the line runs thus:—

'For aftir the wrenne hath veynes, men schalle late HIR blode.' Sir Frederic Madden could make nothing of this passage 1, and in his Preface he expressly says that 'the researches made for this purpose [the illustration of it] have not proved successful.' It appears to me that the sense is figurative, and that what the author intended to convey was, that as soon as a person becomes full of substance, the world will fleece him or her, if he or she does not exercise vigilance. This construction is borne out completely by the context."

—("Which seems to indicate that the writer . . missed the point." Hazlitt, p. 183, n. 4. See too the way-goose note on 'away goes,' iv. 124.)

No. 12, How the Wise Man tauzt his Sonne, is the parallel of The Good Wife, is shorter than it, and written with less go and less detail. The advice about choosing a wife is extremely good, the way to treat her very judicious,—

Bobe herte and hynde, bucke & do,— as is also the counsel not to be too hasty to fight and chide every one she complains of.<sup>2</sup> That ladies had a supply of pepper sauce on hand for servants (and husbands doubtless) as well as fresh salmon and lamprey (Part II. p. 45), we may gather from Wynkyn de Worde's warning to his Carver, "ladyes wyll soone be angry, for theyr thoughtes ben soone changed" (p. 279). In one point the Wise Man was a degenerate Englishman. The Toulmin Smith of his time would have rebuked him severely for advising his son (in lines 41-8, p. 49) to shirk his share of the work that in this self-governing land should have been his pride, because he must thereby displease his neighbours or forswear himself, and get more ill-will than thanks. "England expects every man to do his duty" was not the Wise Man's sentiment. Ritson printed The Wise Man in his Pieces of Ancient Popular Poetry, 1791, p. 83-91, from the Harleian MS. 4596; and Mr Hazlitt printed it in his Early Popular Poetry, vol. i. p. 169-77, from the Cambridge MS. Ff. ii. 38 (or MS. More 690). The Cambridge text is a later and longer one than the Lambeth copy in this volume, of which Mr Hazlitt did not know, and contains 188 lines to our 152, the chief expansions being about a man's duty to his wife; that he should not be jealous, as that'll make her worse; should treat her 'as reson ys,' and that he should not beat her. Resort to common women is also condemned; and the arrangement of the stanzas is much altered. Mr Hazlitt gives no reason for his statement that "the success and reputation" of The Wise Man led, possibly at no great interval, to the production of "How the Goode Wif thaught hir Doughter." Imitations do not often beat originals, and The Good Wife is the better poem.<sup>2</sup> The text printed by Mr Hazlitt looks to me like an altered copy of the original poem, with a proverb in the first stanza imitated from The Good Wife. Still it is possible that the original of The Wise Man was the earlier poem, for in the Luytel Caton in the Vernon MS. (ab. 1375 A.D.), in Latin, French, and English,—about to be edited for us by Mr Brock,—occur these lines.

For wemen yn wrethe, they can not hyde, But sone they reyse a smokei rofe.—(p. 174, l. 120.)

> Now hose wole, he may here In Englisch langage, How pe wyse mon tauhte his sone pat was of tendere age.

The Vernon version differs widely from the later ones printed by Mr Hazlitt and here, but, as their precursor, may have been earlier than the original of The Good Wife. The advice to the boy on his amusements is,

Nos. 13 and 16 are just a page each of Recipes of dishes mentioned in this volume, to fill up blanks. No. 13 is an English Dietorie, and No. 14 its Latin original. 'Clear air and walking make good digestion' is a good maxim; 'to poor folk do thou no violence,' one needed, with its companion

To visite pe poore do pi diligence, And on pe needi haue compassioun, For good deedis causip mirpe in conscience, And in heuene to haue greet possessioun.

A list of some of the other MSS. of the Pcem is given at the foot of p. 58.

After the Recipes No. 16, come Hugh Rhodes's Boke of Nurture, and John Russell's Boke of Nurture with its accompanying illustrative notes and Treatises. Each of these Bokes has its separate Preface, as beforesaid, and to them I refer the reader; only advising him to read Russell's text.

As to the Second Part of this volume, which contains a few French and Latin Poems on the same subjects of Manners and Meals as the English Poems of the First Part, and in illustration of them, I am not prepared to contend that French and Latin are Early English, but having broken the ice by printing the original Latin of two English Poems in the First Part opposite their translations, and being unable to give the Latin original of Stans Puer opposite the English versions of it, because there were two of them, I was obliged to put this Latin into an Appendix or Part II. There was another short poem in the same MS. that it would have been a shame to leave out; and then came a most obliging and kind tempter in the person of Mr Thomas Wright, with a very interesting short volume of French Poems on Manners, edited by his late friend M. de Monmerqué, and with a reference to a Latin Modus Cenandi that might be the original of everything of the kind in French and English. What could one do but yield and be thankful? However, punishment came for one's wandering from the paths of virtue and Early English, for that Modus Cenandi turned out to be no end of a plague; in many places a corrupt text, written on very thin vellum, through which the ink of one side showed on the other, and both sides had faded. The consequence was, that after troubling Mr Brock and Mr T. Wright, and getting all that was gettable out of them, I was obliged to have recourse to the officers of the MS. Department in the Museum and worry them. Mr Scott kindly gave up much time to the difficult places, but some of them have beaten even him. Professor Seeley has been good enough to give me a literal English translation of the Latin pieces in Part II., but has often had to guess instead of translate. Monsieur Michelant, of the Imperial Library, courteously sent me the first French Poem in the same Part. Without the help of the gentlemen above named I could have made nothing of this Part II., and to them all I am greatly indebted. The ready way in which help is given to one, whenever it is asked for, is one of the pleasantest incidents of one's work.

It only remains for me to say that the woodcuts at the end of the book cost the Society nothing; that the freshness of my first interest in the poems which I once hoped to re-produce in these Forewords, has become dulled by circumstances and the length of time that the volume has been in the press—it having been set aside (by my desire) for the Ayenbite, &c.;—and that the intervention of other work has prevented my making the collection as complete as I had desired it to be. It is, however, the fullest verse one that has yet appeared on its subject, and will serve as the beginning of the Society's store of this kind of material.\(^1\) If we can do all the English part of the work, and the Master of the Rolls will commission one of his Editors to do the Latin part, we shall then get a fairly complete picture of that Early English Home which, with all its shortcomings, should be dear to every Englishman now.

3, St George's Square, N.W., 5th June, 1867.

PREFACE TO RHODES.

King Edward the Fourth had in 1461-82 a.p. "Chapleynes and Clerkes of the Chapell, XXVI, by the King's choyce or by the deane his election or denomination, of men of worshipp, endowed with vertuuse morall and speculatiff, as of theyre musike, shewing in descant, clene voysed, well releesed and pronouncynge, eloquent in reding, sufficiaunt in organes pleyyng, and modestiall in all other manner of behaving 1". Such a one, I doubt not, was Hewe Rodes of the Kinges Chappell before 1554, the author of the Boke of Nurture first following 2, a Devonshire worthy of Henry VIII's time, much impressed with the duty of teaching Children, Masters and Servants, Young and Old, the way they should go and the good manners they should use, a very Polonius in his overflow of saws and precepts, but alas a man who had to declare of his acquaintance and friends,

In all my lyfe I could scant fynde One wight true and trusty.

From his care for children, I should like to suppose Rodes to have been Master of the young people who in his sovereign's time represented Edward's "Children of Chapell, VIII, founden by the King's Jewel-house for all thinges that belongeth to thayre apparayle, by the handes or oversight of the Deane, or by the maistyr of songes assigned to teche them; which maister is apoynted by the seyd

Dean, and chosen one of the numbyr of the seyd felyshypp of chapell. And he to drawe these chyldren, as well in the schoole of facet <sup>1</sup>, as in songe, organes, or suche other vertuous thinges." But there seems to be little chance of squeezing our author in between William Crane, who we know was Henry the Eighth's Master of the Children up to A.D. 1541<sup>2</sup> (and, no doubt, beyond), and Richard Bowyer, who was their Master in 1548.<sup>3</sup> We may, however, glean something of the position in society, the pay and food, of both the Gentlemen and Children of the Chapel in Rodes's time, and this I proceed to do.

Unluckily there is no full account of the members or duties of Henry the Eighth's 'Chapell,' in the Ordinances made at Eltham, A.D. 1526; but in the table of Wages and Fees, p. 169-70, the members are mentioned thus:

The Chaplains were not, I assume, boarded in the Court, or at the King's cost, and are therefore not mentioned in the list. Besides their wages, the Gentlemen of the Chappell, no doubt, had regularly a New Yeres Rewarde, like the other of the Royal servants. In the Arundel MS., No. 67, above cited, we find at fol. 164, back, this gift to them in 1541, "Item to ye gentilmen of the chappelle for yeir peynes takinge, xiiij l. vj s. viij d." And in July, 1531, in Henry's Household Expenses (ed. Nicolas) is an entry, "Item the same [xxyj] daye paied to the dean of the Chapell for the kinges rewarde to the Chapell men xls." Besides this they would share in the annual Chapel Feast, for which these payments appear in Nicolas's Hd. Expenses of Hen. VIII. "Item the vj daye [of Aug. 1530] paied to the dean of the Chapell for the chapelle feaste xls. Item the xj daye [of Aug. 1532] paied to maister dean of the kinges Chapell the olde ordinary rewarde for the Chapell feaste xl s." The allowances of the Gentlemen of the Chappell for board-wages are stated in H. Ord., p. 212, in the Increase of Charges in the Household, given in the "Additions to the Ordinances made at Eltham."

"Item, that the Kings Majesties pleasure was declared the 28th day of Aprill, in the 36th, yeare of his most gracious Reigne [A.D. 1544] at St. James's, by the mouth of the Lord Great Master and Mr Comptroller, that the Gentlemen of the Chappell, Gospeller, Episteller, and Serjeant of the vestry, shall have from the last day of March forward, for their board-wages, everie of them 12¢ per diem: and the Yeomen and Groomes of the Vestry, everie of them 6d per diem; and twelve children of the chappell, everie of them 2s, by the weeke."

And in a prior page (H. Ord. p. 208) we are informed that a daily mess of meat was subsequently given to them:

"ITEM, the King's pleasure was declared by the mouth of the Lord Great Master at Greenwitch, the 14th. day of June, in the 36th. yeare of his Graces reigne, after the accompt of his household, that James Hill and his fellows, Gentlemen Singers, shall have dayly from the kitchen, one messe of grosse meate, and from all other Officers like Bouche of Court among them as the Physicions; and att every removeing, allowance of a Cart for the carriage of their stuff."

Now the Physicions in 1526 were Doctor Chamber and Doctor Butts, and in the list of "The Ordinary of the King's Chamber which have Bouche of Court, and also their Dietts within the Court" (H. Ord. p. 166), these Physicians are put above 'the Apothecary, and The three Chirurgions, every of them, and Edmond Harmond, and Phillip,' who had the care of the children'; whence we may infer the social rank of our Gentlemen Singers or Gentlemen of the Chappell,—that ancient and honourable estate of the realm,<sup>2</sup>—above the Surgeons, Apothecaries, and Barbers, but below the Physicians. This assumes that the above-mentioned grant of a Bouche of Court equal to that of the Physicians, raised the Gentlemen of the Chappell nearly to the Physicians' level. As to their dinner, I assume from the way in which 'messe of meate' is used in the Ordinances, p. 185, that the 'one messe of grosse meate' allowed to the Gentlemen of the Chappell, meant nearly the same as the 'Diett for the Phisitions and Chirurgions' given at p. 178 of Household Ordinances, which cost by the yeare, everie messe, £66. 7s.  $5\frac{1}{2}$ d. for the Kings Highnesse and his side (p. 192), or £66. 7s.  $6\frac{1}{2}$ d. for the Queenes Grace and her side (p. 193). The Queen's Phisition and Apothecary, one messe of the like Fare."

1 See H. Ord., p. 192. Edmond Harman was one of the "Barbours" at £20 a year (H. Ord., p. 166 and p. 169). I suppose he had the general household charge of the Children; Crane, the education of them. (The present Children live in Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, with the Rev. Mr Helmore.) The charge of their Dietts yearly was at first, in 1526, Edmond Harmond, Phillip, and the children, £70. 10s. 0¼d., H. Ord., p. 192; but in 1539 their allowance was increased:—"Item, The charge of one messe of meate served to Edmond Harmon, Phillip and the children, by the commandment of Mr Comptroller at Hampton Court, 20th. day of June, Anno 31, £35. 5s. 0¼d.;" and again in 1542 "the King's pleasure is declared by the mouth of Mr Phillip Hobby (? Sir Phillip Hobby, Gentleman Usher of the Privy Chamber, p. 169) unto the Lord Great Master, the 17th day of January, in the 33d yeare of his reigne at Westminster, that the children that be in the keeping of Philip and Edmond Harmon to be served with one messe of meate, like unto the other messe they had before." H. Ord., p. 208.

The only distinction between the Phisition and Chirurgion here is, that the former got five penny-worth of Baked Meate or Pie at dinner, and three pen'orth of Doulcetts (see "Russell's Boke of Nurture, p. 146) at supper, more than the Chirurgion. If then the Gentlemen of the Chappell came between the two, how would the Clerk to the Kychyn mark the difference, I wonder? Give them Conies, 1 mess,  $2\frac{1}{2}$ d. (H. Ord., p. 181), or Egges,  $2\frac{1}{2}$ d. (p. 178), for their voices at the one; or an extra quart of wine or gallon of Ale,  $1\frac{1}{2}$ d. (ib. p. 191) at the other, to cheer them up before going to bed? Who shall say?

The Gentlemen-of-the-Chappell's 'Bouche of Court as the Physicians' from the officers other than those of the Kitchen, is stated at p. 163-4 of Household Ordinances:

"Gentlemen Ushers of the Privy Chamber, and Gentlemen Ushers dayly wayters; for the King and the Queenes Phisicions, and Clerkes of the Spicery.

"Every of them being lodged within the court, after supper, one chet loafe, one gallon of ale, one quart of wyne; and from the last day of October unto the first day of Aprill, by the weeke two lynckes, by the day one sise, four white lights, four talshides, four faggotts, and . . . . and from the last day of March unto the first day of November, to have the moyety of the said waxe, white lights, wood and coales; which amounteth to the sume of viiil. vs. ob. q.1

This Bouche of Court, the reader will perceive, was a daily allowance of lights and fuel, and also of bread, ale, and wine, for a nightcap before going to bed, and perhaps for breakfast next morning. That some extra food was wanted will be acknowledged when the times for dinner and supper are stated. H. Ord., p. 151,

clock, or somewhat afore; and the first supper at foure of the clock on worke dayes; and on holy dayes, the first dynner to begin after the King be gone to the chappel, to his divine service, and likewise at souper.

Cap. 45. And at such time as the Kings hall is not kept, the service for dynner, as well in the King and Queen's chambers, as in all other places of the house where any allowance of meate is had, to be observed at one certaine and convenient houre; that is to say, for dinner at eleven of the clock before noone, or neere thereupon, and for supper at six of the clock at afternoon, or neere thereupon; not tarrying nor digressing from this order for the Kings highnesse, nor for such as shall attend upon his Grace in his disporte or otherwise."

Evidently, if Hewe Rodes followed his own precept to rise at six of the clock (p. 72, l. 61, below), he would need some of his bouche of Court before ten or eleven, to stay his stomach.

This, then, is all I can find with regard to the status and diet of our author. Of the duties of him and his fellow-gentlemen, the Ordinances give us only the following information, p. 160, that whenever the King

"shall lye in his castle of Windsor, his mannors of Bewlye, Richmond, and Hampton Court, Greenwitch, Eltham or Woodstock, his hall shall be ordinarily kept and contynued; unlesse than for any reasonable cause by his Grace to be approved, it shall be thought otherwise expedient; and at all such tymes of keeping the said hall, the King's noble chappell to be kept in the same place, for the administration of divine service, as apperteyneth.

"Cap. 78. Nevertheless, forasmuch as it is goodly and honourable, that there should be allwayes some divine service in the court, whereby men might be elected unto the devotion, and that it would not only be a great annoyance, but also excessive labour, travell, charge, and paine, to have the King's whole chappell continually attendant upon his person, when his grace keepeth not his hall, and specially in rideing journeys and progresses; it is for the better administration of divine service ordeyned, that the master of the children, and six men, with some officers of the vestry, shall give their continuall attendance in the King's court, and dayly, in absence of the residue of the chappell, to have a masse of our Lady before noone, and on sundayes and holydayes, masse of the day, besides our Lady masse, and an antheme in the afternoone; for which purpose no great carriage, either of vestments or bookes, shall be required: the said persons to have allowance of board wages, or bouch of court, with lodgeing in or neere to the same, and convenient carriage; as in such case hath been accustomed."

Assuming, then, as certain, that the business of Hewe Rodes's life was to assist in "the administration of divine service," and as possible, that he further taught the ten Children of the Chappell their grammar, "songe, organes, or suche other vertuous thinges," we need not wonder that he who had experienced the change from Devonshire manners to courtly ones should have desired to impress on others the lessons he had learnt himself, and lay down, at parson length, the maxims that he had drawn from his own experience and the sayings of the wise men of the Court. What manner of man he himself was he does not tell us. The only allusion he makes to his art is

A tendable seruaunt standeth in fauour / for his auawntage Promoted shal he be in offyce or fe / the easyer to lyue in age Vse honest pastyme, talke or synge, or some instrument vse Though they be thy betters, they wyll not the refuse.

Whether he was in youth a Chorister, impressed for the service <sup>2</sup> and forced from his home and school like Tusser was—chappell he was whipped for any Prince's faults, as the custom was 1. Was he ever snubbed by the Dean, I wonder, who had "all corrections of chapell-men in moribus et sciencia—reserved some cases to the Steward and countyng house 4" ?-Was he ever found "defectife or disobedient, and putt oute of wages" on a Friday when the Dean "kept a conventicle with all the chapell-men, and there rehersed their fautes and appointed the remedies 2?" Did he prove one of "the rascals and hangers upon thys courte," who were to "be sought oute and avoyded from enery office monethly 3?" Far be it from us to believe so. He was never sent to the Marchalcye Prison by suspection (we may be sure), "as a theefe or outrageous royatour, or for muche hauntyng sclaunderous places, companyes and other 4," nor was he "knowen for a commyn dayly drunkyn man": he was not of the "pykers, malefactours of outward people or inward," nor did he use "to swere customably by Goddes body, or any of his other partes unreverently, against the Kinges vertuous disposition and the law of God," but lived as a man of worship, endowed with moral virtues, as by his ordinance he was bound to do. If he had the chance of playing at "pryckis" with his burly Sovereign like William Crane, the Master of the Children, up to (and perhaps beyond) 1541, had, no doubt he took the chance, and tried to win £7. 2s. 6d. of his King as Master Crane succeeded in doing 5; but for any such <sup>1</sup> Burnet (Own Times, i. 244, says Hawkins, iii. 252-3) mentions Barnaby Fitzpatric as whipping-boy to Prince Edward, and a Mr Murray as whipping-boy to Charles I. The working of the process is well explained by an old comedy of Christopher Tye's, quoted by Mr Thoms (from Hawkins):

Cranmer: So, sir, this policie was well devised.

Since he was whipped thus for the Prince's faults,

His grace hath got more knowledge in a month

Than he attained in a year before:

For still the fearful boy, to save his breech,

Doth hourlye haunt him wheresoe'er he goes.

details about him we must wait for the publication of a later Household Book of Henry VIII.'s or an earlier one of Edward VI.'s than I have been able to find, and meantime judge Hewe Rodes from his book. He seems to me a regular sobersides, with little or no fun or humour 1 in him, not a man to make fast friends, though eminently respectable, and with an eve to the main chance, if we may judge from his directions to The Wayting Servant as to what company he should keep:

There you have the man, I fancy. Propriety and Deportment, Honesty and Gentleness, pay; therefore pursue them. But there is much else in the book that may be urged against this view of the author, as the reader will find if he reads the book, though still on me the former impression remains. It is confirmed, too, by the

(ed. 1827), p. 227. I take this to be, not prick-song, but the pricks for shooting, which Ascham testifies in his Toxophilus that Henry VIII. practised:

"Again, there is another thing, which above all other doth move me, not only to love shooting, to praise shooting, to exhort all other to shooting, but also to use shooting myself; and that is our King [Henry the Eighth] his most royal purpose and will, which in all his statutes [3 Henry VIII., cap. 3; 6 Hen. VIII., cap. 3; 25 Hen. VIII., cap. 17; 33 Hen. VIII., cap. 9] generally doth command men, and with his own mouth most gently doth exhort men, and by his great gifts and rewards greatly doth encourage men, and with his most princely example very often doth provoke all other men to the same." ed. "fulsome panegyric" on Queen Mary, on which Warton remarks in his notice of Rodes's other poem. Warton (iii. 265, ed. 1840) says of Rodes,

"In the following reign of Mary, the same poet printed a poem consisting of thirty-six octave stanzas, entitled, 'The Song of the Chyld-Bysshop, as it was songe before the queenes maiestie in her privile chamber at her manour of saynt James in the ffeeldes on saynt Nicholas day and Innocents day this yeare nowe present, by the chylde bysshope of Poules churche with his company. Londini, in ædibus Johannis Cawood, typographi reginæ, 1555. Cum privilegio, &c.¹ By admitting this spectacle into her presence, it appears that her majesty's bigotry condescended to give countenance to the most ridiculous and ummeaning ceremony of the Roman ritual. As to the song itself, it is a fulsome panegyric on the queen's devotion, in which she is compared to Judith, Esther, the queen of Sheba, and the virgin Mary."

One good quality Rodes certainly had, modesty as to his poetical powers. He says,

I am full blynde in Poets Arte, thereof I can no skill: All elloquence I put apart, following myne owne wyll. Corrupt in speeche, be sure, am I, my breefes from longes to know, And born and bred in Deuonshyre to, as playne my tearmes doe show. Take the best, and leave the worst, of truth I meane no yll: The matter is not curyous, the intent good, marke it well. Pardon I aske if I offend thus boldly now to wryte: To Mayster, seruaunt, yong and olde, I doe this booke commit, Requiring friendly youth and age, if any doe amis, For to refourme and hate abuse, and mend where neede there is.

<sup>1</sup> In quarto, bl. lett. (Warton), A.D. 1555. See in Dibdin's Ames, vol. iv. p. 394. Ritson observes on this statement of Warton's as to Rodes's poem, that it "seems to require some further authority," Bibliogr. Poet., p. 315, and in a note says, "Herbert, in p. 1794, asserts a copy of this book to be in possession of Francis Douce, esquire; 'who never had, nor saw, nor (except from what Warton says) ever hear'd of such a thing." Modern inquirers after this poem are in Douce's

The Book of Nurture consists of four Parts, whereof the second is divided into two. First comes an exhortation to Parents and Masters to bring up their Children vertuously, and keep their Servants and household in good order. Second: are, 1. The Maner of Seruing a Knight, Squyre, or Gentleman at Meals; 2. How to order your Maysters Chamber at night to bedwarde (when he goes to bed). Third comes the expansion of Stans Puer ad Mensam, turned into "The Booke of Nurture and Schole of good Maners for Man and for Chylde." Fourth comes the most elaborate part of the book, directions "For the Wayting Seruaunt," pp. 82-108, comprising maxims and advice not only for him, but for the world of men in general. Into this, the edition of 1577 (which is printed here) has introduced "The Rule of Honest Liuing," two pages and a half of prose maxims not differing much from those that have preceded them in verse. I do not mean to pick out the plums from the text, or even point to where they are, because I feel sure that no Member is so lost to all sense of propriety as not to read this volume through from beginning to end. If there should be one in that unhappy condition, let him beg his dearest friend to give him a dose of Wilyam Bulleyn's boxyng & neckweede, according to the prescription following the notes to Russell, and, being smoked, he will be cured.

Hewe Rodes's Boke of Nurture was printed at least five times in early days. First by Thomas Petit, in small 8vo, bl. lett., before 1554, for he printed no book after that date 1: secondly by Thomas Colwell, bl. l., who printed from 1561 to 1575; thirdly (as I suppose) with somewhat more modern spelling, by Abraham Veale, bl. l., who printed from 1551 to 1586; fourthly by Thomas East, in oblong case; neither Mr J. Gough Nichols, who has long been hunting for Boy-Bishop material, Dr Rimbault, Mr W. C. Hazlitt, nor any other likely men whom I have asked, have ever heard of it. Warton must of course have seen a copy. Who will tell me where one is?

4to, in 1568; fifthly by H. Jackson, in small 8vo, in 1577. (See Warton, v. iii. p. 265, ed. 1840; Ritson's Bibl. Poet., p. 314-15; and Brydges's Censura Literaria.) Of the first edition only one copy is known to the Librarians, collectors, and friends of whom I have made inquiry. It is in the Bodleian, is without a title, and two leaves of the text are gone. From its heading "The boke of Nurture for men, seruauntes and chyldren, with Stans puer ad mensam, newly corrected, very vtyle and necessary vnto all youth," we might conclude that this supposed first edition was only a late one; but it is possible that the newly corrected applies only to the Stans puer ad mensam, an old poem which Rodes has newly corrected. second and third editions the Rev. Mr Corser, of Stand Rectory, near Manchester, has unique copies, which he has kindly lent me, just as these sheets are going to press, and of which, if the variations are important, I shall give collations at the end of these Prefaces. the fourth edition I have not been able to hear of a copy. Of the fifth there are at least two copies known, one in the British Museum, and the other among Malone's books in the Bodleian. I had at first resolved to print the texts of the first and fifth editions (the only ones then known to me) opposite one another, so as to bring out their differences fully, leaving blanks for the missing leaves of the first edition, to be filled up whenever these leaves should turn up and I could reprint them; but on the strong remonstrance of Mr H. B. Wheatley against reprinting an imperfect printed book, I gave up the plan, and have printed only the 1577 text from the British Museum copy, adding the principal variations of the first edition at the end. Of this first edition I hope to hear of a complete copy soon, and to reprint it directly afterwards. Had I known of Mr Corser's uniques a year ago, I should have reprinted one instead of Jackson's edition.

Some of the alterations from the earlier text are worth notice as signs of the times. Thus the leaving out by Colwell, Veale, and Jackson, of these lines "To helpe a preest to say masse / it is greatly to be commended Thou takest on hande an aungels office / the preest to attend" of the first edition's injunctions for conduct in church, marks the Reformation. Why the early true statement in Petit's edition,

"Pore men faythfull, and gentylmen deceytful in lyuynge
The gredy myndes of rulers / hath caused blode shedynge" should have been altered to the later goody

- "Poore men faythfull and obedyent in theyr lyuynge Voydeth rebellion and bloud shedynge" (Colwell),
- "Poore men faithful and obedient in their liuing Voideth rebellion and blood sheding" (Veale),

"Pore men must be faythfull, and obedient in lyuing, Auoyding all rebellyon and rygorous bloodshedding" (Jackson),

I cannot suggest, unless the later editors, and specially he of 1577, were more of Tories than Rodes. The minor alterations in this 1577 edition are so many that they must have been made, I fancy, by another hand after Rodes's death. Of the lines changed we may note Petit's

- "With moch flesshe & lytel bread / fyl not thy mouth lyke a barge,"
  "With much meate fyll not thy mouth like a barge" (Colwell),
- "With much meat fil not thy mouth like a barge" (Veale), altered and weakened to

"Cram not thy mouth to full, ne yet thy stomack ouercharge."—I. 271-2.

Also

"Lyght in speche and slowe in dedes / yuys it is great shame" let down to

"Slow in good deeds is great shame" (Colwell),

"Slow is good deeds is great shame" (Veale),

"But to be slow in godly deedes increaseth a mans shame" (Jackson).

But in 1. 539-40 the sentiment of the later text

"But in redressing things amis, thou highly God shalt please" is a decided improvement on the selfish ease of the earlier

"The lesse thou medlest / the better shalt thou please" (Petit);

"In leaste medlynge thou shalt most please" (Colwell),

"In least medling thou shalt moste please" (Veale), and the same may be said of the last lines of the 1557 edition,

"He that doth haunt to wysdoms bowre remaynes his countreys friend," beside those of the earlier texts,

- "He that wyll not for wysdome seke / is not his owne frende" (Petit),
- "He that seketh wisdom, is his owne frende" (Colwell),
- "He that seeketh Wisdome is his owne freend" (Veale).

If the present reprint should call forth a copy of East's edition of 1568, which must surely be now standing on the shelves of some library, we shall know perhaps whether Rodes is answerable for the alterations of the original text. Of the 1577 edition I have only altered the stops, and the printer has numbered the lines. The sidenotes are added for convenience sake, not because the text is hard enough to want a running commentary.

Comparing it with the earlier and later treatises on like subjects, two points of manners may be noticed; first, that handkerchiefs for the nose were then coming into vogue; and secondly, that toothpicks had not appeared. How to blow the nose in a genteel way before company without a handkerchief, was evidently a difficulty with early writers on deportment. They could only treat it as so many authors and editors have done since with their difficulties,—shirk it as if they knew all about it, and trust to their readers' ingenuity. The writer of the Poem on Freemasonry that Mr Halliwell has printed from MS. Bibl. Reg. 17 A. says, p. 38, l. 711-12,

From spyttynge and snyftynge kepe þe also, By privy avoydans let hyt go, that is, get on as well as you can. At dinner also he tells his pupil, 1. 743-6, Kepe byn hondes fayr and wel Fram fowle smogynge of by towel; beron bou schalt not by nese snyte, Ny at be mete by tobe bou pyke.

The Boke of Curtasye, ab. 1460, l. 89-92, says,
Yf þy nose þou clense, as may be-falle,
Loke þy honde þou clense wythe-alle;

Priuely with skyrt do hit away, Oper ellis thurghe thi tepet pat is so gay.

John Russell, likewise handkerchiefless, only says, l. 283-4,

Pike not youre nose / ne pat hit be droppynge with no peerlis clere, Snyff nor snitynge hyt to lowd / lest youre souerayne hit here.

But by Rodes's time the handkerchief had partially come in 1, as witness lines 261-4,

Blow not your nose on the napkin where you should wype your hande, But clense it in your handkercher, then passe you not your hand;<sup>2</sup> though the earlier method was still permitted, for we read at lines 289-92,

If thou must spit, or blow thy nose, keepe thou it out of sight,

Let it not lye vpon the ground,
but treade thou it out right.<sup>3</sup>

The Schoole of Vertue, A.D. 1577, directs the nose to be cleaned on a napkin once a day in the morning 4, like the shoes and teeth:

A napkin se that thou have in redines Thy nose to clense from all fylthynes.

Last comes The Booke of Demeanor, l. 45-52, in A.D. 1619,

Nor imitate with Socrates, to wipe thy snivelled nose

¹ Compare one of Henry VIII.'s New Year's gifts, ano xxxij, "Item, to ye kinges launder that gave ye king handkerchers xxs." MS. Arundel No. 97, fol. 167, back. The Duke of Somerset in the Tower, asks to have allowed him, among other things "ij. night kerchers; item vj. hande kerchers." The Duchess asks also for "vj. hand kerchers" besides "vj. froc kerchers, whereof iij. fyne." Ellis, Letters, series II. v. ii. p. 215.

<sup>2</sup> Blow not your nose in ye napkyn, where ye wype your hande Clense it in your handkercher, then passe ye not your bande. (Petit, &c.)

<sup>3</sup> If thou muste spyt or blowe thy nose / kepe it out of syght
Let it not lye on the grounde / but treade it out ryght. (Petit, &c.)

And yet in A.D. 1344-5 monks were expected to have handkerchiefs. Prof. Morley, abstracting chap. 17 of Richard de Bury's Philobiblon, says, "Perhaps you will see a bull-necked youth sitting sluggishly at his study, and when the cold is sharp at winter-time, and his wet nose, at the pinch of frost, runs into drops, he does not condescend to use his handkerchief till he has wetted the book beneath with its vile dew. I would give such a one, instead of a book, a cobbler's apron."—English Writers, vol. ii. Pt. I. p. 55. The continuation of the passage should be read.

4 Compare Rhodes, p. 73, l. 70.

Vpon thy cap, as he would doe, nor yet upon thy clothes. But keepe it clene with handkerchiffe, provided for the same, Not with thy fingers or thy sleeve, therein thou art too blame; but still 'filthiness or ordure' may be cast on the floor so that it be trodden out with haste, l. 105-8. Have not we cause to be grateful to Cotton and Silk?

With regard to the picking of teeth 1, some of the English and French books, like the Freemasonry one above, and the Boke of Curtasye, forbid it to be done at all at meals:

Clense not thi tethe at mete sittande, With knyfe ne stre, styk ne wande.—B. of C. 1. 93.

Others only forbid picking with the knyfe, as The Lytylle Childrenes Lytil Boke, 1. 39, Pyke not bi tethe with thy knyfe.

It was reserved for Rodes or his 1577 editor to reconcile the difficulties by a stroke of genius,

Pick not thy teeth with thy Knyfe nor with thy fyngers ende; But take a stick

(I hope the reader will think of a walking-stick as I did on first reading the passage) or some clene thyng, then doe you not offende, l. 248.2

Other details I must leave the reader to notice for himself.

Of Wolsey's chapel, Cavendish says (vol. i. p. 35, ed. Singer, 1825):

"Now I will declare unto you the officers of his chapel, and singing men of the same. First, he had there a Dean, who was always a great clerk and a divine; a Sub-Dean; a Repeater of the quire; a Gospeller, a Pisteller; and twelve singing Priests; of Scholars he had first, a Master of the children; twelve singing children; sixteen singing men; with a servant to attend upon the said children."

For an account of Cardinal Wolsey's Minstrels, see Stowe's Annals, p. 535; Hawkins' Hist. Music, iii. 67. The King borrowed Wolsey's minstrels, and made them play all night without resting, which killed the shalme-player, 'who was very excellent in that Instrument,'—unless the King's players poisoned him from jealousy.

Hawkins, Hist. of Music, iii. 417, note, says that the first regular establishment of a company of players was that of the children of Paul's in 1378, the next that of the parish clerks of London at Skinner's-well; the third that of the Children of the Royal Chapel under their master Edwards, by license from Queen Elizabeth; fourth, that of the Children of the Revels.

One of the last two is Shakespere's 'aiery of little children, little evases,' Hamlet, act ii. sc. 6.

NOTE TO PRICKS, P. LXXXIII.

What the pricks were I can't quite make out. T. Roberts, in the Glossary to his English Bowman, 1801, p. 292, has the following:

PRICK mark.—The white Mark or Target shot at.

PRICK-shooting. | —Shooting at prick Marks.

PRICKS.—The place where the pricks or marks are placed.

- shaft.—An arrow used in prick-shooting.

PRICKER.—The needle or instrument with which the target card is pricked or marked.

In the well-known Archery Statute, 33 Henry VIII. cap. 9, the word prick is used for target or butt, and prick-shaft for arrow. "That no man under the Age of Twenty-four Years shall shoot at any standing Prick, except it be at a Rover,* whereat he shall change at every Shoot his Mark, upon Pain [to forfeit] for every Shoot doing the contrary iv. d.; and that no Person above the said Age of Twenty-four Years shall shoot at any Mark of eleven score Yards or under, with any Prick-shaft or Flight under the Pain to forfeit for every Shoot, Six shillings Eight-pence . . . . and also that Butts be made on this side the Feast of St Michael the Archangel next coming in every City, Town and Place, by the Inhabitants of every such City, Town and Place according to the Law of ancient Time used." Palsgrave has 'Pricke, a marke—marque,' and Prompt. 'Prykke, merke, meta.'

It seems clear that the butts were for near or short shooting, and the pricks for long ranges, which is, I suppose, the meaning of "a mark of compass †."

"Moll. Out upon him, what a suiter have I got, I am sorry you are so bad an Archer, sir.

Eare. Why Bird, why Bird?

Moll. Why, to shoote at Buts, vvhen you shou'd use prick-shafts, short shooting 1633, Rowley. A Match at Midnight, Act ii. sc. 1 (ref. in Richardson).

"The Cornish men," says Carew +, are "well skilled in near shooting, and in wellaimed shooting;—the butts made them perfect in the one, and the roaving in the other, for the prickes, the first corrupters of archery through too much preciseness, were formerly scarcely known, and little practised."

† And first for shooting in the long-bowe a man must observe these few rules: first that hee haue a good eye to behold and discerne his marke, a knowing judgment to vnderstand the distance of ground to take the true aduantage of a side-winde, and to know in what compasse [trajectory] his arrow must flie. G. M[arkham], Countrey Contentments, 1615, p. 107, referred to by Strutt.

Ascham seems to use the word pricks for—1. the uprights of a target, or a pair of targets, one at the top and the other at the bottom of the range, as in the engraving in Strutt; 2. the target itself; and, 3. the white in the centre of it, or piece of wood (Halliwell),

Off the marke he welde not fayle,

He cleffed the preke on thre.—Robin Hood, i. 91.

I. and II. 'A pair of winding pricks' is one of the 'things that hinder a man which looketh at his mark to shoot straight,' ib. p. 161. 'If the pricks stand of a straight plain ground, they be the best to shoot at. If the mark stand on a hill-side. . a man's eye shall think that to be straight which is crooked,' ib. p. 159, pricks being here equivalent to mark. 'To shoot straight, they have invented some ways . . to have some notable thing betwixt the marks; and once I saw a good archer which did east off his gear, and laid his quiver with it, even in the midway betwixt the pricks,' ib. p. 159. (Markham, in his Art of Archerie, 1634 (which seems little more than his own Introduction, and a copy of parts of Ascham's Toxophilus), has 'betwixt the marks' in both places: p. 165. 'And once I heard in Cambridge the down-marke at Tweluescore-prick for the space of three markes was thirteene score and an halfe, p. 151.) 'I suppose it be a great deal more pleasure also to see a soul fly in Plato, than a shaft fly at the pricks,' ib. p. 12. 'You may stand sometime at the pricks, and look on them which shoot best,' ib. p. 90.

'I fortuned to come with three or four that went to shoot at the pricks,' p. 11; 'the customable shooting at home at butts and pricks,' p. 82. 'You must take heed also, if ever you shoot where one of the marks, or both, stands a little short of a high wall, for there you may be easily beguiled. . . For the wind which cometh indeed against you, redoundeth back again at the wall, and whirleth back to the prick, and a little farther, and then turneth again,' p. 156. 'Use of pricking, and desire of near shooting at home, are the only causes of strong shooting in war,' p. 80.

III. In the singular, 'the prick, at other times called the white, is the white spot or point in the midst of the mark,' says Dr Giles, ib. p. 91, in a note to 'at all times to hit the prick, shall . . no shooter ever do.' 'The best end in shooting, which you call hitting of the prick,' p. 91. 'And by & by he lifteth his arme of pricke heyght.' (Folio 54, ed. 1571.) But yet at p. 99, 'what handling belongeth to the mark? Tox. To mark his standing, to shoot compass . . to consider the nature of the prick, in hills and dales, in straight plains and winding places, and also to espy his mark.' 'Other men use to espy some mark almost a bow wide of the prick, and then go about to keep himself on the hand that the prick is on,' p. 160.

Having referred the question of the various meanings of the word prick to the best authority in Britain, Mr Peter Muir, Bowmaker to the Royal Archers at Edinburgh, he answers:—1st. See Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, page 62, ed. 1838, "The marks usually shot at by Archers for pastime were Butts, prickes, and Roavers." The Butt, we are told, was a level mark, &c. The Pricke was 'a marke of compass,' but certain in its distance, and to this mark strong swift arrows of one flight were best suited. 2nd. In Roberts' English Bowman, page 241 (London, 1801), is the following, in an article, sect. v. 'Of Prick shooting:"—"In archery we frequently find mention of prick shooting. Prick-marks and Prick-shafts are noticed in Stat. of the 33rd H. VIII. c. 9, before cited. The latter, we know, are arrows considerably lighter than those used in other kinds of shooting except flight shooting. The ancient prick-mark was frequently called the White, and consisted probably of a card or piece of stiff white paper. In the Garland, indeed, we read of prick wands and willow wands, probably peeled sticks. One thing we may collect, which distinguishes this kind of shooting from others, namely, that the prick or mark was generally fixed to one spot, and at a less distance, than in other kinds of shooting, and not varied during the shooting. Hence the Statute terms it a standing prick, or mark. Prick being a Saxon word for point, seems to indicate that this kind of shooting was chiefly confined to small marks, &c. Carew observes it 'required too much preciseness.' Holinshed and Ascham allude to it as 'shooting round compass.' The marks used for this kind of shooting for two centuries past consisted either of a small circular piece of white paper fixed to a post (wand) or of a target. Modern prick shooting is practised by the Royal Archers at Edinburgh, and is their favourite, at a small round target fixed at 180 yards. Within 30 years they shot at a square mark of canvas on a frame, and called 'the Clout;' and an arrow striking the target is still called 'a clout.' They count arrows in the ground within four bow-lengths, or 24 feet of the target, the nearest arrow only counting, which is decided by a cord from the centre of the target, and may have been the origin of the 'mark of compass.' The Royal Archers still shoot at Butts 100 feet at the small paper which is enclosed [four inches in diameter, with a white dot as a centre, and four rings outside it]. Till within these few years the Kilwinning Archers (the oldest club in Britain) shot Butts at a white paper two inches in diameter. Lately they adopted a mark 12 inches, with a two-inch white in the centre, and other two rings outside of different values."

Mr Wright glosses pricks as "a game like bowls." Bowls was a game known in early times. Among the sports to make a young lady forget her lover is this,

A hundred knightes, truly told, Shall play with bowls in alleys cold, Your diseases to drive away.

Squyer of Lowe Degre, Ellis. Spec. p. 337.

If any reader of this note feels certain as to the meaning of pryckis, he knows more about it than I do.

PREFACE TO RUSSELL.

Though this Boke of Nurture by John Russell is the most complete and elaborate of its kind, I have never seen it mentioned by name in any of the many books and essays on early manners and customs, food and dress, that have issued from the press. My own introduction to it was due to a chance turning over, for another purpose, of the leaves of the MS. containing it. Mr Wheatley then told me of Ritson's reference to it in his Bibliographica Poetica, p. 96; and when the text was all printed, a reference in The Glossary of Domestic Architecture (v. III. Pt. I. p. 76, note, col. 2) sent me to MS. Sloane 1315 1—in the Glossary stated to have been written in 1452—which proved to be a different and unnamed version of Russell. Then the Sloane Catalogue disclosed a third MS., No. 20272, and the earliest of the three, differing rather less than No. 1315 from Russell's text, but still anonymous. I have therefore to thank for knowledge of the MSS. that special Providence which watches over editors as well as children and drunkards, and have not on this occasion to express gratitude to Ritson and Warton, to whom every lover of Early English Manuscripts is under such deep obligations, and whose guiding hands (however faltering) in Poetry have made us long so often for the like in Prose. Would that one of our many Historians of English Literature had but conceived the idea of cataloguing the materials for his History before sitting down to write it! Would that a wise Government would commission another Hardy to do for English Literature what the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records is now doing for English History—give us a list of the MSS, and early printed books of it! What time and trouble such a Catalogue would save!

But to return to John Russell and his Boke. He describes himself at the beginning and end of his treatise as Usher and Marshal to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, delighting in his work in youth, quitting it only when compelled by crooked age, and then anxious to train up worthy successors in the art and mystery of managing a well-appointed household. A man evidently who knew his work in every detail, and did it all with pride; not boastful, though upholding his office against rebellious cooks<sup>1</sup>, putting them down with imperial dignity, "we may allow and disallow; our office is the chief!" A simple-minded religious man too, -as the close of his Treatise shows,—and one able to appreciate the master he served, the "prynce fulle royalle," the learned and munificent Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, the patron of Lydgate, Occleve, Capgrave, Withamstede, Leonard Aretine, Petrus Candidus, Petrus de Monte, Tito Livio, Antoyne de Beccara, &c. &c., the lover of Manuscripts, the first great donor to the Oxford University Library which Bodley revived 2, "that prince peerless," as Russell calls him, a man who, with all his faults, loved books and authors, and shall be respected by us as he was by Lydgate. But our business is with the Marshal, not the Master, and we will hear what John Russell says of himself in his own verse.

an vsshere y Am / ye may beholde / to a prynce of highe degre, pat enioyethe to enforme & teche / alle po thatt wille thrive & thee,

To teche vertew and connynge, me thynketh hit charitable, for moche youthe in connynge / is baren & fulle vnable. (l. 3-9.)

At the end of his Boke he gives us a few more details about himself and his work in life:

Now good son, y have shewed the / & brought pe in vre, to know pe Curtesie of court / & these pow may take in cure, In pantry / botery / or cellere / & in kervynge a-fore a sovereyne demewre,

For we may allow & dissalow / oure office is be cheeff In cellere & spicery / & the Cooke, be he loothe or leeff. (l. 1173-82.)

Further on, at line 1211, he says,

"Moore of pis connynge y Cast not me to contreve: my tyme is not to tary, hit drawest fast to eve. pis tretyse pat y haue entitled, if it ye entende to preve, y assayed me self in youthe with-outen any greve. while y was yonge y-noughe & lusty in dede, y enioyed pese maters foreseid / & to lerne y toke good hede; but croked age hathe compelled me / & leue court y must nede. perfore, sone, assay thy self / & god shalle be py spede."

And again, at line 1227,

"Now, good son, thy self, with other pat shalle pe succede, whiche pus boke of nurture shalle note / lerne, & ouer rede, pray for the sowle of Iohn Russelle, pat god do hym mede, Som tyme seruaunde with duke vmfrey, duc¹ of Glowcetur in dede.

AMEN."

As to his Boke, besides what is quoted above, John Russell says,

Go forthe lytelle boke, and lowly bow me commende vnto alle yonge gentilmen / bat lust to lerne or entende, and specially to bem bat han exsperience, prayinge be[m] to amende and correcte bat is amysse, bere as y fawte or offende.

(1. 1235-50.)

If John Russell was the writer of the Epilogue quoted above, lines 1235-50, then it would seem that in this Treatise he only corrected and touched up some earlier Book of Norture which he had used in his youth, and which, if Sloane 2027 be not its original, may be still extant in its primal state in Mr Arthur Davenport's MS., "How to serve a Lord," said to be of the fourteenth century, and now supposed to be stowed away in a hayloft with the owner's other books, awaiting the rebuilding and fitting of a fired house. I only hope this MS. may prove to be Russell's original, as Mr Davenport has most kindly promised to let me copy and print it for the Society. Meantime it is possible to consider John Russell's Book of Norture as his own. For early poets and writers of verse seem to have liked this fiction of attributing their books to other people, and it is seldom that you find them acknowledging that they have imagined their Poems on their own heads, as Hampole has it in his Pricke of Conscience, p. 239, l. 8874 (ed. Morris, Philol. Soc.). Even Mr Tennyson makes believe that Everard Hall wrote his Morte d' Arthur, and some Leonard his Golden Year. On the other hand, the existence of the two Sloane MSS. is more consistent with Russell's own statement (if it is his own, and not his adapter's in the Harleian MS.) that he did not write his Boke himself, but only touched up another man's. Desiring to let every reader judge for himself on this point, I shall try to print in a separate text2, for convenience of comparison, the Sloane MS. 1315, which differs most from Russell, and which the Keeper of the MSS. at the British Museum considers rather earlier (ab. 1440-50 A.D.) than the MS. of Russell (ab. 1460-70 A.D.), while of the earliest of the three, Sloane MS. 2027 (ab. 1430-40 A.D.), the nearer to Russell in phraseology, I shall give a collation of all important variations. If any reader of the present text compares the Sloanes with it, he will find the subject matter of all three alike, except in these particulars:

Sloane 1315.

Omits lines 1-4 of Russell.

Inserts after l. 48 of R. a passage about behaviour which it nearly repeats, where Russell puts it, at l. 276, Symple Condicions.

Omits Russell's stanza, l. 305-8, about 'these cuttid galauntes with their codware.'

Omits a stanza, l. 319-24, p. 137.

Contracts R.'s chapter on Fumositees, p. 139.

Omits R.'s Lenvoy, under Fried Metes, p. 149-50.

Transfers R.'s chapters on Sewes on Fische Dayes and Sawcis for Fishe, 1.819-54, p. 171-5, to the end of his chapter on Kervyng of Fishe, 1.649, p. 161.

Gives different Soteltes (or Devices at the end of each course), and omits Russell's description of his four of the Four Seasons, p. 164-70; and does not alter the metre of the lines describing the Dinners as he does, p. 167-171.

Winds up at the end of the Bathe or Stewe, l. 1000, p. 183, R., with two stanzas of peroration. As there is no Explicit, the MS. may be incomplete, but the next page is blank.

Sloane 2027.

Contains these lines.

Inserts and omits as Sl. 1315 does, but the wording is often different.

Contains this stanza (fol. 42, b.).

Contracts the Fumositees too (fol. 45 and back).

Has one verse of Lenvoy altered (fol. 45 b.).

Transfers as Sl. 1315 does (see fol. 48).

Differs from R., nearly as Sl. 1315 does.

Has 3 winding-up stanzas, as if about to end as Sloane 1315 does, but yet goes on (omitting the Bathe Medicinable) with the Vssher and Marshalle, R. p. 185, and ends suddenly, at 1. 1062, p. 188, R., in the middle of the chapter.

In occasional length of line, in words and rhymes, Sloane 1315 differs far more from Russell than Sloane 2027, which has Russell's long lines and rhymes throughout, so far as a hurried examination shows.

But the variations of both these Sloane MSS, are to me more like those from an original MS, of which our Harleian Russell is a copy, than of an original which Russell altered. Why should the earliest Sloane 2027 start with "An vsschere .y. am / as ye may se: to a prynce Of hyghe degre" if in its original the name of the prince was not stated at the end, as Russell states it, to show that he was not gammoning his readers? Why does Sloane 1315 omit lines in some of its stanzas, and words in some of its lines, that the Harleian Russell enables us to fill up? Why does it too make its writer refer to the pupil's lord and sovereign, if in its original the author did not clench his teaching by asserting, as Russell does, that he had served one? This Sloane 1315 may well have been copied by a man like Wynkyn de Worde, who wished not to show the real writer of the treatise. On the whole, I incline to believe that John Russell's Book of Norture was written by him, and that either the Epilogue to it was a fiction of his, or was written by the superintender of the particular copy in the Harleian MS. 4011, Russell's own work terminating with the Amen! after line 1234.

But whether we consider Russell's Boke another's, or as in the main his own,—allowing that in parts he may have used previous pieces on the subjects he treats of, as he has used Stans Puer (or its original) in his Symple Condicions, l. 277-304,—if we ask what the Boke contains, the answer is, that it is a complete Manual for the Valet, Butler, Footman, Carver, Taster, Dinner-arranger, Hippocrasmaker, Usher and Marshal of the Nobleman of the time when the work was written, the middle of the fifteenth century.—For I take the date of the composition of the work to be somewhat earlier than that of the MS. it is here printed from, and suppose Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, "imprisoned and murdered 1447," to have been still alive when his Marshal penned it.—Reading it, we see "The Good Duke" rise and dress 1, go to Chapel and meals, entertain at feasts in Hall, then undress and retire to rest; we hear how his head was combed with an ivory comb, his stomacher warmed, his petycote put on, his slippers brown as the waterleech got ready, his privy-seat prepared, and his urinal kept in waiting; how his bath was made, his

table laid, his guests arranged, his viands carved, and his salt smoothed!; we are told how nearly all the birds that fly, the animals that walk the earth, the fish that swim in river and sea, are food for the pot: we hear of dishes strange to us2, beaver's tail, osprey, brewe, venprides, whale, swordfish, seal, torrentyne, pety perveis or perneis, and gravell of beef3. Bills of fare for flesh and fish days are laid before us; admired Sotiltees or Devices are described; and he who cares to do so may fancy for himself the Duke and all his brilliant circle feasting in Hall, John Russell looking on, and taking care that all goes right.4 I am not going to try my hand at the sketch, as I do not write for men in the depths of that deducated Philistinism which lately made a literary man say to one of our members on his printing a book of the 15th century, "Is it possible that you care how those barbarians, our ancestors, lived?" If any one who takes up this tract, will not read it through, the loss is his; those who do work at it will gladly acknowledge their gain. That it is worthy of the attention of all to whose ears tidings of Early England come with

<sup>2</sup> Randle Holme's tortoise and snails, in No. 12 of his Second Course, Bk. III., p. 60, col. 1, are stranger still. "Tortoise need not seem strange to an alderman who eats turtle, nor to a West Indian who eats terrapin. Nor should snails, at least to the city of Paris, which devours myriads, nor of Ulm, which breeds millions for the table. Tortoises are good; snails excellent." Henry H. Gibbs.

"It is nought all good to the goost that the gut asketh" we may well say with William who wrote Piers Ploughmon, v. 1, p. 17, l. 533-4, after reading the lists of things eatable, and dishes, in Russell's pages. The later feeds that Phylotheus Physiologus exclaims against * are nothing to them: "What an Hodg-potch do most that have Abilities make in their Stomachs, which must wonderfully oppress and distract Nature: For if you should take Flesh of various sorts, Fish of as many, Cabbages, Parsnops, Potatoes, Mustard, Butter, Cheese, a Pudden that contains more then ten several Ingredents, Tarts, Sweet-meats, Custards, and add to these Churries, Plums, Currans, Apples, Capers, Olives, Anchovies, Mangoes, Cavare, &c., and jumble them altogether into one Mass, what Eye would not loath, what Stomach not abhor such a Gallemaufrey? yet this is done every Day, and counted Gallent Entertainment."

<sup>4</sup> See descriptions of a dinner in Parker's Domestic Architecture of the Middle Ages, iii. 74-87 (with a good cut of the Cupboard, Dais, &c.), and in Wright's Domestic Manners and Customs. Russell's description of the Franklin's dinner, 1. 795-818, should be noted for the sake of Chaucer's Franklin, and we may also notice that Russell orders butter and fruits to be served on an empty stomach before dinner, 1. 77, as a whet to the appetite. Modus Cenandi serves potage first, and keeps the fruits, with the spices and biscuits, for dessert. Part II. p. 38, 1. 54.

welcome sound across the wide water of four hundred years, I unhesitatingly assert. That it has interested me, let the time its notes have taken on this, a fresh subject to me, testify. If any should object to the extent of them <sup>1</sup>, or to any words in them that may offend his ear, let him excuse them for the sake of what he thinks rightly present. There are still many subjects and words insufficiently illustrated in the comments, and for the names venprides (l. 820); sprotis, (?sprats, as in Sloane 1315), and torrentille (l. 548); almond iardyne (l. 744); ginger colombyne, valadyne, and maydelyne (l. 132-3); leche dugard, &c., I have not been able to find meanings. Explanations and helps I shall gladly receive, in the hope that they may appear in another volume of like kind for which I trust soon to find more MSS. Of other MSS. of like kind I also ask for notice.

The reason for reprinting Wynkyn de Worde's Boke of Keruynge, which I had not at first thought of, was because its identity of phrase and word with many parts of Russell,—a thing which came on me with a curious feeling of surprise as I turned over the leaves,—made it certain that de Worde either abstracted in prose Russell's MS., chopping off his lines' tails,—adding also bits here<sup>2</sup>, leaving out others there,—or else that both writers copied a common original. The most cursory perusal will show this to be the case. It was not alone by happy chance that when Russell had said

O Fruture viant / Fruter sawge byñ good / bettur is Frutur powche; Appulle fruture / is good hoot / but þe cold ye not towche (l. 501-2) Wynkyn de Worde delivered himself of

- "Fruyter vaunte, fruyter say be good; better is fruyter pouche; apple fruyters ben good good hote / and all colde fruters, touche not,"
- <sup>1</sup> The extracts from Bulleyn, Borde, Vaughan, and Harington are in the nature of notes, but their length gave one the excuse of printing them in bigger type as parts of a Text. In the same way I should have treated the many extracts from Laurens Andrewe, had I not wanted them intermixed with the other notes, and been also afraid of swelling this book to an unwieldy size.
- <sup>2</sup> The Termes of a Kerver so common in MSS, are added, and the subsequent arrangement of the modes of carving the birds under these Termes, p. 15-17. The Easter-Day feast (p. 14) is also new, the bit why the heads of pheasants, partridges, &c., are unwholesome—' for they etc in theyr degrees foule thynges, as wormes, todes, and other suche'—and several other pieces.

altering not's place to save the rhyme; or that when Russell had said of the Crane

The Crane is a fowle / that stronge is with to fare; be whynges ye areyse / fulle large evyn thare; of hyre trompe in be brest / loke but ye beware

Wynkyn de Worde directed his Carver thus: "A crane, reyse the wynges fyrst, & beware of the trumpe in his brest." Let any one compare the second and third pages of Wynkyn de Worde's text with lines 48-137 of Russell, and he will make up his mind that the old printer was either one of the most barefaced plagiarists that ever lived, or that the same original was before him and Russell too. May Mr Davenport's hayloft, or some learned antiquarian, soon decide the alternative for us! The question was too interesting a "Curiosity of Literature" not to be laid before our Members, and therefore The Boke of Keruynge was reprinted—from the British Museum copy of the second edition of 1513—with added side-notes and stops, and the colophon as part of the title.

Then came the necessary comparison of Russell's Boke with the Boke of Curtasye, edited by Mr Halliwell from the Sloane MS. 1986 for the Percy Society. Contrasts had to be made with it, in parts, many times in a page; the tract was out of print and probably in few Members' hands; it needed a few corrections, and was worthy of a thousand times wider circulation than it had had; therefore a new edition from the MS. was added to this volume. Relying on Members reading it for themselves, I have not in the notes indicated all the points of coincidence and difference between this Boke and Russell's. It is of wider scope than Russell's, takes in the duties of outdoor officers and servants as well as indoor, and maybe those of a larger household; it has also a fyrst Boke on general manners, and a Second Book on what to learn at school, how to behave at church, &c., but it does not go into the great detail as to Meals and Dress which is the special value of Russell's Boke, nor is it associated with a writer who tells us something of himself, or a noble who in all our English Middle Age has so bright a name on which we can look back as "good Duke Humphrey." This personality adds an interest to work that anonymity and its writings of equal value can never have; so that we may be well content to let the Curtasye be used in illustration of the Nurture. The MS. of the Curtasye is about 1460 A.D., Mr Bond says. I have dated it wrongly on the half-title.

The Booke of Demeanor was "such a little one" that I was tempted to add it to mark the general introduction of handkerchiefs. Having printed it, arose the question, 'Where did it come from?' No Weste's Schoole of Vertue could I find in catalogues, or by inquiring of the Duke of Devonshire, Mr W. C. Hazlitt, at the Bodleian, &c. Seager's Schoole of Vertue was the only book that turned up, and this I accordingly reprinted, as Weste's Booke of Demeanor seemed to be little more than an abstract of the first four Chapters of Seager cut down and rewritten. We must remember that books of this kind, which we look on as sources of amusement, as more or less of a joke, were taken seriously by the people they were written for. That The Schoole of Vertue, for instance—whether Seager's or Weste's —was used as a regular school-book for boys, let Io. Brinsley witness. In his Grammar Schoole of 1612, pp. 17, 18, he enumerates the "Bookes to bee first learned of children":-1. their Abcie, and Primer. 2. The Psalms in metre, 'because children wil learne that booke with most readinesse and delight through the running of the metre, as it is found by experience. 3. Then the Testament.' 4. "If any require any other little booke meet to enter children; the Schoole of Vertue is one of the principall, and easiest for the first enterers, being full of precepts of civilitie, and such as children will soone learne and take a delight in, thorow the roundnesse of the metre, as was sayde before of the singing Psalmes: And after it the Schoole of good manners, called, the new Schoole of Vertue, leading the childe as by the hand, in the way of all good manners." I make no apology for including reprints of these little-known books in an Early English Text. Qui s'excuse s'accuse; and if these Tracts do not justify to any reader their own appearance here, I believe the fault is not theirs. A poem on minding what you say, which Mr Aldis

Wright has kindly sent me, some Maxims on Behaviour, &c., which all end in -ly, and Roger Ascham's Advice to his brother-in-law on entering a nobleman's service, finish Part I.

The woodcuts Messrs Virtue have allowed me to have copies of for a small royalty, and they will help the reader to realize parts of the text better than any verbal description. The cuts are not of course equal to the beautiful early illuminations they are taken from, but they are near enough for the present purpose. The dates of those from British Museum MSS. are given on the authority of trustworthy officers of the Manuscript Department. The dates of the non-Museum MSS. are copied from Mr Wright's text. The line of description under the cuts is also from Mr Wright's text, except in one instance where he had missed the fact of the cut representing the Marriage Feast at Cana of Galilee, with its six water-pots.

The MS. of Russell is on thick folio paper, is written in a close—and seemingly unprofessional—hand, fond of making elaborate capitals to the initials of its titles, and thus occasionally squeezing up into a corner the chief word of the title, because the T of The preceding has required so much room.\(^1\) The MS. has been read through by a corrector with a red pen, pencil, or brush, who has underlined all the important words, touched up the capitals, and evidently believed in the text. Perhaps the corrector, if not writer, was Russell himself. I hope it was, for the old man must have enjoyed emphasizing his precepts with those red scores; but then he would hardly have allowed a space to remain blank in line 204, and have left his Panter-pupil in doubt as to whether he should lay his "white payne" on the left or right of his knives. Every butler, drill-serjeant, and vestment-cleric, must feel the thing to be impossible. The corrector was not John Russell.

To all those gentlemen who have helped me in the explanations of words, &c.,—Mr Gillett, Dr Günther, Mr Atkinson, Mr Skeat, Mr Cockayne, Mr Gibbs, Mr Way, the Hon. G. P. Marsh—and to Mr E. Brock, the most careful copier of the MS., my best thanks are due, and are hereby tendered. Would that thanks of any of us now profiting by their labours could reach the ears of that prince of Dictionary-makers, Cotgrave, of Frater Galfridus, Palsgrave, Hexham, Philipps, and the rest of the lexicographers who enable us to understand the records of the past! Would too that an adequate expression of gratitude could reach the ears of the lost Nicolas, and of Sir Frederic Madden, for their carefully indexed Household Books,—to be contrasted with the unwieldy mass and clueless mazes of the Antiquaries' Household Ordinances, the two volumes of the Roxburghe Howard Household Books, and Percy's Northumberland Household Book¹!—They will be spared the pains of the special place of torment reserved for editors who turn out their books without glossary or index. May that be their sufficient reward!

HUMPHREY, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER.

Mr C. H. Pearson has referred me to a most curious treatise on the state of Duke Humphrey's body and health in 1404 (that is, 1424, says Hearne), by Dr Gilbert Kymer, his physician, part of which (chapters 3 and 19, with other pieces) was printed by Hearne in the appendix to his Liber Niger, v. ii. p. 550 (ed. alt.), from a MS. then in Sir Hans Sloane's Collection, and now Sloane 4 in the British Museum. It begins at p. 127 or folio 63, and by way of giving the reader a notion of its contents, I add here a copy of the first page of the MS.

Sharon Turner (Hist. of England, v. 498, note 35) says euphemistically of the part of this treatise printed by Hearne, that "it implies how much the Duke had injured himself by the want of self-government. It describes him in his 45th year, as having a rheumatic affection in his chest, with a daily morning cough. It mentions that his nerves had become debilitated by the vehemence of his laborious exercises, and from an immoderate frequency of pleasurable indulgences. It advises him to avoid north winds after a warm sun, sleep after dinner, exercise after society, frequent bathings, strong wine, much fruit, the flesh of swine, and the weakening gratification to which he was addicted. The last (chapter), 'De Deo semper colendo, ut sanitatem melius tueatur,' is worthy the recollection of us all." It is too late to print the MS. in the present volume, but in a future one it certainly ought to appear.

Of Duke Humphrey's character and proceedings after the Pope's bull had declared his first marriage void, Sharon Turner further says:

"Gloucester had found the rich dowry of Jacqueline wrenched from his grasp, and, from so much opposition, placed beyond his attaining, and he had become satiated with her person. One of her attendants, Eleanor Cobham, had affected his variable fancy; and tho' her character had not been spotless before, and she had surrendered her honour to his own importunities, yet he suddenly married her, exciting again the wonder of the world by his conduct, as in that proud day every nobleman felt that he was acting incongruously with the blood he had sprung from. His first wedlock was impolitic, and this unpopular; and both were hasty and self-willed, and destructive of all reputation for that dignified prudence, which his elevation to the regency of the most reflective and enlightened nation in Europe demanded for its example and its welfare. This injudicious conduct announced too much imperfection of intellect, not to give every advantage to his political rival the bishop of Winchester, his uncle, who was now struggling for the command of the royal mind, and for the predominance in the English government. He and the duke of Exeter were the illegitimate brothers of Henry the Fourth, and had been first intrusted with the king's education. The internal state of the country, as to its religious feelings and interest, contributed to increase the differences which now arose between the prelate and his nephew, who is described by a contemporary as sullying his cultivated understanding and good qualities, by an ungoverned and diseasing love of unbecoming pleasures. It is strange, that in so old a world of the same continuing system always repeating the same lesson, any one should be ignorant that the dissolute vices are the destroyers of personal health, comfort, character, and permanent influence."1

After narrating Duke Humphrey's death, Turner thus sums up his character:—

"The duke of Gloucester, amid failings that have been before alluded to, has acquired the pleasing epithet of The Good; and has been extolled for his promotion of the learned or deserving clergy. Fond of literature, and of literary conversation, he patronized men of talent and erudition. One is called, in a public record, his poet and orator; and Lydgate prefaces one of his voluminous works, with a panegyric upon him, written during the king's absence on his French coronation, which presents to us the qualities for which, while he was living, the poet found him remarkable, and thought fit to commend him."

These verses are in the Royal MS. 18 D 4, in the British Museum, and are here printed from the MS., not from Turner:—

"Herzog von Glocester nennen sie den Fürsten, Der trotz des hohen Rangs und hoher Ehren Im Herzen nährt ein dauerndes Gelüsten Nach Allem, was die alten Bücher lehren; So glücklich gross ist hierin sein Begehren, Dass tugendsam er seine Zeit verbringt Und trunkne Trägheit männiglich bezwingt."

The reader should by all means consult this chapter, which is headed "Herzog

P.S. When printing the 1513 edition of Wynkyn de Worde's Boke of Keruynge, I was not aware of the existence of a copy of the earlier edition in the Cambridge University Library. Seeing this copy afterwards named in Mr Hazlitt's new catalogue, I asked a friend to compare the present reprint with the first edition, and the result follows.

Humfrid von Glocester. Bruchstück eines Fürstenlebens im fünfzehnten Jahrhunderte" (Humphrey Duke of Gloucester. Sketch of the life of a prince in the fifteenth century). There is an excellent English translation of this book, published by Macmillan, and entitled "Pictures of Old England."—W. W. Skeat.

NOTE ON THE 1508 EDITION OF

The Boke of Keruynge,

BY THE REV. WALTER SKEAT, M.A.

The title-page of the older edition, of 1508, merely contains the words, "¶ Here begynneth the boke of Keruynge;" and beneath them is—as in the second edition of 1513—a picture of two ladies and two gentlemen at dinner, with an attendant bringing a dish, two servants at a side table, and a jester. The colophon tells us that it was "Enprynted by wynkyn de worde at London in Flete strete at the sygne of the sonne. The yere of our lorde M.CCCCC.VIII;" beneath which is Wynkyn de Worde's device, as in the second edition.

The two editions resemble each other very closely, running page for page throughout, and every folio in the one begins at the same place as in the other. Thus the word "moche" is divided into mo-che in both editions, the "-che" beginning Fol. A ii. b. Neither is altogether free from misprints, but these are not very numerous nor of much importance. It may be observed that marks of contraction are hardly ever used in the older edition, the word "ye" being written "the" at length, and instead of "haged" we find "hanged." On the whole, the first edition would seem to be the more carefully printed, but the nature of the variations between them will be best understood by an exact collation of the first two folios (pp. 265-7 of the present edition), where the readings of the first edition are denoted by the letter A. The only variations are these:—

P. 265. lyft that swanne] lyfte that swanne A (a misprint).

frusshe that chekyn] fruche that chekyn A.

thye all maner of small byrdes] A omits of.

fynne that cheuen] fyne that cheuen A.

transsene that ele] trassene that ele A.

Here hendeth, &c.] Here endeth, &c. A. Butler] Butteler A.

- P. 266, l. 5. trenchoures trenchours A.
  - l. 12. hanged] hanged A.
  - 1. 15. cannelles] canelles A.
  - 1. 18, 19. y<sup>e</sup>] the (in both places) A.
  - 1. 20. seasous] seasons A.
  - 1. 23. after] After A.
  - 1. 27. good] goot A.
  - 1. 30. ye] the A.
  - 1. 34. modon] modon A.
  - 1. 36. sourayne] souerayne A.

P. 267. ye] the A (several times).

1. 5. wyll] wyl A.

1. 9. rede] reed A. reboyle] reboyle not A.

1. 12. the reboyle] they reboyle A.

1. 17. lessynge] lesynge A.

1. 20. campolet] campolet A.

l. 21. tyer] tyerre A.

1. 22. ypocras] Ipocras A (and in the next line, and l. 26).

1. 24. gynger] gynger A.

1. 27. ren] hange A.

1. 29. your] youre A.

In 1. 33, A has paradico, as in the second edition.

It will be readily seen that these variations are chiefly in the spelling, and of a trivial character. The only ones of any importance are, on p. 5, lyste (which is a misprint) for lyst, and trassene for transsene (cp. Fr. transon, a truncheon, peece of, Cot.); on p. 6, goot for good is well worth notice (if any meaning can be assigned to goot), as the direction to beware of good strawberries is not obvious; on p. 7, we should note lesynge for lessynge, and hange for ren, the latter being an improvement, though ren makes sense, as basins hung by cords on a perch may, like curtains hung on a rod, be said to run on it. The word ren was probably caught up from the line above it in reprinting.

The following corrections are also worth making, and are made on the authority of the first edition :-

P. 269, l. 10, For treachour read trenchour.

1. 23. For so read se.

1. 24. For se' read se.
 P. 270, l. 1. onyl on A.

1. 7. For it read is.

1.15. ye so] and soo A. (No doubt owing to confusion between & and ye.)

l. 16. your] you A.

29. For bo read be.
 P. 271, l. 20. For wich read with.

P. 272, l. 3. For fumosytees read fumosytees.

 7. For pygous read pynyons (whence it appears that the pinion-bones, not pigeon's-bones, are meant).

1.25. The word "reyse" is quite plain.

P. 274, Il. 18, &c. There is some variation here; the first edition has, after the word soverayne, the following:—"laye trenchours before hym / yf he be a grete estate, lay fyue trenchours / & he be of a lower degre, foure trenchours / & of an other degre, thre trenchours," &c. This is better; the second edition is clearly wrong about the five trenchers. This seems another error made in reprinting, the words lower degre being wrongly repeated.

P. 275, l. 6. It may be proper to note the first edition also has broche.

P. 279, l. 8. For for ye read for they.

P. 279, l. 27. the[y]; in A they is printed in full.

P. 280, l. 18. For raysyus read raysyns.

P. 281, l. 21. For slytee read slytte.

P. 283, Il. 10, 18. carpentes carpettes A.

1. 14. shall] shake A.

1. 23. blanked blanket A.

Nearly all the above corrections have already been made in the side-notes. Only two of them are of any importance, viz. the substitution of punyons on p. 12, and the variation of reading on p. 14; in the latter case perhaps neither edition seems quite right, though the first edition is quite intelligible.

In our Cambridge edition (see p. 24, l. 5) this line about the pope is carefully struck out, and the grim side-note put "lower down", with tags to show to what estate he and the cardinal and bishops ought to be degraded!

The Nadies & Men of Queen Elizabeth's Court.

"I might here (if I would, or had sufficient disposition of matter conceived of the same) make a large discourse of such honorable ports, of such grave councellors, and noble personages, as give their dailie attendance vpon the quéenes maiestie there. I could in like sort set foorth a singular commendation of the vertuous beautie, or beautifull vertues of such ladies and gentlewomen as wait vpon hir person, betweene whose amiable countenances and costlinesse of attire, there séemeth to be such a dailie conflict and contention, as that it is verie difficult for me to gesse, whether of the twaine shall beare awaie the preheminence. This further is not to be omitted, to the singular commend- English courtiers ation of both sorts and sexes of our courtiers here in the best learned & the worst England, that there are verie few of them, which haue liuers.

not the vse and skill of sundrie speaches, beside an excellent veine of writing before time not regarded. Would to God the rest of their lives and conversations were correspondent to these gifts! for as our common courtiers (for the most part) are the best lerned and indued with excellent gifts, so are manie of them the worst men when they come abroad, that anie man shall either heare or read of. Trulie it is a rare thing with vs now, to heare of a courtier which hath but his owne language. And to saie how many gentlewomen and ladies there are, that beside sound knowledge of the Gréeke and Latine toongs, are thereto no lesse skilfull in the Spanish, Italian, and French, or in some one of them, it resteth not in me: sith I am persuaded, that as the noble men and gentlemen doo surmount in this behalfe, so these come verie little or nothing at all behind them for their parts; which industrie God continue, and accomplish that which otherwise is wanting!

[Ladies learned in languages.]

[Ancient ladies' employments.]

[Young ladies' recreations.]

[Old ladies' skill in surgery, &c.]

"Beside these things I could in like sort set downe the waies and meanes, wherby our ancient ladies of the court doo shun and avoid idlenesse, some of them exercising their fingers with the needle, other in caulworke, diverse in spinning of silke, some in continuall reading either of the holie scriptures, or histories of our owne or forren nations about vs, and diverse in writing volumes of their owne, or translating of other mens into our English and Latine toong, whilest the yoongest sort in the meane time applie their lutes, citharnes, prickesong, and all kind of musike, which they vse onelie for recreation sake, when they have leisure, and are frée from attendance vpon the quéenes maiestie, or such as they belong vnto. How manie of the eldest sort also are skilfull in surgerie and distillation of waters, beside sundrie other artificiall practises perteining to the ornature and commendations of their bodies,

I might (if I listed to deale further in this behalfe) easilie declare, but I passe ouer such maner of dealing, least I should séeme to glauer, and currie fauour with some of them. Neuerthelesse this I will generallie saie of them all, that as ech of them are cuning in somthing [All are cunning wherby they kéepe themselues occupied in the court, so there is in maner none of them, but when they be at home, can helpe to supplie the ordinarie want of the kitchen with a number of delicat dishes of their owne deuising, wherein the Portingall is their chéefe coun- in cookery, helped sellor, as some of them are most commonlie with the Portuguese.] clearke of the kitchen, who weeth (by a tricke taken vp of late) to give in a bréefe rehearsall of such and so [Introduction of manie dishes as are to come in at euerie course throughout the whole seruice in the dinner or supper while: which bill some doo call a memoriall, other a billet, Memorial, but some a fillet, bicause such are commonlie hanged Fillet.] on the file, and kept by the ladie or gentlewoman vnto some other purpose. But whither am I digressed?"— 1577, W. Harrison, in Holinshed's Chronicles, vol. I. p. 196, ed. 1586.

Note on the variations of Colwell's and Veale's editions of Rhodes's Boke of Nurture.

The small differences are so many from the 1577 edition, that the giving of them all would cost too much money and take up too much space for the very small advantage to be gained from them. If we ever print Petit's edition, then the collations of Colwell's and Veale's editions can be easily given with it, as that is the edition from which they were probably altered, and the changes are more within compass, though the words are often different. Of the more important alterations I give here a few by way of specimen. Others have been given in the last pages of the Preface to Rhodes, above.

The old Universities belong to the time before the Deluge—that means before the Revolution of 1789. The University of France is the organized whole of the higher and middle institutions of learning, in so far as they are directed by the State, not the clergy. It is an institution more governmental, according to the genius of the country, than our London University, to which, however, its organization bears some resemblance. To speak of it in one breath with Oxford or Aberdeen is to commit the . . error of confounding two things, or placing them on the same line, because they have the same name."—E. But the fact is as historical as a fact can well be, and the authority for it is a passage in one of the best of the contemporary authors, Gervaise of Canterbury. It is a 4to. of 12 leaves." Lord Ashburnham writes to say that he has a copy of East's edition of 1568. A transcript of its Title-page has lately turned up in a collection, and Mr W. C. Hazlitt has been good enough to send me an advance-proof of this Title as entered in his Handbook, as follows :-

"The Book of Nurture for men seruantes and children (with stans puer ad mensam). Hereunto is annexed our Lords Prayer, our Beliefe, and the .x. Commandments . with godly Graces, to be sayde at the Table, before and after meat. Very vtile and necessary for all youth to learne. Imprinted at London in Breadstreet at the nether ende, by Thomas East, 1568. Oblong 4to, 22 leaves. With a woodcut on the title, representing a master with his pupils.

Bright, in 1845, £16 16s. This seems to be the earliest book printed by T. East. At least, I find nothing licensed to him before 1568."

Good friends ye shall know well that this day is called in many places God's Sunday. Know well that it is the manner in every place of worship at this day to do the fire out of the hall; and the black winter brands, and all thing that is foul with smoke shall be done away, and there the fire was, shall be gaily arrayed with fair flowers, and strewed with green rushes all about, showing a great ensample to all Christian people, like as they make clean their houses to the sight of the people, in the same wise ye should cleanse your souls, doing away the foul brenning (burning) sin of lechery; put all these away, and cast out all thy smoke, dusts; and strew in your souls flowers of faith and charity, and thus make your souls able to receive your Lord God at the Feast of Easter."—Rock's Church of the Future, v. iii., pt. 2, p. 250. "The holly, being an evergreen, would be more fit for the purpose, and makes less litter, than the boughs of deciduous trees. I know some old folks in Herefordshire who yet follow the custom, and keep the grate filled with flowers and foliage till late in the autumn."—D. R. On Shere-Thursday, or Cena Domini, Dr Rock quotes from the Liber Festivalis-"First if a man asked why Sherethursday is called so, ye may say that in Holy Church it is called 'Cena Domini,' our Lord's Supper Day; for that day he supped with his disciples openly. . . It is also in English called Sherethursday; for in old fathers' days the people would that day sheer their heads and clip their beards, and poll their heads, and so make them honest against Easter-day."—Rock, ib., p. 235.

Nine fresh pieces relating more or less to the subjects of this volume having come under my notice since the Index was printed and the volume supposed to be finished, I have taken the opportunity of the delay in its issue—caused by want of funds—to add the new pieces as a Postscript to Part I. A tenth piece, Caxton's Book of Curtesye, in three versions, too important to be poked into a postscript, will form No. 3 of the Society's Extra Series, the first Text for 1868.

The Babces Book,

OR A 'LYTYL REPORTE' OF HOW YOUNG PEOPLE SHOULD BEHAVE.

[MS. Harl. 5086, fol. 86—90; ab. 1475 A.D.]

In this tretys the whiche I thenke to wryte Out of latyn in-to my comvne langage, He me supporte (sen I kan nat endyte),

4 The whiche only after his owne ymage
Fourmyd man-kynde! For alle of tendre age
In curtesye Resseyve shulle document,
And vertues knowe, by this lytil coment.

My God, support me while I translate this treatise from Latin.

It shall teach those of tender age.

¶ And Facett seythe the Book of curtesye,

9 Vertues to knowe, thaym forto haue and vse, Is thing moste heelfulle in this worlde trevly.

Therfore in feythe I wole me nat excuse

12 From this labour ywys, nor hit Refuse;
For myn owne lernynge wole I say summe thing
That touchis vertues and curtesye havyng.

To know and practise virtues is the most profitable thing in the world.

¶ But, O yonge Babees, whome bloode Royalle

Withe grace, feture, and hyhe habylite
Hathe enourmyd, on yow ys that I calle
To knowe this Book; for it were grete pyte,
Syn that in yow ys sette sovereyne beaute,

20 But yf vertue and nurture were with alle; To yow therfore I speke in specyalle,

¶ And nouhte to hem of elde that bene experte
In governaunce, nurture, and honeste.

Young Babies, adorned with grace,

I call on you to know this book (for Nurture should accompany be uty), and not on aged men expert therein. Why add pain to hell, water to the sea, or heat to fire?

[Fol. 86, b.]

Babies, my book is for you only, and so I hope no one will find fault with it, but only amend it.

The only reward I seek is that my book may please all and improve you.

If you don't know any word in it, ask till you do, and then keep hold of it.

And do not wonder at this being in metre

I must first describe how you Babies who dwell in households should behave at meals, and be ready with lovely and benign words when you are spoken to.

Lady Facetia, help me! 24 For what nedys to yeve helle peynes smerte, Ioye vnto hevene, or water vnto the see,
Heete to the fyre that kan nat but hoote be?
It nedys nouhte: therfore, O Babees yynge,

28 My Book only is made for youre lernynge.

¶ Therfore I pray that no man Reprehende
This lytyl Book, the whiche for yow I make;
But where defaute ys, latte ylke man amende,

32 And nouhte deme yt; [I] pray thaym for youre sake.

For other mede ywys I kepe noone take
But that god wolde this Book myhte yche man

Say grace,

thank Jesus for your food, and say an Ave for the souls in pain.

Then set to work, and don't be idle.

Scripture tells you,

if you work, you must eat what you get with your hands.

Be true in word and deed;

truth keeps a man from blame. Merey and Truth are the two ways to heaven, fail not to go by them.

Make only proper promises, and keep them without falsehood. Love God and your neighbours, and so fulfil all the Law.

Meddle only with what belongs to you.

Scorn not the poor;

flatter no one; oppress(?) not servants; and be courteous and cheerful.

Don't whisper in any man's ear. Take your food with your fingers, and don't waste it. Don't grin, or talk too much, or spill your food.

Keep your cloth before you. [Fol. 207.]

Cut your meat, don't bite it.

D on't open your mouth too wide when you eat, or blow in your food. If your lord drinks, always wait till he has done.

Keep your trencher clean.

Drink behind no man's back.

Don't rush at the cheese, or throw your bones on the floor.

The Boke of Aunture,

for Men, Seruauntes, and Chyldren.

THere is fewe thinges to be vnderstand more neces- For Parents and ary then to teache and gouerne Children in learn-Masters.
The teaching of ing and good manners, for it is a hye seruyce to God, it children is a high getteth fauour in the syghte of men, it multiplyeth goods, and increaseth thy good name, it also prouoketh to prayer by whiche Gods grace is obtayned, if thus they bee brought vp in vertue, good maners, and Godly learning. The cause of the world being so euill of Our evil living is lyuing as it is, is for lack of vertue, and Godly bringing due to lack of Godly bringing vp of youth. Whych youth sheweth the disposytions up. and conditions of their Parentes or Maysters, vnder whome they have bene gouerned. For youth is disposed to take such as they are accustomed in, good or euill. For if the behauyoure of the gouernour be euill, Asis the Governor needes must the Chylde be euill.

service to God.

And thus by the Chylde yee shall perceive the disposytion of the Gouernour. For of euill examples, From bad exmany daungers, & abhominable sinnes follow. For the applications abominable sins. which both the Discyple and the Mayster shall suffer euerlasting paynes.

It is also necessarye for Fathers and Maysters to cause their Chyldren and seruantes to vse fayre and children must be gentle speeche, with reuerence and curtesye to their and gentle speech. Elders and Betters, rebuking as well their ydle talke and stammering, as their vncomly iestures in going or standing. And if yee put them to schoole, see that Schoolmasters must fear God, and punish sharply.

Parents must teach children God's laws.

Look to the characters of new servants.

Reprove taletellers.

Don't dress children or servants sumptuously, words of villany.

Stop the vices they are inclined

Make them read the Bible and Godly books, and not wanton stories and songs of love.

their maysters be such as feare God, and lyue vertuouslye, such as can punishe sharpely with pacience, and not with rygour, for it doeth oft tymes make them to rebell and run away, wherof chaunceth ofte times much Also their Parentes must oft tymes instruct harme. them of god and of his lawes, and vertuous instructions of hys worde, and other good examples, and such lyke. And thus by litle and litle they shall come to the knowledge of reason, fayth, and good christen liuing. For as S. Paule sayth vnto Timothy: He that doth not regard the cure and charge of them that are vnder the charge of his gouernance, he denieth the faith, and is worse then a Pagan. And take good heede of anye newe seruauntes that you take into your house, and howe yee put them in authorytye among your children, and take heede howe they spende that is given them: if they be tale tellers or newes caryers, reproue them sharpely, and if they will not learne nor amende, auovde them thy house, for it is great quyetnesse to haue people of good behauiour in a house. Apparell not your chyldren or Seruauntes in sumptuous apparell, for it increaseth pryde and obstynacye, and many other euils, nor let your Chyldren go whether they will, but know whether they goe, in what company, and what they or let them speak haue done, good or euill. Take hede they speake no wordes of villany, for it causeth much corruption to ingender in them, nor shew them muche familiaritye, and see that they vse honest sportes and games. Marke well what vice they are specially inclined vnto, and breake it betymes. Take them often with you to heare Gods word preached, & then enquyre of them what they heard, and vse them to reade in the Bible and other Godly Bokes, but especyally keepe them from reading of fayned fables, vayne fantasyes, and wanton stories, and songs of loue, which bring much mischiefe to youth. For if they learne pure and cleane doctryne in youth, they poure out plentye of good workes in age. If any stryfe or debate bee among them of thy house, Settle all disputes at nighte charytably call them togyther, and wyth wordes or strypes make them all to agree in one. Take heede, if thy seruaunt or Chyld murmure or grudge stop all grumbagaynst thee, breake it betyme. And when thou hearest ling, them sweare or curse, lye & fyght, thou shalte reproue swearing, lying, them sharpelye. And yee that are friends or Kynne shall labour how to make them love and dreade you, as well for loue as for feare.

Make yourself loved as well as feared.

The Manner of Serving a Knight, Squyre, or Gentleman.

For Servants. Find out your master's ways. First yee must be dilligent to know your Maysters pleasure, and to knowe the order and custome of his house, for dyuers maysters are of sundry condicions and appetytes.

Take an inventory of all you have charge of.

As Panter, have your bread squared, and your linen and house of office clean,

To prepare for Dinner.

Dress your cupboard. Lay your cloth. Set on bread, salt, and trenchers;

a trencher, napkin, and spoon, to every man, according to the rank of each.

If many people dine, you may lay for them after they are seated.

And if thou be admitted in any offyce, as Butler or Panter,—in some places they are both one,—take an Inuitory of such thinges as ye take charge of, and see how it is spente: For it pleaseth a Mayster much to haue a true reckoning. Then in your offyce of the Pantrye, see that your bread be chipped and squared, & note how much you spend in a daye. And see your napry be cleane, & sort every thing by it selfe, the cleane from the foule. Keepe euery house of offyce cleane, and all that belongeth to it. When your Mayster will goe to his meate, take a towell aboute your necke, then take a cupbord cloth, a Basen, Ewer, & a Towell, to aray your cupbord: couer your table, set on bread, salt & trenchers, the salt before the bread, and trenchers before the salte. Set your napkyns and spoones on the cupbord ready, and lay every man a trencher, a napkyn, & a spone. And if you have mo messes then one at your maisters table, consider what degree they be of, and thereafter ye may serue them: and then set down every thing at that messe as before, except your Caruing kniues. If ther be many Gentlemen or yomen, then set on bred, salt, trenchers & spoones, after they be set, or els after the custome of the house. And some do vse to set before euerye man a some Panters lofe of bread, and his cup, and some vse the contrary. Thus must you have respecte to the order of the house. And in some places it is vsed to set drink and a lofe or two. In some places the Caruer doth vse to shew and some Carvers sew set down, and goeth before the course, and beareth no dysh, and in some place he beareth the first dish, and none, others carry maketh obeysaunce to hys Maister, and setteth it downe couered before the degree of a Knight, or else not vsed, & take the Couers and set them by. Women to blame, or yet defame, I will disprayse none: Say as ye list, women are yll 188 to trust, all thinges but one. Fayre and good are two quallityes, scantly in one body seene: Fayrenesse is scone seene, her pacience 192 and goodnesse is yll to deeme. For to saue that a man would have, is at large without a keeper: Who can stay that will away, 196 or without restraynt let her? To wed a woman that is good, fayre, and eke wyse, Is to have ynough for himselfe, sure, and for her as much thryse. 200 The company of women being yong, wanton, foolish, and light, Makes the body and head feeble, 204 . and doth cleane wast the sight. He who seeks Wisdom, is his country's friend. If case ye be of message sent, know you the same throughout: Then mayst thou speake boldly, be sure, and neuer stand in doubt.

Delight to reade good Godly bookes, and marke the meaning well, Thereof comes vertue, knowledge, pure wysedome, and sweete counsell. Here of this matter thus, my friend, I seeme to make an ende:

The Rule of Honest Lining.

If thou desyre temperance, cut away all superfluitye, and brydle in thy desyres within thy mynde; consyder to thy selfe what nature req[u]yreth, and not what sensuall concupiscence appeteth.

Put a brydle & a measure to thy concupiscence, & cast away the things that draw thy mynde with secrete pleasure.

Eate without surfet.

Drinke without dronkennesse.

Let thy lyuing be of light repaste; come not for wanton pleasure, but for desyre of meate; let hunger moue thy appetyte and not sauery sauces.

Thinke that all thing may be suffred but vilany and dishonesty; abstayn euer from wordes of rybaudry, for a tongue euer lyberall nourisheth folly.

Loue rather wordes profytable then eloquent and plesaunte, right wordes then flattering.

Thou shalt sometyme myxe with sadnesse thy merry iestes, but temperately, and without hurt of thy dignitye and honesty; for laughing is reproueable if it be out of measure; if lyke a chylde, it is effuse and wanton; if lyke a woman, foolish.

If thou be a continent man, aucyde flattery, & let it be as paynefull to thee to be praysed of lewd and inhonest persons, as if thou be praysed for lewd and inhonest deedes.

Be more ioyous and glad when thou displeasest euill persons; and take the euill iudgements of them touching thee, as a true prayse of thee. It is a very hard work of continence to repell the paynting glose of flatterings whose words resolue the hart with plesure.

Alure not the loue of any man by flattery, nor set not open the waye by that meane to get thee loue and friendshyp; thou shalte not be mad hardye, nor presumptyous; submit thy selfe and stoope not to low, but keepe a meane grauity.

Be advertised with good wil, and take rebuke paciently.

If any man chyde thee with cause, be thou assured that he doeth profyte thee. If so be without thanke, that hee wylleth thy profyte.

Thou shalte not feare sharp words, but dread fayre wordes.

If thou be a continent man, regard the moouinges and afflictions of thy soule and body, that they be not out of order; nor therfore doe not set lighte by them, because they be vnknown, for it forceth not if no man see them, whan thou thy selfe seest them.

Be active and styrring, but not of light fashyon, constant, but not obstynate: let it not be vnknown nor greuous to thee thou hast not knowledge of any thing.

Cherish al that be thy Peeres; disdayne not thy inferyours by pryde; cast not away thy superiours that liues vpright.

In requyting a good tourne, shew not thy selfe negligent, nor contrarye: bee not an exactour of another man.

Be lyberall to euery man.

To no man flattering.

Familier but to few.

Equall to all men.

Be not light of credens to new raysed tales, nor crymes, nor suspicious to maligne no man.

Slack and slow to yre.

Prone, inclyned to mercy.

Stable in aduersytye.

And hider of vertue, as other be of vice.

Be a dispyser of vayne glorye, and no busy bragger of the vertues with the which thou art indued.

Despyse no mans follye and ignoraunce: be thou of fewe wordes, but suffer other to speake.

Be sharpe, but not cruell, nor desgyse him that is merry.

Be desyrous of wysedome, and apte to learne it. Men learne when they teache.

Be content to departe to a man wylling to learne suche thinges as thou knowest, without arrogance and pride.

Desyre to have knowledge of suche thinges which thou knowest not, wythout concealement of thy ignoraunce.

HE that spendeth much and getteth nought,
He that oweth much and hath nought,
He that looketh in his purse and fyndeth nought,
He may be sorry and say nought.

- ¶ He that may and will not,
  He then that would shall not,
  He that would and cannot,
  May repent and sighe not.
- ¶ He that sweareth
  tyll no man trust him,
  He that lyeth
  tyll no man beleue him,
  He that boroweth
  till no man will lende him,

Let him go where no man knoweth him.

¶ He that hath a good Mayster and cannot keepe him,
He that hath a good seruaunt and not content with hym,
He that hath such condicions that no man loueth hym,
May well know other,
but few men wyll knowe hym.

Thus endeth the Booke of Aurture or gouernunce of Youth, with Stans Puer ad mensum. Compyled by Hugh Khodes of the Linges Chappell.

[Note.—? Should not 1. 169, p. 86, be 'He lykeneth a good man to Christ.' In 1. 172, 'to obey to man truely,' should man be God, or does the line refer to the good woman, as I have made it? I. 560. A Cockscombe. 'Natural idiots and fooles haue, and still do accustome themselves to weare in their cappes, cockes feathers, or a hat with a neck and head of a cock on the top, and a bell thereon, &c., and thinke themselves finely fitted and proudly attired therewith.' Words of villany, p. 64. Loose talk and swearing. From Roberde of Brunne downwards, and before him long, no doubt, the English habit of swearing has been cause of sharp reproof. R. Brunne rebukes the gentlemen of his time for it:

Tooth pick, p. 78, l. 245-8. When were tooth-picks introduced into England? The Anglo-Saxons had them, seemingly. Mr Cockayne translates do medmicel on pa eagan mid top gare (Leechdoms, ii. 36) by "Introduce a small quantity [of the eye-salve] into the eyes with a tooth-pick." But the gar may have been a surgical tooth-instrument, a scraper, and not a substitute at dinner for Rodes's stick. Withals, 1556, gives 'a tothe picker, dentiscalpium.' Thierry, in 1564—(Estienne 1539 and -49 re-edited: Way) has 'Vn curedent, Dentiscalpium.' Levins in 1570 gives "a Pike for the eares, teeth &c., scalprum." Manipulum, Pref. p. vi. ed. 1866; and then come all the authorities collected by Nares, who says:

Tooth-picks appear to have been first brought into use in Italy; whence the traveller who had visited that country, particularly wished to exhibit that symbol of gentility.

"Now your traueller,

Hee and his tooth-picke at my worship's messe." King John, i. 1.

The equipment of a fine gentleman is thus described by Massinger:

"I have all that's requisite
To the making up of a signior: my spruce ruff,
My hooded cloak, long stocking, and paned hose,
My case of toothpicks, and my silver fork
To convey an olive neatly to my mouth."
The Great Duke of Florence, Act iii. (p. 179, col. 2. ed. 1839).

They were even worn at one time as an ornament in the hat.

"Answer the time of request, Virginitie like an olde Courtier, weares her cap out of fashion, richly suted, but vnsuteable; iust like the brooch & the tooth-pick, which were not now."

All's Well that Ends Well, i. 1.

See also Nares's quotations under picktooth, and his Editors' extract from the Nomenclator (? ed. 1585, not that of 1548 noticed in the Promptorium), 'Dentisealpium. . . Curedent. A tooth-scraper or tooth-ruke.' Cotgrave in 1611 has 'Cure-dent, A tooth-picke', and Harrington, 1624, says 'cleanse the teeth either with Iuory or a Harts horne, or some picker of pure siluer or gold.'

Is there any authority for the statement in Domestic Architecture, v. 1, p. 132; that sugar 'was sometimes called blanch powdre'? P.S.—Probably the recollection of what Pegge says in the Preface to the Forme of Cury, "There is mention of blanch-powder or white sugar," 132 [p. 63]. They, however, were not the same, for see No. 193, p. xxvi-xxvii. On turning to the Recipe 132, of "Peeris in confyt," p. 62-3, we find "whan þei [the pears] buth ysode, take hem up, make a syrup of wyne greke. oþer vernage with blaunche powdur, oþer white sugur, and powdour gyngur, & do the peris þerin." 3 ? buche de bois. A logge, backe stocke, or great billet. Cot. I suppose the buche to refer to the manner of checkering the custard, buche-wise, and not to be a dish. Venison is 'chekkid,' l. 388-9. This rendering is confirmed by The Boke of Keruynge's "Custarde, cheke them inch square" (in Keruynge of Flesshe). Another possible rendering of buche as a dish of batter or the like, seems probable from the 'Bouce Jane, a dish in Ancient Cookery' (Wright's Provl. Dicty.), but the recipe for it in Household Ordinances, p. 431, shows that it was a stew, which could not be checkered or squared. It consisted of milk boiled with chopped herbs, half-roasted chickens or capons cut into pieces, 'pynes and raysynges of corance,' all boiled together. In Household Ordinances, p. 162-4, Bouche, or Bouche of court, is used for allowance. The 'Knights and others of the King's Councell,' &c., had each

<sup>3</sup> In lines 707, 748, the pety perucys come between the fish and pasties. I cannot identify them as fish. I suppose they were pies, perhaps The Pety Peruaunt of note 2 above; or better still, the fish-pies, Petipetes (or pety-pettys of the last note), which Randle Holme says 'are Pies made of Carps and Eels, first roasted, and then minced, and with Spices made up in Pies.'

Wherefore it is much vsed among vs in England, about Easter, with fried Egs, not without good cause, to purge away the fleume engendred of fish in Lent season, whereof worms are soone bred in them that be thereto disposed." Tansey, says Bailey (Diet. Domesticum) is recommended for the dissipating of wind in the stomach and belly. There is a kind of fishe, which is called in English Stockfish: it nourisheth no more than a stock. Yet I have eaten of a pie made onely with Stockefishe, whiche hath been verie good, but the goodnesse was not so much in the fishe as in the cookerie, which may make that sauorie, which of it selfe is vnsavourie . . it is sayd a good Cooke can make you good meate of a whetstone. . . <sup>3</sup> Pintle generally means the penis; but Dr Günther says the whelk has no visible organs of generation, though it has a projecting tube by which it takes in water, and the function of this might have been misunderstood. Dr G. could suggest nothing for almond, but on looking at the drawing of the male Whelk (Buccinum nudatum) creeping, in the Penny Cyclopædia, v. 9, p. 454, col. 2 (art. Entomostomata), it is quite clear that the almond must mean the animal's horny, oval operculum on its hinder part. 'Most spiral shells have an operculum, or lid, with which to close the aperture when they withdraw for shelter. It is developed on a particular lobe at the posterior part of the foot, and consists of horny layers, sometimes hardened with shelly matter.' Woodward's Mollusca, p. 47.

[Fol. 186.] Boil together hollyhock

1 See note at end. Mr Gillett, of the Vicarage, Runham, Filby, Norwich, sends me these notes on the herbs for this Bathe Medicinable: - "2 YARDEHOK = Mallow, some species. They are all more or less mucilaginous and emollient. If Yarde = Virga; then it is Marshmallow, or Malva Sylvestris; if yarde = erde, earth; then the rotundifolia. - 3 Paritory is Pellitory of the wall, parietaria. Wall pellitory abounds in nitrate of potass. There are two other pellitories: 'P. of Spain'-this is Pyrethrum, which the Spanish corrupted into pelitre, and we corrupted pelitre into pellitory. The other, bastard-pellitory, is Achillea Ptarmica.—4 Brown fennelle = probably Peucedanum officinale, or Hoss fennel, a dangerous plant; centaury, herb-benet,

hey hove  $^9$  / heyriff  $^{10}$  / herbe benet  $^{11}$  / bresewort  $^{12}$  / & smallache,  $^{13}$

certainly not Anethum Graveolens, which is always dill, dyle, dile, &c.—8 Rybbewort, Plantago lanceolata, mucilaginous.—9 Heyhove = Glechoma hederacea, bitter and aromatic, abounding in a principle like camphor.—10 HEYRIFF = harif = Galium Aparine, and allied species. They were formerly considered good for scorbutic diseases, when applied externally. Lately, in France, they have been administered internally against epilepsy.—12 Bresewort; if = brisewort or bruisewort, it would be Sambucus Ebulus, but this seems most unlikely.—Broke Lempk = brooklime. Veronica Beccabunga, formerly considered as an anti-scorbutic applied externally. It is very inert. If a person fed on it, it might do some good, i.e. about a quarter of the good that the same quantity of water-cress would do. -BILGRES, probably = henbane, hyoscysmus niger. Compare Dutch [Du. Bilsen, Hexham, and German Bilse]. Bil = byle = boil, modern. It was formerly applied externally, with marsh-mallow and other mucilaginous and emollient plants, to ulcers, boils, &c. It might do great good if the tumours were unbroken, but is awfully dangerous. So is Peucedanum officinale. My Latin names are those of Smith: English Flora. Babington has re-named them, and Bentham again altered them. I like my mumpsimus better than their sumpsimus."

<sup>2</sup> 'The common Mallowe, or the tawle wilde Mallow, and the common Hockes' of Lyte's Dodoens, 1578, p. 581, Malua sylvestris, as distinguished from the Malua sativa, or "Rosa vitramarina, that is to say, the Beyondesea Rose, in Frenche, Maulue de iardin or cultiuée.. in English, Holyhockes, and great tame Mallow, or great Mallowes of the Garden." The "Dwarffe Mallowe.. is called Malua sylvestris pumila."

And under Malvesyne this:

Ye shall have Spayneche wyne and Gascoyne, Rose coloure, whyt, claret, rampyon, Tyre, capryck, and malvesyne, Sak, raspyce, alycaunt, runney, Greke, ipocrase, new made clary, Suche as ye never had.

Interlude of the Four Elements (no date).

Of the wine drunk in England in Elizabeth's time, Harrison (Holinshed's Chron. v. 1, p. 167, col. 2, ed. 1586) says, "As all estates doo exceed herin, I meane for strangenesse and number of costlie dishes, so these forget not to vse the like excesse in wine, in so much as there is no kind to be had (neither anie where more store of all sorts than in England, although we have none growing with us, but yearlie to the proportion of 20,000 or 30,000 tun and vpwards, notwithstanding the dailie restreincts of the same brought over vnto vs) wherof at great meetings there is not some store to be had. Neither do I meane this of small wines onlie, as Claret, White, Red, French,

&c., which amount to about fiftie-six sorts, according to the number of regions from whence they come: but also of the thirtie kinds of Italian, Grecian, Spanish, Canarian, &c., whereof Vernage, Cate, pument, Raspis, Muscadell, Romnie, Bastard, Tire, Oseie, Caprike, Clareie, and Malmesie, are not least of all accompted of, bicause of their strength and valure. For as I have said in meat, so the stronger the wine is, the more it is desired, by means wherof in old time, the best was called Theologicum, because it was had from the cleargie and religious men, vnto whose houses manie of the laitie would often send for bottels filled with the same, being sure that they would neither drinke nor be served of the worst, or such as was anie waies mingled or brued by the vintener: naie the merchant would have thought that his soule should have gone streight-waie to the divell, if he should have served them with other than the best."

On Wine, see also Royal Rolls, B.M. 14 B. xix.

3. Specially: The following extracts are from Henderson's History of Ancient and Modern Wines, 1824, except where otherwise stated:—

1. Vernage was a red wine, of a bright colour, and a sweetish and somewhat rough flavour, which was grown in Tuscany and other parts of Italy, and derived its name from the thick-skinned grape, vernaccia (corresponding with the vinaciola of the ancients), that was used in the preparation of it (See Bacci. Nat. Vinor. Hist., p. 20, 62). It is highly praised by Redi.*

2. Vernagelle is not mentioned by Henderson. The name shows it to have been a variety of Vernage.

- 3. l. 118. Cute. "As for the cuit named in Latin Sapa, it commeth neere to the nature of wine, and in truth nothing els it is, but Must or new wine boiled til one third part and no more do remain; & this cuit, if it be made of white Must is counted the better." Holland's Plinies Nat. Hist., p. 157. "(of the dried grape or raisin which they call Astaphis). The sweet euit which is made thereof hath a speciall power and virtue against the Hæmorrhois alone, of all other serpents," p. 148. "Of new pressed wine is made the wine called Cute, in Latin, Supa; and it is by boiling the new pressed wine so long, as till that there remaine but one of three parts. Of new pressed wine is also made another Cute, called of the Latines Defrutum, and this is by boiling of the new wine onely so long, as till the halfe part be consumed, and the rest become of the thicknesse of honey." Maison Rustique, p. 622. 'Cute. A.S. Cæren, L. carenum, wine boiled down one-third, and sweetened.' Cockayne, Gloss. to Leechdoms.
- 4. Pyment. In order to cover the harshness and acidity common to the greater part of the wines of this period, and to give them an agreeable flavour, it was not unusual to mix honey and spices with them. Thus compounded they passed under the generic name of piments,† probably because they were
- * Vernage was made in the Genoese territory. The best was grown at San Gemignano, and in Bacci's time was in great request at Rome. The wine known as Vernaccia in Tuscany was always of a white or golden colour. Henderson, p. 396.

originally prepared by the pigmentarii or apothecaries; and they were used much in the same manner as the liqueurs of modern times. Hend. p. 283.

The varieties of Piment most frequently mentioned are the Hippocras & Clarry. The former was made with either white or red wine, in which different aromatic ingredients were infused; and took its name from the particular sort of bag, termed Hippocrates's Sleeve, through which it was strained. Clarry, on the other hand, which (with wine of Osey) we have seen noticed in the Act 5 Richard II. (St. 1, c. 4, vin doulce, ou clarre), was a claret or mixed wine, mingled with honey, and seasoned in much the same way, as may be inferred from an order of the 36th of Henry III. respecting the delivery of two casks of white wine and one of red, to make Clarry and other liquors for the king's table at York (duo dolia albi vini et garhiofilacum et unum dolium rubri vini ad claretum faciendum). Raspice. "Vin Rapé," says Henderson, p. 286, note "" a rough sweetish red wine, so called from its being made with unbruised grapes, which, having been freed from the stalks, are afterwards fermented along with them and a portion of other wine."* Ducange has Raspice. Raspaticium, Ex racemis vinum, cujus præparationem tradit J. Wecker. Antidot. special. lib. 2, § 6, page 518 et 519. Paratur autem illud ex raspatiis et vinaceis, una cum uvis musto immissis. Sed ex relato longiori contextu palam est, Raspeciam nihil aliud esse quam vinum mixtis acinis aliisve modis renovatum, nostris vulgo Rāpé; hujuscemodi enim vinum alterationi minus obnoxium est, ut hic dicitur de Raspecia. 6, Muscadelle of Grew: Bastard: Greke: Malvesyn. "The wines which Greece, Languedoc, and Sapine doe send vs, or rather, which the delicacie and voluptuousnesse of our French throats cause to be fetched from beyond the Sea, such as are Sacks, Muscadels of Frontignan, Malmesies, Bastards (which seeme to me to be so called, because they are oftentimes adulterated and falsified with honey, as we see wine Hydromell to be prepared) and Corsick wines, so much vsed of the Romanes, are very pernicious unto vs, if we vse them as our common drinke. Notwithstanding, we proue them very singular good in cold diseases . . but chiefly and principally Malmesey." Stevens and Liebault's Maison Rustique, or The Countrey Farme, by R. Surflet, reviewed by Gerv. Markham, 1616. Muscadell, vinum apianum. Withals. Mulsum, wine and honie sodden together, swiete wine, basterde or Muscadell. Withals. William Vaughan says, "Of Muscadell, Malmesie, and browne Bastard. These kindes of wines are onely for maried folkes, because they strengthen the back." Naturall and Artificial Directions for Health, , 1602, p. 9.

Andrewe Borde, of Physicke, Doctor, in his Regyment or Dyetary of helth made in Mountpylior, says, "Also these hote wynes, as Malmesey, wyne corse, wyne greke, Romanyke, Romney, Secke, Alygaune, Basterde, Tyre, Osaye, Muscadell, Caprycke, Tynt, Roberdany, with other hote wynes, be not good to drynke with meate, but after mete and with Oysters, with Saledes with fruyte a draughte or two may be suffered. Olde men may drynke, as I sayde, hygh wynes at theyr pleasure. Furthermore all swete wynes, and grose wynes, doth make a man fatte."

7. Rompney. Henderson, p. 288, says, "Another of the above-mentioned wines (in the Squire of Low Degree) designated by the name of the grape, was the Romenay, otherwise Romenay, Rumney, Romaine, or Romagnia. That it could not be the produce of the Ecclesiastical State, as the two last corruptions of the word would seem to imply, may be safely averred; for at no period, since the decline of the empire, has the Roman soil furnished any wines for exportation; and even Bacci, with all his partiality, is obliged to found his eulogy of them on their ancient fame, and to confess that, in his time, they had fallen into disrepute." He argues also against the notion that this wine came from Romana in Aragon, and concludes that it was probably a Greek wine, as Bacci (Nat. Vin. Hist. p. 333) tells us that the wine from the Ionian Islands and adjoining continent was called in Italian Romania,—from Now this is all very well, but how about the name of the Saracen Rum-ili. Rompney of Modene or Modena, just outside the Western boundary of the Romagna,-not Meudon, in France, "amongst all the wines which we use at Paris, as concerning the red, the best are those of Coussy, Seure, Vaunes, and Meudon." Maison Rustique, p. 642.—Who will hold to John Russell, and still consider Romney an Italian wine? Rumney, vinum resinatum. Withals.

8. Bastard. Henderson argues against the above-quoted (No. 6) supposition of Charles Etienne's (which is supported by Cotgrave's Vin miellé, honied wine, bastard, Metheglin, sweet wine), and adopts Venner's account (Via Recta ad Vitam Longam), that "Bastard is in virtue somewhat like to muskadell, and may also in stead thereof be used; it is in goodness so much inferiour to muskadell, as the same is to malmsey." It took its name, Henderson thinks, from the grape of which it was made, probably a bastard species of muscadine. "One of the varieties of vines now cultivated in the Alto Douro, and also in Madeira, is called bastardo, and the must which it yields is of a sweetish quality. Of the Bastard wine there were two sorts,—white and brown (brown and white bastard, Measure for Measure, Act iii. sc. 2), both of them, according to Markham's report, "fat and strong; the tawny or brown kind being the sweetest." In The Libelle of Englysch Polycye, A.D. 1436 (Wright's Political Songs, v. 2, p. 160), 'wyne bastarde' is put among the commodyetees of Spayne.

9. Tire, if not of Syrian growth, was probably a Calabrian or Sicilian wine, manufactured from the species of grape called tirio. Tyre, vinum Tyrense, ex Tyro insula. Withals.

10. Ozey. Though this is placed among the "commodities of Portugal" in some verses inserted in the first volume of Hackluyt's Voyages, p. 188—Her land hath wine, osey, waxe, and grain,—yet, says Henderson, "a passage in Valois' Description of France, p. 12, seems to prove, beyond dispute, that oseye was an Alsatian wine; Auxois or Osay being, in old times, the name constantly used for Alsace. If this conjecture is well-founded, we may presume that oseye was a luscious-sweet, or straw-wine, similar to that which is still made in that province. That it was a rich, high-flavoured liquor is sufficiently shown by a receipt for imitating it, which may be seen in Markham (English Housewife, 1683, p. 115), and we learn from Bacci (p. 350) that the wines which Alsace then furnished in great profusion to England as well as different parts of the continent, were of that description. In the 'Bataille des Vins' we find the 'Vin d'Aussai' associated with the growths of the Moselle." Osey is one 'Of the commoditees of Portingalle,' Libelle, p. 163.

11. Torrentyne of Ebrew. Is this from Tarentum, Tarragon, or Toledo? Whence in Ebrew land did our forefathers import wine? Mr G. Grove says, "I should at first say that Torrentyne referred to the wine from some wady (Vulgate, torrens) in which peculiarly rich grapes grew, like the wady of Eschool or of Sorek; but I don't remember any special valley being thus distinguished as 'The Torrent' above all others, and the vineyards are usually on hill-sides, not in vallies."

12. Greke Malevesyn. "The best dessert wines were made from the Malvasia grape; and Candia, where it was chiefly cultivated, for a long time retained the monopoly," says Henderson. He quotes Martin Leake to explain the name. Monemvasia is a small fortified town in the bay of Epidaurus Limera. "It was anciently a promontory called Minoa, but is now an island connected with the coast of Laconia by a bridge. The name of Monemvasia, derived from the circumstances of its position (μόνη ἐμβασία, single entrance), was corrupted by the Italians to Malvasia; and the place being celebrated for the fine wines produced in the neighbourhood, Malvasia changed to Malvoisie in French, and Malmsey in English came to be applied to many of the rich wines of the Archipelago, Greece, and other countries." (Researches in Greece, p. 197.) Maulmsey, vinum creticum, vel creteum. Withals.

13. Caprik may have been a wine from the island of Capri, or Cyprus.

14. Clarey. See above under Pyment, and the elaborate recipe for making it, in Household Ordinances, p. 473, under the heading "Medicina optima et experta pro Stomacho et pro Capite in Antiquo hominem." Claret Wine, vinum sanguineum subrubrum, vel rubellum. Withals. Ale for an Englysshe man is a naturall drynke. Ale muste haue these properties, it must be fresshe and cleare, it muste not be ropy, nor smoky, nor it muste haue no werte nor tayle. Ale shulde not be dronke under .v. dayes olde. Newe Ale is vnholsome for all men. And sowre ale, and dead ale, and ale the whiche doth stande a tylte, is good for no man. The sewer shall lay the surnape on the board-end whereas the bread and salte standeth, and lay forth the end of the same surnape and towell; then the usher should fasten his rodd in the foresaid surnape and towell, and soe drawing it downe the board, doeing his reverence afore the Kinge till it passe the board-end a good way, and there the sewer kneeling at the end of the board, and the usher at the other, stretching the said surnape and towell, and soe the usher to laie upp the end of the towell well on the boarde, and rise goeing before the Kinge, doeing his reverence to the King on the same side the surnape bee gone uppon, and on that side make an estate with his rodd; and then goeing before the Kinge doeing his reverence, and soe make another estate on the other side of the King, and soe goeing to the boards end againe, kneele downe to amend the towell, that there bee noe wrinkles

Compare these modern directions to a serving man: "While waiting at dinner, never be picking your nose, or scratching your head, or any other part of your body; neither blow your nose in the room; if you have a cold, and cannot help doing it, do it on the outside of the door; but do not sound your nose like a trumpet, that all the house may hear when you blow it; still it is better to blow your nose when it requires, than to be picking it and snuffing up the mucus, which is a filthy trick. Do not yawn or gape, or even sneeze, if you can avoid it; and as to hawking and spitting, the name of such a thing is enough to forbid it, without a command. When you are standing behind a person, to be ready to change the plates, &c., do not put your hands on the back of the chair, as it is very improper; though I have seen some not only do so, but even beat a kind of tune upon it with their fingers. Instead of this, stand upright with your hands hanging down or before you, but not folded. Let your demeanour be such as becomes the situation which you are in. Be well dressed, and have light shoes that make no noise, your face and hands well washed, your finger-nails cut short and kept quite clean underneath; have a nail-brush for that purpose, as it is a disgusting thing to see black dirt under the nails. Let the lapels of your coat be buttoned, as they will only be flying in your way." 1825. T. Cosnett. Footman's Directory, p. 97-8. Lord A. Percy's Waiters were changed every quarter. Yarrell, ii. 573. The Bittern was formerly in some estimation as an article of food for the table; the flesh is said to resemble that of the Leveret in colour and taste, with some of the flavour of wild fowl. Sir F. Madden in his note on Frees pasties, in his Privy Purse Expenses of the Princess Mary, p. 131, col. 1, says, "The different species of Confectionary then in vogue are enumerated by Taylor the Water Poet, in his Tract intitled 'The Great Eater, or part of the admirable teeth and stomack's exploits of Nicholas Wood,' &c., published about 1610. 'Let any thing come in the shape of fodder or eating-stuffe, it is wellcome, whether it be Sawsedge, or Custard, or Eg-pye, or Cheese-cake, or Flawne, or Foole, or Froyze,* or Tanzy, or Pancake, or Fritter, or Flap iacke,† or Posset, or Galleymawfrey, Mackeroone, Kickshaw, or Tantablin!'"

1, 500, 706, 730. Pety Perueis. Perueis should be Perneis, as the Sloane MS. 1985 shows. Alter text accordingly. Under the head of bake Metis or Vyaunde Furnez, in Harl. MS. 279, fol. 40 b, we have No. xiiij Pety Pernollys. Take fayre Floure Cofyns. pen take 30lkys of Eyroun & trye hem fro pe whyte. & lat pe 30lkys be al hole & no3t to-broke. & ley.iij. or .iiij. 30lkys in a cofyn. and pan take marow of bonys, to or .iij. gobettys, & cowche in pe cofynn. pen take pouder Gyngere, Sugre, Roysonys of coraunce, & caste a-boue. & pan kyuere pin cofyn with pe same past. & bake hem & frye hem in fayre greee & serve forth.

Harl. MS. 279.

1. 501, 701. Powche. I suppose this to be poached-egg fritters; but it may be the other powche: 'Take the Powche and the Lynour [? liver] of haddok, codlyng, and hake.' Forme of Cury, p. 47. Recipe 94.

1. 501. Fritters are small Pancakes, having slices of Apples in the Batter. R. Holme. Frutters, Fruter Napkin, and Fruter Crispin, were dishes at Archbp. Nevill's Feast, 7 Edw. IV. 1467-8 A.D.

1. 503. Tansy Cake is made of grated Bread, Eggs, Cream, Nutmeg, Ginger, mixt together and Fried in a Pan with Butter, with green Wheat and Tansy stamped. R. Holme. 'To prevent being Bug-bitten. Put a sprig or two of tansey at the bed head, or as near the pillow as the smell may be agreeable.' T. Cosnett's Footman's Directory, p. 292.

* Froize, or pancake, Fritilla, Frittur, rigulet. Baret. Omlet of Eggs is Eggs beaten together with Minced suet, and so fried in a Pan, about the quantity of an Egg together, on one side, not to be turned, and served with a sauce of Vinegar and Sugar. An Omlet or Froise. R. Holme.

† Flapjack is "a fried cake made of butter, apples, &c." Jennings. It is not a pancake here, evidently. "Untill at last by the skill of the cooke, it is transform'd into the forme of a flapjack, which in our translation is cald a pancake." Taylor's Jack-a-lent, i. p. 115, in Nares.

l. 504, 511, &c. Leach, a kind of Jelly made of Cream, Ising-glass, Sugar, and Almonds, with other compounds (the later meaning, 1787). R. Holme.

1. 517-18. Potages. All maner of liquyde thynges, as Potage, sewe and all other brothes doth replete a man that eteth them with ventosyte. Potage is not so moche vsed in all Chrystendome as it is vsed in Englande. Potage is made of the licour in the whiche flesshe is sod in, with puttynge to, chopped herbes, and Otmell and salte. A. Borde, Reg. fol. H. ii.

1. 517,731. Jelly, a kind of oily or fat liquor drawn from Calves or Neats feet boiled. R. Holme.

1. 519. Grewel is a kind of Broth made only of Water, Grotes brused and Currans; some add Mace, sweet Herbs, Butter and Eggs and Sugar:

some call it Pottage Gruel. R. Holme.

1. 521. Cabages. 'Tis scarce a hundred years since we first had cabbages out of Holland; Sir Anthony Ashley, of Wiburg St Giles, in Dorsetshire, being, as I am told, the first who planted them in England. Jn. Evelyn, Acetaria, § 11. They were introduced into Scotland by the soldiers of Cromwell's army. 1854. Notes and Queries, May 6, p. 424, col. 1.

1. 533. Powdered is contrasted with fresh in Household Ordinances: 'In beef daily or moton, fresh, or elles all poudred is more availe, 5d.' H. Ord. p. 46. In Muffett (p. 173) it means pickled, 'As Porpesses must be baked while they are new, so Tunny is never good till it have been long pouldred with salt, vinegar, coriander, and hot spices.' In p. 154 it may be either salt or pickled; 'Horne-beaks are ever lean (as some think) because they are ever fighting; yet are they good and tender, whether they be eaten fresh or poudred.' Powdered, says Nicolas, meant sprinkled over, and "powdered beef," i.e. beef sprinkled with salt, is still in use. Privy Purse expenses of Elizabeth of Yorke, &c., p. 254, col. 1. See note to 1. 378, 689, here.

1. 535-688. Chaudoun. MS. Harl. 1735, fol. 18, gives this Recipe. "¶ Chaudon sauz of swannes. ¶ Tak y° issu of y° swannes, & wasche hem wel, skoure y° guttys with salt, sethz al to-gidre. Tak of y° fleysche; hewe it smal, & y° guttys with alle. Tak bred, gyngere & galingale, Canel, grynd it & tempre it vp with bred; colour it with blood ore with brent bred, seson it vp with a lytyl vinegre; welle it al to-gydere.' And see the Chaudoun potage of Pygys, fol. 19, or p. 37.

1. 540. Crane, the Common, Crus cinerea, Y. ii. 530.

1. 540. Egret, or Great White Heron, Ardea alba Y. ii. 549. (Buff-coloured, Buff-backed, and Little Egret, are the varieties.)

1. 540. Hernshaw or Common Heron, Ardea cinerea. Y. ii. 537 (nine other varieties).

1. 541. Plover, the Great (Norfolk Plover and Stone Curlew), Ædicnemus crepitans, Y. ii. 465 (10 other varieties).

l. 541. Curlew the Common, Numenius arquata, Y. ii. 610 (there are other varieties).

1. 542. Bustard, the Great, Otis turda, Y. ii. 428; the Little (rare here). ii. 452.

1. 542. Shoveler (blue-winged, or Broad-Bill), Anas clypeata, Y. iii. 247. Snipe, the Common, Scolopax gallinago, Y. iii. 38 (11 other sorts).

1. 543. Woodcock, Scolopax rusticola, Y. iii. 1.

- 1, 543. Lapwing or Peewit, Vanellus cristatus, ii. 515.
- 1. 543. The Martin, or House Martin, Hirundo urbica, Y. ii. 255; the Sand or Bank Martin, Hirundo riparia, ii. 261.

1. 544. Quail, the Common, Coturnix vulgaris, Y. ii. 413.

1. 546. On Fish wholesome or not, see Bullein, fol. lxxxiij., and on Meats, fol. 82.

1. 548. Torrentille: Mr Skeat suggests '? Torrent-eel.' Though the spelling of Randle Holme's A Sandile or a Sandeele (Bk. II., p. 333), and Aldrovandi's (p. 252 h.) "De Sandilz Anglorum" may help this, yet, as Dr Günther says, eels have nothing to do with torrents. Torrentille may be the Italian Tarentella; see note on Torrentyne, 1. 828 below.

l. 555. Ling. There shall be stryken of every Saltfische called a Lyng Fische vj Stroks after iij Stroks in a Side. Percy Household Book, p. 135.

1. 558. Stockfish. Vocatur autem 'Stockfisch' à trunco, cui hic piscis aridus tundendus imponitur. ariditate enim ita riget, ut nisi præmaceratus aqua, aut prætunsus, coqui non possit. Gesner, p. 219. 'Ie te frotteray à double carillon. I will beat thee like a stockfish, I will swinge thee while I may stand ouer thee.' Cotgrave. 'The tenne chapitule' of 'The Libelle of Englysch Polycye' is headed 'Of the coundius stokfysshe of Yselonde,' &c., &c., and begins

Of Yseland to wryte is lytille nede, Save of stockfische.

A. Borde, in his Introduction to Knowledge, under Island, says,
And I was borne in Island, as brute as a beest;
Whan I ete candels ends I am at a feest;
Talow and raw stockefysh I do loue to ete,
In my countrey it is right good meate,

. . . In stede of bread they do eate stocfyshe, and they wyll eate rawe fyshe & fleshe; they be beastly creatures, vnmannered and vntaughte. The people be good fyshers; muche of theyr fishe they do barter with English men for mele, lases, and shoes & other pelfery. (See also under Denmarke.)

1. 559. Mackerel. See Muffett's comment on them, and the English and French ways of cooking them, p. 157.

1. 569. Onions. Walnuts be hurtfull to the Memory, and so are Onyons, because they amoy the Eyes with dazeling dimnesse through a hoate vapour. T. Newton, Touchstone, ed. 1581, fol. 125 b.

1. 572. A Rochet or Rotbart is a red kind of Gurnard, and is so called in the South parts of England; and in the East parts it is called a Curre, and a Golden polle. R. Holme.

1. 575. A Dace or a Blawling, or a Gresling, or a Zienfische, or Weyfisch; by all which the Germans call it, which in Latin is named Leucorinus. And the French Vengeron, which is English'd to me a Dace, or Dace-fish. R. Holme.

1. 577. Refett. I thought it clear that refett was roe, and I do not yet give it up. But see P.P., Refeccyon, where the editor gives 'refet of fisshe K., refet or fishe H., reuet P.,' from other manuscripts, and cites in a note Roquefort from Fr. reffait (refait) as meaning a fish, the rouget, &c., &c. The authority of Roquefort is not much, and he gives no citation. If, however, in K. H. and P. these forms are used instead of the spelling refeccyon, and defined refectio, refectura, it rather embarrasses the matter. Halliwell cites no authority for rivet, roe. G. P. Marsh. See note to 1. 840 here, p. 224.

1. 580. Gobbin, or Gobbet, or Gubbins: Meat cut in large peeces, as large as an Egg. R. Holme.

1. 584. A Thornbacke, see called from the Sharp Crooked Pricks set on Studs, all down the middle of the Back. R. Holme.

1, 584. Hound Fysch. A Sow-Hound-Fish... So it is called from its resemblance of a Dog, and its fatness like to a Swine: though most term it a Dog-Fish. It hath a small Head, great Eyes; wide Mouth, rough, sharp and thick skinned. R. Holme.

1. 584, 1. 830. 'Thorlepolle. Aldrovandi, describing the Balæna vera Rondel[etii] says: Hec belua Anglis, (vt dixi) Hore vocatur, & alio nomine Horlepoole & VVirlepoole etiam, ni fallor, earum nimirum omnium significatione, quòd impetuo suo & flatu vorticosas in mari tanquam palude procellas excitet. Oleum ex ea colligi aiunt. p. 677. See Holland's Plinie on the Whales and Whirlepooles called Balænæ, which take up in length as much as foure acres or arpens of land, v. 1, p. 235, &c.

Thornback, Raja. Thornback, which Charles Chester merily and not unfitly calleth Neptune's beard, was extolled by Antiphanes in Athenæus history for a dainty fish; indeed it is of a pleasant taste, but of a stronger smell than Skate, over-moist to nourish much, but not so much as to hinder lust, which it mightily encreaseth. Muffett, p. 172.

1. 596. Verjuice is the juice of Crabs or sour Apples. R. Holme.

1. 622. Jole of Sturgion or Salmon is the two quarters of them, the head parts being at them. R. Holme.

1. 630. Lamprey pie. In the Hengrave Household Accounts is this entry "for presenting a lamprey pye vj d." "Item. the xiiij day of January [1503] to a servant of the Pryour of Lanthony in reward for brynging of two bakyn laumpreys to the Quene v s. Nicolas's Elizabeth of York, p. 89, and Glossary."

Under 'How several sorts of Fish are named, according to their Age or Growth,' p. 324-5, R. Holme gives

An Eel, first a Fauser, then a Grigg, or Snigg, then a Scaffling, then a little Eel; when it is large, then an Eel, and when very large, a Conjer.

A Pike, first a Hurling pick, then a Pickerel, then a Pike, then a Luce or Lucie.

A Smelt or Sparling, first a Sprat, then a small Sparling, then a Sparling. A Codd, first a Whiting, then a Codding, then a Codd.

A Lamprey, first a Lampron Grigg, then a Lampret, then a Lamprell, then a Lamprey.

A Lampron, first a Barle, than a Barling, then a Lamprell, and then a Lamprey or Lampron.

A Crevice, first a Spron Frey, then a Shrimp, then a Sprawn, and when it is large, then called a Crevice.

The curious Burlesques, pp. 81-2, 85-6, vol. 1 of Reliquiæ Antiquæ, contain a great many names of fish.

1. 631. Pasty is paste rouled broad, and the Meat being laid in Order on it, it is turned over, and made up on three sides, with garnishes about. R. Holme.

1. 634, note. Galingale. Harman (ed. Strother, 1727) notices three varieties, Cyperus rotundus, round Galingal; Galanga major, Galingal; Galanga minor, lesser Galingal.

Gallinga, Lat. Galanga, says Bp Percy, is the root of a grassy-leaved plant brought from the East Indies, of an aromatic smell and hot biting bitterish Taste, anciently used among other Spices, but now almost laid aside. Lewis, Mat. Med. p. 286. See Mr Way's note 4 in Pr. Parv. p. 185.

'Galendyne is a sauce for any kind of roast Fowl, made of Grated Bread, beaten Cinnamon and Ginger, Sugar, Claret-wine, and Vinegar, made as thick as Grewell.' Randle Holme, Bk. III., chap. III., p. 82, col. 2. See also Recipes in Markham's Houswife, the second p. 70, and the first p. 77.

l. 657. A sewer, appositor ciborum. Appono, to sette vpon the table.

Withals.

1. 686. Mustard is a kind of sharp biting sauce, made of a small seed bruised and mixed with Vinegar. R. Holme.

1. 686. Dynere. Compare the King's dinner in The Squyr of Lowe Degree. The Squyer

He toke a white yeard in his hande,
Before the kynge than gane he stande,
And sone he sat hym on his knee,
And serued the kynge ryght royally
With deynty meates that were dere,
With Partryche, Pecocke, and Plouere,
With byrdes in bread ybake,
The Tele, the Ducke, and the Drake,
The Cocke, the Corlewe, and the Crane,
With Fesauntes fayre, theyr ware no wane,
Both Storkes and Snytes ther were also,
And venyson freshe of Bucke and Do,
And other deyntés many one,
For to set afore the kynge anone.

Several of the names of the dishes in Russell are used burlesquely in the Feest of the Turnament of Tottenham, E. Pop. P., v. 3, pp. 94-6, "saduls sewys, mashefatts in mortrewys, mylstones in mawmary, iordans in iussall, chese-crustis in charlett," &c.

1. 688, Swan. "Cap. xxviij. The Swanne is veri a fayr birde, with whyte feders / & it hath a blacke skinne & flesshe / the mariner seeth hym gladly / for whan he is mery, the mariner is without sorowe or daunger; & all his strengthe is in his wynges / and he is coleryke of complexion / & whan they will engender, than they stryke wyth theyr nebbys togeder, and cast theyr neckes ouer eche other as yf thei wolden brace eche other; so come they togeder, but the male doth hurt the female; & as sone as he beknoweth that he hathe hurte her, than he departeth frome her compani in all the haste possible / and she pursueth after for to reuenge it / but the anger is sone past, & she wassheth her with her bylle in the water / and clenseth herselfe agayne."—L. Andrewe, Noble Lyfe. Pt. II. sign. m. 1.

1. 688, Feysaund. "Cap. xlvi. Fascianus is a wyld cocke or a fesant cocke that byde in the forestes, & it is a fayre byrde with goodly feders. but he hath no commbe as other cockes haue / and they be alway alone except whane they wylle be by the henne. and they that will take this bird / and in many places the byrders doth thus, they paynte the figure of this fayre byrde in a cloth, & holdeth it before hym / & whan this birde seeth so fayr a figure of hym selfe / he goeth nother forward nor bacwarde / but he standeth still, staringe vpon his figure / & sodenly commeth another, and casteth a nette ouer his hede, and taketh hym. Thys byrde morneth sore in fowle weder, & hideth hym from the rayne vnder the busshes. Towarde the morninge and towardes night, than commeth he out of the busshe, and is oftentimes so taken, & he putteth his hede in the ground, & he weneth that all his boddy is hyden / and his flessh is very light and good to disiest."—L. Andrewe, Noble Lyfe. Pt. II. (m. 4.)

1. 689. Vensoun bake, or Venison Pasty. Of the Hart and Hinde, Topsel says, "The flesh is tender, especially if the beast were libbed before his horns grew: yet is not the juice of that flesh very wholesome, and therefore Galen adviseth men to abstain as much from Harts flesh as from Asses, for it engendereth melancholy; yet it is better in Summer then in Winter. Simeon Sethi, speaking of the hot Countries, forbiddeth to eat them in Summer, because then they eat Serpents, and so are venemous; which falleth not out in colder Nations, and therefore assigneth them rather to be eaten in Winter time, because the concoctive powers are more stronger through plenty of inward heat; but withal admonisheth, that no man use to eat much of them, for it will breed Palsies and trembling in mans body, begetting grosse humors, which stop the Milt and Liver: and Auicen proveth, that by eating thereof men incur the quartane Ague; wherefore it is good to powder them with salt before the dressing, and then seasoned with Peper and other things, known to every ordinary Cook and woman, they make of them Pasties in most Nations," p. 103, ed. 1658.

1. 694. Blanchmanger, a made dish of Cream, Eggs, and Sugar, put into an open puff paste bottom, with a loose cover. Blamanger, is a Capon roas or boile, minced small, planched (sie) Almonds beaten to paste, Cream, Eggs, Grated Bread, Sugar and Spices boiled to a pap. R. Holme.

1. 694. Po = tage is strong Broth of Meat, with Herbs and Spices Boiled. Pottage is the Broth of Flesh or Fowl, with Herbs and Oatmeal boiled therein. R. Holme.

1. 694, Vensoun; and 1. 696, Heironsew.

But many men byn nowe so lekerous
That they can not leve by store of howse,
As brawne, bakyn, or powderd beef;
Such lyvelod now ys no man leef,
But venyson, wyldfowle or heronsewes,
So newfanggell be these men of her thewes;
Moche medlyd wyne all day men drynke;
j haue wyste wyldfowle sum tyme stynke.

Piers of Fullham, Il. 171-8, p. 8, v. 2, of Early Popular Poetry, ed. Hazlitt, 1866.

1. 695, Bustard. "Cap. xv. The Bistarda is a birde as great as an egle, of the maner of an egle, and of suche colour, saue in the winges & in the tayle it hath some white feders; he hath a crooked byll, & longe talants. and it is slowe of flight / & whan he is on the grownde, than must he ryse .iij. or iiij. tymes or he can come to any fulle flight. he taketh his mete on the erth; for .v. or .vi. of them togeder be so bold that they festen on a shepe & tere hym a-sonder / & so ete the flesshe of him / & this birde dothe ete also of dede bestes & stinkyn caryon, and it eteth also grasse & grene erbes / & it layth his eggis vpon the grounde, & bredeth them out the while that the corne groweth on the felde."—L. Andrewe, Noble Lyfe, L ij back.

1. 695, Crane. "Cap. lix. The Crane is a great byrde / and whan they flye, they be a greate many of them to-gyder in ordre, and a-monge them they chose a kynge the whiche they obey / whan the crane sleepth, than standeth he vpon one fote with his hede vnder his winges / & ther is one that kepeth the wache with his hede vpryght to-wardes the ayre / & whan they ete, than the kynge kepeth the wache fore them, and than the cranes ete without sorowe. Aristotiles sayth that aboue Egipt in farre lowdes come the cranes in the winter / and there the fight with the pygmeis as before is shewed in the .c. & .xvi. chapter.*

1. 695, peacock. "Paon revestu. A Peacocke flayed, parboyled, larded, and stucke thicke with Cloues; then roasted, with his feet wrapped vp to keepe them from scorching; then couered againe with his owne skinne as soone as he is cold, and so vnderpropped that, as aliue, hee seemes to stand on his legs: In this equipage a gallant, and daintie service."—1611, Cotgrave.

1. 695, Peacock. "Pauo / the pecocke is a very fayre byrde / and it hath a longe necke, and hath on his hede feders lyke a lytell crowne / he hathe a longe tayle the whyche he setteth on hye very rycheli, but whan he loketh on hys lothly fete, he lateth his tayle sinke. Be nyght, whan the Pecocke can nat see hymselfe, than he cryeth ernefully, and thynketh that he hath lost hys beautye / and with his crye he feareth all serpentes / in suche maners that they dare nat abyde in those places whereas they here hym crye / and whan the pecocke clymmeth hye, that is a token of rayne. . . also the pecocke is envious & wylle nat knowe his yonges tyll that they have the crowne of feders vpon theyr hede, and that they begynne to lyken hym. . . . The flesshe of hym will nat lightely rote nor stynke / and it is euyll flesshe to disiest, for it can nat lightely be rosted or soden ynough."—L. Andrewe, Noble Lyfe (o. iv.), Cap. xci.

1. 696, Heironsew. Ardea is a byrde that fetcheth his mete in ye water, & yet he byldeth vpon the hyest trees that he can. This birde defendeth his yonges from ye goshawke, castinge his dounge vpon him / & than the fedders of the goshawke rote of ye dounge of ardea as far as it touchet[h]. Nob. Lyfe, L. ij.

1. 696, Partrich. "Cap. xcvi. Perdix is a byrde very wylye, & the cockes feght oftentymes for the heanes. and these byrdes flye of no heght / and they put theyr hedes in the erthe, & they thinke that they than be well hyden, for whan she seeth nobody she thinketh that nobody seeth here. & she bredeth out other partriches egges / for whan she hath lost her eggs, than she steleth other egges & bredeth them / & whan they be hatched that they can go on the grounde / than this damme setteth them out of the nest / but whan they be a-brode, & here the wyse of theyr owne dammes, incontinent they leue theyr damme that brought them up, & go to their owne natural damme / & than she that brought them vp hath lost her labour. The Operacion. The flesshe of a partriche is most holsomest of all wylde fowles, the brest & vppermoste parte of the bodie is the swetest, & hathe the best sauoure / but the hinder parte is nat so swete." I. Andrewe, Noble Lyfe, sign. p. i. & back.

l. 698, Lark. Alauda: the larke is a lytel birde, & with every man well beknowen through his songe / in the somer thei begynneth to singe in the dawning of the day, geuynge knowlege to the people of the cominge of the daye; and in fayre weder he reioyseth sore / but whan it is rayne weder, than it singeth selden / he singeth nat sittinge on the grownde nouther / but whan he assendith vpwarde, he syngeth mereli / & in the descending it falleth to the grownde lyke a stone. The Operacion. The larkes flesshe hardeneth the beli, and the brothe of hym that he was soden in, slaketh the beli. L.

1. 706, Snyte or Snipe. "Cap. lxxxiiij. Nepa is a byrde with a longe byll / & he putteth his byll in the erthe for to seke the worms in the grounde / and they put their bylles in the erthe sometyme so depe that they can nat gete it vp agayne / & than they scratche theyr billes out agayn with theyr fete. This birde resteth betimes at nyght / and they be erly abrode on the morninge / & they have swete flesshe to be eten."

1. 788-795, Sanguineus, Colericus, Fleumaticus, Malencolicus. Men were divided into these four classes, according to their humours. Laurens Andrewe says, in his Noble Lyfe, "And the bodij of man is made of many divers sortes of lymmes / as senewes / vaynes / fatte / flesshe & skynne. And also of the foure moistours / as sanguyne / flematyke / coleryke & melancoly." (fol. a iv. back) col. 2. In his Chapter "Howe that man commeth into the house of dethe," he has drawings of these four types of man, on either side of King Death & the skeleton under him. Men die, he says in thre ways. 1. by one of the four elements of which they are made, overcoming the others; 2. by humidum radicale or 'naturall moystour' forsaking them; 3. by wounds; "& these thre maners of dethes be contained in the four complexcions of man / as in the sanguyne / colerike / flematike / & melancoly. The sanguyne wareth oftentymes so olde through gode gouernaunce / that he must occopy spectacles, & liue longe or hummidum radicale departe frome him / but than he dyeth. The colerike commeth oftentymes to* dethe be accidentall maner through his hastines, for he is of nature hote & drye. The flematike commeth often to dethe thorough great excesse of mete & drinke, or other great labours doinge / for his nature is colde and moyste, & can not well disiest. And melancoly is heuy / full of care & heuynes / whereof he engendereth moche euyll blode that causeth great sekenes, which bringeth him vnto dethe. Thus go we al vnto the howse of dethe / the one thrugh ensuynge of his complexion / the other through the ordenances of almyghty god. The thirde through the planetis & signes of the firmament." fol. a vi.

1. 799, Beef. Laurens Andrewe, Noble Lufe, sign. C. i., Pt. i. says, "Of the oxce, ca. xiiij. "The oxce is a companable beste, & amonge his compani he is very meke / & alwaye he seketh his felowe that was wont to go in the plowghe wyth hym / and whan he fyndeth nat his felow, than cryeth he wyth a lowde voyce, makyng gret mone / as it were one that wolde make a mourninge complaynt. A bull lyueth .xv. yere, and a oxce .xx. yere. ¶ Isaac sayth that an oxce flessh is the dryest flesshe amonge all other / & his blode is nat holsome to be eten, for it wyll nat lightly disieste. & therfore it fedeth sore, & it maketh euyll humoures, & bredeth melancoly / & they melancolicus that eat moche suche metes be like to suffer many diseases, as to gete an harde mylte / the febris quartayn / the dropcy / mangnies, lepry, &c."

1. 799, Mutton. Wether mutton was rightly held the best. See "The operacion" below. "¶ Of the Ramme or weddr. Ca. iij. Ysydorus sayth that the ramme or wedder is the lodysman of other shepe / and he is the male or man of the oye, and is stronger than the other shepe / & he is also called a wedder because of a worme that he hath in his hede / & whan that beginneth for to stirre, than wyll he tucke and feght / and he fereth naturally the thonder, as other shepe dothe. For whan a shepe is with frute, hering the thonder, she casteth her frute, and bryngeth it dede to the worlde and the wedder in the tyme that he bespryngeth the oye, than is it in the tyme of loue amonge the shepe / and the Ramme or wedder wyl feght boldly for theyr wyues one with another....

The Operacion.

The flesshe of a yonge wether that is gelded is much better than any other motton / for it is not so moyste as other motton, and it is hoter, and whan it disgesteth well it maketh gode blode / but the flessh of an oled ramme wyll not lightely disgest, & that is very euyll." L. Andrewe, Noble Lyfe, Pt. I. sign. b. i. back.

1. 800, Chykon. On the cocke & hen L. Andrewe discourses as follows: "the Cocke is a noble byrde with a combe on his hed & vnder his iawes / he croweth in the night heuely & light in the morninge / & is fare herd with the winde. The lyon is afrayd of the cocke / & specially of the whyte / the crowyng of the cocke is swete & profitable; he wakeneth the sleper / he conforteth the sorowful / & reioyseth the wakers in tokenynge that the night is passed . . . The flesshe of the coscke is groser than the flesshe of the heme or capon. Nota / the olde cockes flesshe is tenderer than the yonge. The capons flesshe is mightiest of all fowles & maketh gode blode. Auicenna. The cokerels flesshe that neuer crewe is better than the olde cockes flesshe: the stones be gode for them that haue to light a disiestyon / the brothe of hym is gode for the payn in the mawe that commeth of wynde." Noble Lyfe, n. i. back. Of the hen, L. Andrewe says: "the henne is the wyfe of the cocke/& ye shall lay odde egges vnder her for to hatche / . . The flesshe of the yonge henne or she haue layde / is better than of the olde henne / also the grese of the cheken is moche hoter than of the henne." Noble Lyfe, n. i. back.

1. 802, Goose. "The tame gese.. be heuy in fleinge, gredi at their mete, & diligent to theyr rest / & they crye the hours of ye night, & therwith they fere ye theues. In the hillis of alpis be gese as great, nere hande, as an ostriche: they be so heuy of body that they cannat flee, & so me take them with the hande.. The gose flessh is very grose of nature in disiestion." Noble Lufe, L. i. back. Part ii, cap. 10.

1. 803, Capon. "Gallinacius / the capon is a gelded cocke / & because that he is gelded he waxeth the soner fatte / & though he go with the hennes, he dothe nat defende them / nor he croweth nat." L. Andrewe, Noble Lyf, fol. n. ij.

1. 804, Eggis. "the new lyde egges be better than the olde / the henne egges be better than ani other egges, whan thei be fresshe, & specialli whan thei be rere, than they make gode blode / but the egges that be harde rosted be of the grose metis.

The Operacion.

All maners of egges waken a man to the worke of lecherie, & specialli sparowes egges. Auicezna: The ducke egges & suche like make grose humoures. The best of the egges is the yolke, & that causeth sperma / the white of the egge enclineth to be cole. whan an hezne shall brede, take hede of those egges that be blont on bothe endes, & thei shal be hezne chekens / & those that be longe & sharpe on bothe endes shall be cocke chekens." L. Andrewe. Noble Lufe (o iij. back).

1.808, Lamb. Laurens Andrewe, Pt. i. says. ¶ Of the Lamme. Cap. primo. In the beginnynge we have the Lamme, because he is the moste mekest beste leuinge, for it offendeth nobody / and all that he hathe on him is gode / yº flesshe for to eate, the skynne to make parchement or ledder / the donge for to donge the felde / the clawes & hornes be medicinable / he dredeth the wolfe sore / & he knoweth his damme best be her bleting, though she be amonge many shepe.

The Operacion.

The Lamme that soucketh his damme hath his flesshe very slymie, & nat lowable / and it will nat be disgested, principally of them that haue cold stomakes. lammes of a yere olde be better & lighter to disgest / & they make gode blode / and specyally they be gode for theym that be hote & drye of complexcyon & dwell in a hote & drye lande / lammes flesshe is very gode for one that is hole & lusti, but for theim that be seke it is very euyll: though it lightely disgest and descende out of the man / yet it is euyll for other partes of the body, for it maketh slimy humours. sign. b. i.

1. 808, Cony. "The coney is a lytel beste dwellynge in an hole of the erthe / & thore as he vseth he encreaseth very moche, and therfore he is profitable for man, for he casteth oftentymes in the yere. Ysaac sayth. That conys flesshe hath properli the vertue to strengen the mawe and to dissolue the bely / and it casseth moche vryne." The Noble Lyfe, sign. e. i.

Mussels (Mityli, Chamæ) were never in credit, but amongst the poorer sort, till lately the lilly-white Mussel was found out about Romerswall, as we sail betwixt Flushing and Bergen-up-Zon, where indeed in the heat of Sommer they are commonly and much eaten without any offence to the head, liver, or stomach: yea my self (whom once twenty Mussels had almost poisoned at Cambridg, and who have seen sharp, filthy, and cruel diseases follow the eating of English Mussels) did fill my self with those Mussels of the Low Country, being never a whit distempered with my bold adventure. 1. 970, dogge. Here is the first part of Laurens Andrewe's Chapter.

Of the dogge. ca. xxiiij.

The dogge is an onclenly beste / that eteth so moche that he vomyteth it out & eteth it vp agayne / it is lightly angry, and byteth gladly strauzge dogges / he barketh moche / he kn[oweth] his name well / he is hered [all over his b]ody, he loueth his mast[er, and is eselye] lerned to many games / & be night he kepeth the house. There be many houndes that for the loue of theyr maister they wyll rozne in their owne dethe / & whan the dogge is seke / he seketh grasse or other crbes / & that he eteth, and heleth himselfe so / and there be many maner of dogges or houndes to hawke & hunt, as grayhoundes / braches / spanyellis, or suche other, to hunt hert and hynde / & other bestes of chace & venery, &c. and suche be named gentyll houndes. The bitche hath mylke .v. or vij. dayes or she litter her whelpes / and that milke is thicker than any other mylke excepte swynes mylke or hares mylke. fol. c. iv.

1. 970, Catte. L. Andrewe says

"Of the Catte. ca. xxv.

The catte is a beste that seeth sharpe, and she byteth sore / and seratcheth right perylously / & is principall ennemye to rattis & myce / & her colour is of nature graye / and the cause that they be other wyse colowred, that commethe through chaunge of mete, as it is well marked by the house catte, for they be selden colored lyke the wylde catte. & their flesshe is bothe nesshe & soffte." Noble Lufe, Part II. c. iv.

1. 983. Bathe. 'Bathing is harmful to them [who are splenitic] chiefly after meat, and copulation (following) on surfeit... Let him also bathe himself in sweet water. Without, he is to be leeched and smeared with oil of roses, and with onlayings (or poultices made of) wine and grapes, and often must an onlay be wrought of butter, and of new wax, and of hyssop and of oil; mingle with goose grease or lard of swine, and with frankincense and mint; and when he bathes let him smear himself with oil; mingle (it) with saffron.' 1. 1040. Nurrieris. I find no such name in Sclden's chap. ix., Of Women. Does the word mean 'foster-mothers or fathers,' from the Latin "Nutricarii, Matricularii, quibus enutriendi ac educandi infantes projectos cura incumbebat: Nourissiers. Vita S. Goaris cap. 10: Hæcque consuetudo erat, ut quando rdiquis homo de ipsis infantibus projectis misericordia vellet curam habere, ab illis, quos Nutricarios vocant, matriculariis S. Petri compararet, et illi Episcopo ipsum infantem præsentare deberent, et postea Episcopi auctoritas eumdem hominem de illo Nutricario confirmabat. Id clarius explicatur a Wandelberto in Vita ejusdem Sancti, cap. 20." Ducange, ed. 1845.

Extracts about Fish from "The noble lyfe & natures of man, Of bestes / serpentys / fowles & fisshes p be moste knowen."

A VERY rare black-letter book, without date, and hitherto undescribed, except perhaps incorrectly by Ames (vol. 1, p. 412, and vol. 3, p. 1531), has been lent to me by Mr Algernon Swinburne. Its title is given above: "The noble lyfe and natures of man" is in large red letters, and the rest in smaller black ones, all surrounded by woodcuts of the wonderful animals, mermaids, serpents, birds, quadrupeds with men's and women's heads, a stork with its neck tied in a knot, and other beasts "y be most knowen." The illustrations to each chapter are wonderfully quaint. The author of it says in his Prologus "In the name of ower sauiour criste Iesu, maker & redemour of al mankynd / I Lawrens Andrewe of the towne of Calis have translated for Johannes doesborrowe, booke prenter in the cite of Andwarpe, this present volume deuvded in thre partes, which were neuer before in no maternall langage prentyd tyl now / " As it is doubtful whether another copy of the book is known, I extract from the Third Part of this incomplete one such notices of the fish mentioned by Russell or Wynken de Worde, as it contains, with a few others for curiosity's sake : - here after followeth of the natures of the fisshes of the See whiche be right profitable to be vnderstande / Wherof I wyll wryte be the helpe and grace of almighty god, to whose laude & prayse this mater ensueth.

Fifteen Directions to preserve Health.

(From his Naturall & Artificial Directions for health, 1602, p. 57-63.)

Declare vnto mee a dayly dyet, whereby I may liue in health, and not trouble my selfe in Physicke.

(1) I will: first of all in the morning when you 1. Stretch are about to rise vp, stretch your self strongly: for yourself. thereby the animall heate is somewhat forced into the outward partes, the memorie is quickned, and the bodie strengthened.

- (2) Secondarily, rub and chafe your body with the 2. Rub yourself. palmes of your hands, or with a course linnen cloth; the breast, back, and belly, gently: but the armes, thighes, and legges roughly, till they seem ruddy and warme.
  - (3) Euacuate your selfe.

3. Go to stool.

(4) Put on your apparell: which in the summer 4. Put on your time must be for the most part silke, or buffe, made of clothes. buckes skinne, for it resisteth venime and contagious ayres: in winter your vpper garment must be of cotton or friezeadow.

(5) When you have apparelled your selfe han- 5. Comb your somely, combe your head softly and easily with an Iuorie combe: for nothing recreateth the memorie more.

(6) Picke and rub your teeth: and because I 6. Clean your would not have you to bestow much cost in making teeth.

(How to keep the teeth sound and the breath sweet, dentrifices for them; I will aduertise you by foure rules of importance how to keepe your teeth white and vncorruyt (sic), and also to haue a sweete breath. First, wash well your mouth when you have eaten your meat: secondly, sleepe with your mouth somewhat open. Thirdly, spit out in the morning that which is gathered together that night in the throate: then take a linnen cloth, and rub your teeth well within and without, to take away the fumositie of the meat and the yellownesse of the teeth. For it is that which putrifieth them and infecteth the breath. But least peraduenture your teeth become loose and filthy, I will shew you a water farre better then pouders, which shall fasten them, scoure the mouth, make sound the gums, and cause the flesh to growe againe, if it were fallen away. Take halfe a glasse-full of vineger, and as much of the water of the mastick tree (if it may easily be gotten) of rosemarie, myrrhe, mastick, bole Armoniake, Dragons herbe, roche allome, of each of them an ounce; of fine cinnamon halfe an ounce, and of fountaine water three glassefulles; mingle all well together and let it boile with a small fire, adding to it halfe a pound of honie, and taking away the scumme of it; then put in a little bengwine, and when it hath sodden a quarter of an houre, take it from the fire, and keepe it in a cleane bottle, and wash your teeth therewithall as well before meate as after; if you hould some of it in your mouth a little while, it doth much good to the head, and sweetneth the breath. I take this water to be better worth then a thousand of their dentifrices.

Use Vaughan's Water

made after this recipe.

It's better than 1000 Dentrifices.)

7. Wash,

(7) Wash your face, eyes, eares and hands, with fountaine water. I have knowne divers students which vsed to bathe their eyes onely in well water twise a day, whereby they preserved their eyesight free from all passions and bloudsheds, and sharpened their memories maruaylously. You may sometimes bathe your eyes in rosewater, fennell water, or eyebright water, if you please; but I know for certaintie, that you neede them not as long as you vse good fountaine water. Moreouer, least you by old age or some other meanes doe waxe dimme of sight, I will declare vnto you, the best and safest remedie which I knowe, and The best remedy this it is: Take of the distilled waters of verueine, bettonie, and fennell one ounce and a halfe, then take one ounce of white wine, one drachme of Tntia (if you may easilie come by it) two drachmes of sugarcandy, one drachme of Aloes Epatick, two drachmes of womans milke, and one scruple of Camphire: beat those into pouder, which are to be beaten, and infuse them together for foure and twenty hours space, and then straine them, and so vse it when you list.

(8) When you have finished these, say your morn- 8. Say your ing prayers, and desire God to blesse you, to preserue you from all daungers, and to direct you in all your actions. For the feare of God (as it is written) is the beginning of wisedome: and without his protection whatsoeuer you take in hand, shall fall to ruine. Therefore see that you be mindfull of him, and remember that to that intent you were borne, to weet, to set foorth his glorie and most holy name.

(9) Goe about your businesse circumspectly, and 9. Set to work. endeauour to banish all cares and cogitations, which are the onely baits of wickednesse. Defraud no man of his right: for what measure you give vnto your neighbour, Be honest. that measure shall you receive. And finally, imprint this saving deepely in your mind: A man is but a steward of his owne goods; wherof God one day will demaund an account.

(10) Eate three meales a day vntill you come to the 10. Eat only three age of fourtie yeares: as, your breakefast, dinner, and meals a day. supper; yet, that betweene breakefast and dinner there be the space of foure houres, and betwixt dinner and supper seauen houres: the breakfast must be lesse then dinner, and the dinner somewhat lesse then supper.

Eat light food before heavy.

In the beginning of meales, eate such meates as will make the belly soluble, and let grosse meats be the last. Content your selfe with one kind of meate, for diversities hurt the body, by reason that meats are not all of one qualitie: Some are easily digested, others againe are heavy, and will lie a long time vpon the stomack: also, the eating of sundrie sorts of meat require often pottes of drinke, which hinder concoction; like as we see often putting of water into the meatpotte to hinder it from seething. Our stomack is our bodies kitchin, which being distempered, how can we liue in temperate order: drinke not aboue foure times, and that moderately, at each meale: least the belly-God hale you at length captive into his prison house of gurmandise, where you shall be afflicted with as many diseases as you have devoured dishes of sundry sorts. The cups whereof you drinke, should be of siluer, or siluer and gilt.

Drink hinders digestion.

Use silver cups.

11. Don't work directly after meals, but talk,

wash,

and clean your teeth.

(11) Labour not either your mind or body presently after meales: rather sit a while and discourse of some pleasant matters: when you have ended your confabulations, wash your face and mouth with cold waters, then go to your chamber, and make cleane your teeth with your tooth-picker, which should be either of ivorie, silver, or gold. Watch not too long after supper, but depart within two hours to bed. But if necessitie compell you to watch longer then ordinary, then be sure to augment your sleepe the next morning; that you may recompence nature, which otherwise through your watching would not a little be impaired.

12. Undress by the fire in winter. (12) Put of your clothes in winter by the fire side: and cause your bed to bee heated with a warming panne:

vnless your pretence bee to harden your members, and to apply your selfe vnto militarie discipline. This outward heating doth wonderfully comfort the inward heat, it helpeth concoction, and consumeth moisture.

(13) Remember before you rest, to chew down two 13, Before bed, or three drachmes of mastick: for it will preserue your body from bad humours.

chew Mastic, and

(14) Pray feruently to God, before you sleepe, to 14, Pray to God, inspire you with his grace, to defend you from all perils and subtelties of wicked fiends, and to prosper you in all your affaires: and then lay aside your cares and businesse, as well publicke as private: for that night, in so doing, you shall slepe more quietly. Make water at least once, and cast it out: but in the morning make water in an vrinal: that by looking on it, Look at your you may ghesse some what of the state of your body. Urinal. Sleep first on your right side with your mouth open, and let your night cappe haue a hole in the top, through Have a hole in which the vapour may goe out.

(15) In the morning remember your affayres, and if 15. Against you be troubled with rheumes, as soone as you have white peppers risen, vse diatrion piperion, or eate white pepper now and then, and you shall be holpen.

first I will begin with the dyet for every day. In the beginning when you arise from the bed, extend forth all your members, for by this meanes the animal spirits are drawne to the outward members, the *braine is made subtill, & the body strengthened. Then rub the whole body somewhat with the palmes, the brest, back and belly gently, but the armes and legs with the hands, either with warm linnen: next, the head is to be scrubbed from the forepart to the hinderpart very lightly. After you are risen, I will that you defend with all care and diligence your head, necke, and feet, from all cold in the morning; for there is no doubt, but in the morning and evening the cold doth offend more, then it doth about noone tide, by reason of the weaknes of the Sun-beames. Put on your clothes neat and cleane: in the Summer season, first wash with cleane pure water, before described; but in the Winter warming yourself season sit somewhat by the fire, not made with turfe or stinking coale, but with oake or other wood that burneth cleare, for our bodies are somewhat affected with our clothes, and as strength is increased by the vse of meat and drinke, and our life defended and preserued; and so our garments doe conserue the heat of our bodies, and doe drive away colds: so that as diet and apparel may seeme alike, so in either of them a like diligence is to be preferred.

In the Summer-time I chiefly commend garments In Summer of Harts-skinnes, and Calues-skins, for the Hart is a wear deer's and creature of long life, and resisteth poyson and Serpents; therefore I my selfe vse garments of the like sort for the winter season, also neuerthelesse lined with good linnen. Next I doe judge it not to bee much amisse to vse garments of Silke or Bombace, or of purple: also of Martyn or Wolfe-skinnes, or made of Fox in Winter, wolf skinnes, I suppose to be good for the winter; notwithstanding in the time of Pestilence, apparell of Silke and skinnes is condemned, because it doth easily admit and receive the contagious ayre, and doth retain it long. After the body is well clothed, kembe your head wel Comb your head with an Iuory comb, from the forehead to the backepart, drawing the comb some forty times at the least; then wash all the instruments of the sences, as the eies, wash your face, the ears, the nostrils, the mouth, the tongue, the teeth, and all the face with cold water; and the eyes are not only to be washed, but being open plainly, immerg'd: and the gumme and foulnes of the eie-lids that do there clean your stick, to remoue; somtimes also to besprinkle the water with Rose-water or Fenel-water, also rubb the rub your neck neck well with *a linnen napking somewhat course, for well. For Aristotle doth affirme, and so doth Albertus Magnus, that a Smaragd worne about the necke, is good against the Falling-sicknes: for surely the vertue of an hearbe is great, but much more the vertue of a for the virtue of precious *stone, which is very likely that they are precious stones is endued with occult and hidden vertues.

I would not that you should observe a certaine houre, either for dinners or suppers, as I have sufficiently Don't have one told you before, lest that daily custome should be for your meals, altered into nature: and after this intermission of this custome of nature, hurt may follow; for custome doth imitate nature, and that which is accustomable, the very same thing is now become naturall.

Take your meate in the hotte time of Summer in cold places, but in the Winter let there bee a bright In Winter eat in hot well-aired places.

fire, and take it in hotte places, your parlors or Chambers being first purged and ayred with suffumigations, which I would not have you to *enter before the suffumigation bee plainely extinct, lest you draw the fume by reason of the odour.

And seeing one and the same order of diet doth not promiscuously agree with all men, take your meate in order, as is before said, and sometimes also intermit the vse of meats for a whole day together, because through hunger, the faults of the stomacke which haue beene taken eyther by much drinking or surfetting, or by any other meanes, may be depelled and remoued.

By this meanes also your bodies shall be better accustomed to endure and suffer hunger and fasting, eyther in iourneyes or wars. Let your suppers bee more larger then your dinners, vnlesse nightly diseases or some distillations doe afflict you.

After meat taken, neither labour in body nor mind must be vsed, and wash the face and mouth with cold water, clense the teeth either with Iuory, or a Harts horne, or some picker of pure siluer or gold.

After your banquets, passe an houre or two in pleasant talkes, or walke yee very gently and soberly, neither vse much watchings long in the night, but the space of two howres goe to your bed; but if honest *businesse doe require you to watch, then sleepe afterwards so much the longer, that your sleepe may well recompence your former watchings. Before that you go to your bed, gently smooth down your head, armes, and shoulders, the back and all the body, with a gentle and soft rubbing, vnlesse you meane to do it in the morning to mooue distribution, whose time is best to be done in the morning.

In the Winter, sitting by the fire, put off your garments, and dry your feet by the fire, neuerthelesse anoyd the heat and the smoke, because it is very hurtfull both to the lungs, and the eyes.

Fast for a day now and then.

Eat more at supper than dinner.

After meals, wash your face, and clean your teeth,

c hat and walk soberly.

Don't sit up late. [* Page 45.]

Before bed, rub your body gently.

Undress by a fire in Winter,

In the Winter time, warme well your garments at and warm your the fire, and warm the linings of the same, for it helpeth concoction, and remoueth all humidity and moysture. But my father did not allow of this custome, warning men of strength, and those that are borne for the Common-wealth, not to accustom themselves to such kind of softnesse, which doe weaken our bodies. when you put off your garments to go to bed, then put Put off your cares away all your cogitations, & lay them aside, whether they be publike or private, for when all your *members be free from all cares, you shall then sleep the quieter, concoction and the other naturall actions shall best be performed.

Wynkyn de Worde introduces some dishes, sauces, fish, and one wine, not mentioned by Russell.

The new Dishes are-

Fayge (p. 271, l. 10). This may be for Sage, the herb, or a variety of Fritter, like Fruyter vaunte (p. 271, l. 2; p. 273, l. 24), fruyter say (p. 273, l. 24), or a dish that I cannot find, or a way of spelling figs.

Fruyter say, p. 273, l. 24. If say is not for Sage, then it may be a fish, contrasted with the vaunte, which I suppose to mean 'meat.' Sey is a Scotch name for the Coalfish, Merlangus Carbonarius. Yarrell, ii. 251.

Charlet (p. 273, 1. 28). The recipe in 'Household Ordinances,' p. 463, is, Take swete cowe mylk and put into a panne, and cast in therto 3 lkcs of eyren and the white also, and sothen porke brayed, and sage; and let hit boyle tyl hit crudde, and colour it with saffron, and dresse hit up, and serve hit forthe.' Another recipe for Charlet Enforsed follows, and there are others for Charlet and Charlet icoloured, in Liber Cure, p. 11.

Jowtes, p. 274, last line. These are broths of beef or fish boiled with chopped boiled herbs and bread, H. Ord. p. 461. Others are made 'with swete almond mylke,' ib. See 'Joutus de Almonde,' p. 15, Liber Cure. For 'Joutes'

p. 47; 'for oper ioutes,' p. 48.

Browes, p. 274, last line. This is doubtless the Brus of Household Ordinances, p. 427, and the bruys of Liber Cure, p. 19, l. 3, brewis, or broth. Brus was made of chopped pig's-inwards, leeks, onions, bread, blood, vinegar. For 'Brewewes in Somere' see H. Ord. p. 453.

Chewettes, p. 275, l. 4, were small pies of chopped-up livers of pigs, hens, and capons, fried in grease, mixed with hard eggs and ginger, and then fried or baked. Household Ordinances, p. 442, and Liber Cure, p. 41. The Chewets for fish days were similar pies of chopped turbot, haddock, and cod, ground dates, raisins, prunes, powder and 'salt, fried in oil, and boiled in sugar and wine. L. Cure, p. 41. Markham's Recipe for 'A Chewet Pye' is at p. 80-1 of his English Houswife. Chewit, or small Pie; minced or otherwise. R. Holme. See also two recipes in MS. Harl. 279, fol. 38.

Flaunes (p. 275, l. 4) were Cheesceakes, made of ground cheese beaten up with eggs and sugar, coloured with saffron, and baked in 'cofyns' or crusts. 'A Flaune of Almayne' or 'Crustade' was a more elaborate preparation of dried or fresh raisins and pears or apples pounded, with cream, eggs, bread, spices, and butter, strained and baked in 'a faire coffyn or two.' H. Ord. p. 452.

Of new Sauces, Wynkyn de Worde names Gelopere & Pegyll (p. 279, 1. 4). Gelopere I cannot find, and can only suggest that its p may be for f, and that "cloves of gelofer," the clove-gillyflower, may have been the basis of it. These cloves were stuck in ox tongues, see "Lange de beof," Liber Cure, p, 26. Muffett also recommends Gilly-flour Vinegar as the best sauce for sturgeon in summer, p. 172; and Vinegar of Clove-Gilliflowers is mentioned by Culpepper, p. 97, Physical Directory, 1649.

Pegylle I take to be the Pykulle of Liber Cure Cocorum, p. 31, made thus;

'Take droppyng of capone rostyd wele

With wyne and mustarde, as have pou cele [bliss], With onyons smalle schrad, and sothun in grece,

Meng alle in fere, and forthe hit messe.'

The new Wine is Campolet, p. 267. Henderson does not mention it; Halliwell has 'Campletes. A kind of wine, mentioned in a curious list in MS. Rawl. C. 86.' [See the list in the Notes to Russell, above, p. 202.] I suppose it to be the wine from 'Campole. The name of a certaine white grape, which hath very white kernels.' Cotgrave.

Of new Fish W. de Worde names the Salens (p. 280, l. 8), Cottell and Tench (p. 281). Torrentyne he makes sele turrentyne (p. 280) seemingly, but has turrentyne salte as a fish salted, at p. 282, l. 7.

Cottell, p. 282, I. 14, the cuttlefish. Of these, Sepiæ vel Lolligines calamariæ, Muffet says, they are called also 'sleewes' for their shape, and 'scribes' for their incky humour wherewith they are replenished, and are commended by Galen for great nourishers; their skins be as smooth as any womans, but their flesh is brawny as any ploughmans; therefore I fear me Galen rather commended them upon hear-say then upon any just cause or true experience.

For the Salens I can only suggest thunny. Aldrovandi, de Piscibus, treating of the synonyms of the Salmon, p. 482, says, "Græcam salmonis nomenclaturam non inuenio, neque est quod id miretur curiosus lector, cum in Oceano tantum fluminibusque in eum se exonerantibus reperiatur, ad quæ veteres Græci nunquam penetrarunt. Qui voluerit, Salangem appellare poterit.  $\sum \alpha \lambda \hat{\alpha}_{\chi} \xi$  enim boni, id est, delicati piscis nomen legitur apud Hesychium, nec præterea qui sit, explicatur: aut a migrandi natura κατανάδρομος. vel δρόμας fluviatilis dicatur, nam Aristoteles in mari dromades vocat Thunnos aliosque gregales, qui aliunde in Pontum excurrunt, et vix vno loco conquiescunt; aut nomen fingatur a saltu, & άλμων dicitur. Non placet tamen, salmonis nomen a saltu deduci, aut etiam á sale, licet saliendi natura ei optime quadret saleque aut muria inueturaria etiam soleat. Non enim latine sed a Germanis Belgisuè Rheni accolis, aut Gallis Aquitanicis accepta vox est." See also p. 318. 'Scardula, et Incobia ex Pigis, et Plota, Salena,' Gesner, de Piscibus, p. 273. Can salens be the Greek 'σωλην, a shell-fish. perhaps like the razor-fish. Epich. p. 22.'—Liddell and Scott—? I presume not. 'Solen. The flesh is sweet; they may be eaten fryed or boiled.' 1661, R. Lovell, Hist. of Animals, p. 240. 'Solen: A genus of bivalve mollusks. having a long slender shell; razor-fish.' Webster's Dict.

Sele turrentyne, p. 277. Seemingly a variety of seal, or of eel or sole if sele is a misprint. But I cannot suggest any fish for it.

Rochets, p. 281, l. 5. Rubelliones. Rochets (or rather Rougets, because they are so red) differ from Gurnards and Curs, in that they are redder by a great deal, and also lesser; they are of the like flesh and goodness, yet better fryed with onions, butter, and vinegar, then sodden. Muffett, p. 166.

The Booke of ### Demeanor.

Stand straight vpright, and both thy feet together closely standing,

Be sure on't, ever let thine eye

Serving at 4 be still at thy commanding.

Observe that nothing wanting be which should be on the bord.

Vnlesse a question moved be,

Silence.

8 be carefull: not a word.

If thou doe give or fill the drinke, with duty set it downe,

And take it backe with manlike cheere not like a rusticke Lowne.

Serving or filling drinke.

12

If on an errand thou be sent,
make haste and doe not stay,
When all have done, observe the time,
serve God and take away.

[p. 6.] If on an errand.

24

When thou hast done and dined well, remember thou repaire

To schoole againe with carefulnesse, be that thy cheefest care.

To schoole againe.

And marke what shall be read to thee, or given thee to learne, That apprehend as neere as may be, wisdome so doth warne.

19 *

With stedfast eye and carefull eare, remember every word Thy Schoole master shall speake to thee, 28 as memory shall afford.

To use the browes.

Let not thy browes be backward drawn, it is a signe of pride, Exalt them not, it shewes a hart

[p. 7.]

[p. 8.]

32 most arrogant beside.

The eves.

Nor let thine eyes be gloting downe, cast with a hanging looke: For that to dreamers doth belong, that goodnesse cannot brooke.

The forehead.

48

Let forehead joyfull be and full, it shewes a merry part, And cheerefulnesse in countenance, and pleasantnesse of heart.

Countenance.

Nor wrinckled let thy countenance be, still going to and fro: For that belongs to hedge-hogs right, they wallow even so.

The nose.

Nor imitate with Socrates, to wipe thy snivelled nose Vpon thy cap, as he would doe, nor yet upon thy clothes.

But keepe it cleane with handkerchiffe, provided for the same, Not with thy fingers or thy sleeve, 52 therein thou art too blame.

Blowing or breathing.

Blow not alowd as thou shalt stand, for that is most absurd,

Iust like a broken winded horse.

it is to be abhord.

Nor practize snufflingly to speake, for that doth imitate The brutish Storke and Elephant, Snuffling in the nose when you speake.

yea and the wralling cat. 60

> If thou of force doe chance to neeze, then backewards turne away From presence of the company, [p. 9.] Neezing.

64 wherein thou art to stay.

> Thy cheekes with shamefac't modesty, dipt in Dame Natures die, Not counterfet, nor puffed out,

The Cheekes.

68 observe it carefully.

> Keepe close thy mouth, for why, thy breath may hap to give offence, And other worse may be repayd

Breath-

72 for further recompence.

76

Nor put thy lips out like a foole as thou wouldst kisse a horse. When thou before thy betters art, and what is ten times worse.

Lips.

To gape in such unseemely sort, with ugly gaping mouth, Is like an image pictured Yawning.

80 a blowing from the south.

> Which to avoyd, then turne about, and with a napkin hide That gaping foule deformity, when thou art so aside. 84

Laughing.

To laugh at all things thou shalt heare, is neither good nor fit, It shows the property and forme of one with little wit.

Biting the lip.

100

To bite the lip it seemeth base, for why, to lay it open, Most base dissembling doggednesse, most sure it doth betoken.

Biting the upper lip.

And so to bite the upper lip doth most uncomely shew, The lips set close (as like to kisse) in manner seeme not so.

[p. 11.]

[p. 12.]

96

The tongue. To put the tongue out wantonly, and draw it in agen, Betokens mocking of thy selfe, in all the eyes of men, Spitting.

If spitting chance to move thee so thou canst it not forbeare, Remember do it modestly, 104 consider who is there.

> If filthiness, or ordure thou upon the floore doe cast, Tread out, and cleanse it with thy foot, 108 let that be done with haste.

Hammering in speech.

If in thy tale thou hammering stand, or coughing twixt thy words, It doth betoken a liers smell, 112 that's all that it affords.

Belching.

To belch or bulch like Clitipho, whom Terence setteth forth,

Commendeth manners to be base, 116 most foule and nothing worth.

If thou to vomit be constrain'd, avoyd from company:

So shall it better be excus'd,

Vomiting.

120 if not through gluttony.

Keep white thy teeth, and wash thy mouth with water pure and cleane,

Keeping the teeth

And in that washing, mannerly observe and keep a meane.

Thy head let that be kembd and trimd,

[p. 13.] Kembing the head.

let not thy haire be long,
It is unseemely to the eye,

128 rebuked by the tongue.

And be not like a slothfull wight, delighted to hang downe The head, and lift the shoulders up, Hanging down the head.

nor with thy browes to frowne.

To carry up the body faire, is decent, and doth shew

Carriage of the body.

A comely grace in any one,

Where ever he doth goe.

To hang the head on any side,
doth shew hypocrisie:
And who shall use it trust him not,

Hanging the head aside.

140 he deales with policie.

Let not thy privy members be layd open to be view'd, It is most shamefull and abhord, [p. 14.] Privy members.

144 detestable and rude.

Urine or winde.

Retaine not urine nor the winde, which doth thy body vex, So it be done with secresie,

148. let that not thee perplex.

Sitting.

And in thy sitting use a meane, as may become thee well,

Not straddling, no nor tottering, and dangling like a bell.

Curtesie.

160

Observe in Curtesie to take a rule of decent kinde, Bend not thy body too far foorth, nor backe thy leg behind.

The gate in going.

In going keep a decent gate,
not faining lame or broken,
For that doth seeme but wantonnesse, and foolishnesse betoken.

Apparrell.

Let thy apparrell not exceede, to passe for sumptuous cost,
Nor altogether be too base, for so thy credit's lost.

Be modest in thy wearing it, and keep it neat and cleane, For spotted, dirty, or the like, is lothsome to be seene.

This for thy body may suffice,
how that must ordred be:
Now at the Church thou shalt observe to God how all must be.

[No doubt incomplete. F. J. F.]

and left;

notice the yeomen, then stand before the screen

till the Marshal or Usher leads you to the table.

Be sedate and courteous if you are set with the gentlemen.

Cut your loaf in two, the top from the bottom;

cut the top crust in 4, and the bottom in 3.

Put your trencher before you, and don't eat or drink till your Mess is brought from the kitchen, lest you be thought starved or a glutton.

Have your nails clean.

Don't bite your bread,

but break it.

Don't quarrel at table,

or make grimaces.

¶ Sitthen to be left hande by neghe bou cast;
To hom bou boghe withouten wrast;
Take hede to 30mon on by ryght hande,

92 Oper ellis thurghe thi tepet hat is so gay.

[Fol. 13.] Don't cram your cheeks out with food like an ape, for if any one should speak to you, you can't answer, but must wait.

Don't eat on both sides of your mouth.

Don't laugh with your mouth full, or sup up your potage noisily.

Don't leave your spoon in the dish or on its side, but clean your spoon.

Let no dirt off your fingers soil
[p. 27, bot.] the cloth.
Don't put into the dish bread that you have once bitten.

Dry your mouth before you drink,

Don't call for a dish once removed, or spit on the table: that's rude.

Don't scratch your dog.

If you blow your nose, clean your hand; wipe it with your skirt or put it through your tippet.

Don't pick your teeth at meals, or drink with food in your mouth,

as you may get choked, or killed, by its stopping your wind.

Tell no tale to harm or shame your companions.

Don't stroke the cat or dog.

Don't dirty the table cloth with your knife.

Don't blow on your food, or put your knife in your mouth,

or wipe your teeth

¶ Expliciunt Statuta Familie bone Memorie.

Prof. Brewer has, I find, printed these Statuta in his most interesting and valuable Monumenta Franciscana, 1858, p. 582-6. He differs from Mr Brock and me in reading drunkelewe (drunken, in Chaucer, &c.) as 'drunke, lewe,' and vessels as 'bossels,' and in adding e's' to some final g's. He says, by way of Introduction, that, "Though entitled Ordinances for the Household of Bishop Grostete, this is evidently a Letter addressed to the Bishop on the management of his Household by some very intimate friend. From the terms used in the Letter, it is clear that the writer must have been on confidential terms with the Prelate. I cannot affirm positively that the writer was Adam de Marisco, although to no other would this document be attributed with greater probability. No one else enjoyed such a degree of Grostete's affection; none would have ventured to address him with so much familiarity. Besides, the references made more than once by Adam de Marisco in his letters to the management of the Bishop's household, greatly strengthen this supposition. See pp. 160, 170 (Mon. Francisc.). The MS. is a small quarto on vellum, in the writing of the 15th century. It is in all probability a translation from a Latin original."

With the different counsels to babees, pages, and servants, throughout this volume, may be compared Roger Ascham's advice to his brother-in-law, Mr C. H., when he put him to service with the Earl of Warwick, A.D. 1559. Here follows part of it, from Whitaker's Hist. of Richmondshire, p. 282.

NOTES TO THE BOOK OF CURTASYE.

p. 310, l. 377-8, Statut. The only Statute about horse-hire that I can find, is 20 Ric. II. cap. 5, A.D. 1396-7, given below. I suppose the Foure pens of l. 376 of the Boke of Curtasye was the price fixed by "the kyngis crye" or Proclamation, l. 378, or by the sheriff or magistrates in accordance with it as the "due Agreement to the party" required by the Statute.

"Item. Forasmuch as the Commons have made Complaint, that many great Mischiefs Extortions & Oppressions be done by divers people of evil Condition, which of their own Authority take & cause to be taken royally Horses and other Things, and Beasts out of their Wains Carts and Houses, saying & devising that they be to ride on hasty Messages & Business, where of Truth they be in no wise privy of any Business or Message, but only in Deceit & Subtilty, by such Colour and Device to take Horses, and the said Horses hastily to ride & evil entreat, having no Manner of Conscience or Compassion in this Behalf, so that the said Horses become all spoiled and foundered, paying no manner of Thing nor penny for the same, nor giving them any manner of sustenance; and also that some such manner of people, changing & altering their Names, do take and ride such Horses, and carry them far from thence to another Place, so that they to whom they belong, can never after by any mean see, have again, nor know their said Horses where they be, to the great Mischief Loss Impoverishment & Hindrance of the King's poor People, their Husbandry, and of their Living: Our Lord the King willing, for the Quietness and Ease of his People, to provide Remedy thereof, will & hath ordained, That none from henceforth shall take any such Horse or Beast in Such Manner, against the Consent of them to whom they be; and if any that do, and have no sufficient Warrant nor Authority of the King, he shall be taken and imprisoned till he hath made due Agreement to the Party."

That this seizing of horses for the pretended use of the king was no fancied grievance, even in much later times, is testified by Roger Ascham's letter to Lord Chancellor Wriothesley (? in 1546 A.D.) complaining of an audacious seizure of the horse of the invalid Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge, on the plea that it was to carry the king's fish, whereas the seizer's own servant was the nag's real burden: "tentatum est per hominem apud nos valde turbulentum, nomine Maxwellum." Ascham's Works, ed. Giles, v. 1, p. 99. In vols. ix., x., and xi. of Rymer, I find no Proclamation or Edict about horse-hire. In 1413 Henry V.'s Herbergeator is to provide Henry le Scrop, knight, with all that he wants "Proviso semper quòd idem Henricus pro hujusmodi Fænis, Equis, Carectis, Cariagiis, & aliis necessariis, per se, seu Homines & Servientes suos prædictos, ibidem capiendis, fideliter solvat & satisfaciat, ut est justum." Rymer, ix. 13.

The general rule shown by the documents in Rymer is that reasonable payments be made.

Ffor to serbe a lord.

[From the Rev. Walter Sneyd's copy of Mr Davenport Bromley's MS.]

MR SNEYD has just told me that Mr Arthur Davenport's MS. How to serve a Lord, referred to in my Preface to Russell, p. cvii, is in fact the one from Mr Sneyd's copy of which his sister quoted in her edition of the 'Italian Relation of England' mentioned on pp. xiv, xv of my Forewords. Mr Sneyd says: 'I made my copy nearly fourty years ago, during the lifetime of the late Mr A. Davenport's grandfather, who was my uncle by marriage. I recollect that the MS. contains a miscellaneous collection of old writings on various subjects, old recipes, local and family memoranda, &c., all of the 15th century; and, bound up with them in the old vellum wrapper, is an imperfect copy of the first edition of the Book of St Alban's. On Mr Arthur Davenport's death, last September, the MS. (with the estates) came into the possession of Mr Davenport Bromley, M.P., but a long time must elapse before it can be brought to light, as the house you mention is still unfinished, and the boxes of books stowed away in confusion.' On my asking Mr Sneyd for a sight of his copy, he at once sent it to me, and it proved so interesting-especially the Feast for a Bride, at the end—that I copied it out directly, put a few notes to it, and here it is. For more notes and explanations the reader must look the words he wants them for, out in the Index at the end of Part II. The date of the Treatise seems to me quite the end of the 15th century, if not the beginning of the 16th. The introduction of the Chamber, p. 373, the confusion of the terms of a Carver, 'unlose or tire or display', p. 377-enough to make a well-bred Carver faint: even Wynkyn de Worde in 1508 and 1513 doesn't think of such a thing—the cheese shred with sugar and sage-leaves,

p. 372, the 'Trenchours of tree or brede,' l. 16, below, &c., as well as the language, all point to a late date. The treatise is one for a less grand household than Russell, de Worde, and the author of the Boke of Curtasye prescribed rules for. But it yields to none of the books in interest: so in the words of its pretty 'scriptur' let it welcome all its readers:

> "Welcombe you bretheren godely in this hall! Joy be unto you all that en 1 this day it is now fall! that worthy lorde that lay in an Oxe stalle mayntayne your husbonde and you, with your gystys all!"

Having thus given the Graces as they stand in the Manuscript, I add the scheme of them which Mr Bradshaw has had the kindness to draw out. He says, "Here is a case in which nothing but parallel arrangement can afford a clue to the apparent confusion. The people who used these services were so thoroughly accustomed to them, that a word or two was enough to remind them of what was to follow—sometimes a whole series of prayers, or verses and responds, or suffrages. # Symon's Resson of Mysedome for all Maner Chyldryn.

[From MS. Bodl. 832, leaf 174.]

[The Rev. J. R. Lumby has kindly sent me the following amusing 'lesson of wysedome' to 'all maner chyldryn', signed Symon, which he found in the Bodleian. Mr G. Parker has read the proof with the MS. Lydgate sinned against most of its precepts. It makes the rod the great persuader to learning and gentleness.]

OF ABOUT 1500 A.D.

(From the Balliol MS. 354, ffl. ij C xxx.)

[As old Symon talks of the rod (p. 400, ll. 90, 62), as Caxton in his Book of Curtesye promises his 'lytyl John' a breechless feast, or as the Oriel MS. reads it, a 'byrchely' one, 1 & as the Forewords have shown that young people did get floggings in olden time, it may be as well to give here the sketch of a boy, flea-bitten no doubt, with little bobs of hazel twigs, that Richard Hill has preserved for us. Boys of the present generation happily don't know the sensation of unwelcome warmth that a sound flogging produced, and how after it one had to sit on the bottom of one's spine on the edge of the hard form, in the position recommended at College for getting well forward in rowing. But they may rest assured that if their lot had fallen on a birching school, they'd have heartily joined the school-boy of 1500 in wishing his and their masters at the devil, even though they as truant boys had been 'milking ducks, as their mothers bade them.'] hay! hay! by this day! what avayleth it me thowgh I say nay?

¶ I wold ffayn be a clarke; but yet hit is a strange werke; <sup>2</sup> the byrchyn twyggis be so sharpe, hit makith me haue a faynt harte. what avaylith it me thowgh I say nay?

Learning is strange work;

the birch twigs are so sharp.

¶ On monday in the mornyng whañ I shall rise at vj. of the clok,³ hyt is the gise

I'd sooner go 20 miles than go to school on Mondays,

> Se tu veulx estre bien courtoys, regarde ces reigles en françoys: assez souvent tes ongles roignes,

- 4 la longueur fait venir les roignes. lave tes mains [avant] digner, et aussi quant vouldras souper. avant di benedicite
- 8 que preignes ta nécessité. siez toy, mengue sans contredit on lieu où ton hoste te dit. du pain et du vin dois prendre,
- 12 et l'autre viande attendre.
  le morcel mys hors de la bouche,
  à ton vaissel plus ne l'atouche.
  ton morceau ne touche en salliere,
- 16 car ce n'est pas belle maniere, ne furge tes <sup>1</sup> dens de la pointe de costel, je t'en acointe. ne frote tes mains ne tes bras;
- 20 tien t'en le plus que tu pourras. puis à table ne crache point; je te di que c'est ung let point. de ta toaille ne fais corde;
- 24 honnesteté ne s'i accorde.

[Fol. 147.] Let the courteous mind these rules.

Pare your nails frequently.

Wash your hands before dinner and supper.

Say grace before eating.

Sit where your host tells you.

Take first bread and wine; wait for other food.

Don't put spit-out food in your dish, or dip meat in the salt-cellar.

[1 MS, ne surgete] or pick your teeth with the point of your knife.

Don't scratch your hands or arms, or spit; that's bad manners.

Don't roll your napkin into a rope.

Keep the cloth clean; collect your leavings. Don't stuff,

Don't go to sleep at table,

or break wind.

Don't ask your host for too much wine, or drink with a frothy mouth, or speak with a full one.

Don't keep your hands on the table, or wipe your teeth with the cloth.

Be cheerful and cultured;

and if you joke, despise no one.

Among great folk be silent.

Don't offer your leavings to any one.

If your dish is taken away, say nothing.

Drink moderately, so as not to muddle your head; and don't fill your belly to spoil your face. If any one gives you books, tien devant toy ton taillouer net, en ung vaissel ton relie met;

ne veilles ton morceau conduire 28 à ton désir, car trop peut nuyre.
garde toy bien de sommeiller à table, ne de conseiller.
s'entour toy a des gens grant rote,

32 garde toy bien que tu ne routes.
en plain digner, ne en la fin, n'efforce l'oste de son vin;
ne boy pas la bouche baveuse, 36 car la coustume en est honteuse.
ne parle pas la bouche plaine, car c'est laide chose et villaine.

ne tien tes mains dessoubz la table, 40 car c'est chose deshonnourable.
de la nappe n'essuye tes dens, monstre toy joieux et aprins,

44 ne di rien dont tu soyes reprins;
si tu te veulx fere priser,
ne vueilles nully mespriser;
il t'est conseillé en la bible et si ne la metz point dedans.

48 entre grans gens estre paisible.

n'offre à nully, si tu es saige, le demourant de ton potaige.
se on oste ung plat de devant toy, 52 n'en fay semblant, mes tien te coy, boy simplement à toute feste affin que n'affolle ta teste, et ne remply pas tant ta pence 56 qu'en toy n'ait belle contenance. se on meet lievres 1 en ta main,

<sup>1</sup> Le mot lievres du manuscrit signifie evidemment ici 'livres' (liber). C'est peut-être une erreur de copiste pour 'lettres' (litteræ, epistolæ). H. Michelant. mect les en ta manche ou [ton] sain. entre boire et vin tenir,

- 60 ne veilles long plait maintenir.

  se tu es servy de fromaige, si en pren poy, n'en fay oultraige;
  et si tu es servy de noix,
- 68 si en menjue deux ou troys.
  et quant tes mains tu laveras, on bassin point ne cracheras.
  quant tu rendras graces à Dieu,
- 72 si te tien en ton propre lieu;
  n'oblie pas les trespassez, souvengne-t-en tousjours assez.
  à ton hoste dois mercis rendre;
- 76 de ton aller dois congié prendre. se on donne à boire apres graces, soit en hanaps, voirres ou tasses, laisse premier boire ton hoste,
- 80 et toy apres, quant on luy oste.qui à ces choses aparcevroit,à table plus saige seroit.de ce seoir à table n'est digne
- 84 qui d'aucun bien ne porte signe.

put them in your sleeve or bosom. Don't keep the wine waiting while you dispute.

If you sup from a glass, drink all the wine or throw it away.

Wash again before eating fruit.

Don't be greedy after cheese, take a little.

Of walnuts, take only two or three.

Don't spit in the washing basin,

Keep in your place while Grace is said, and remember the dead.

Thank your host; take leave of the company. If drink is given after grace, let the host drink first, then you.

Whose attends to these things will be wiser;

whose will not, is not worthy to sit at table.

Contenance de Table.

S'A table te veulz maintenir, Honnestement te dois tenir, Et garde les enseignemens

- First think of the Poor.
- 4 Dont cilz vers sont commancemens.
  Chacun doit estre coutumiers
  De penser des povres premiers,
  Car li saoul, si ne scet mie

Don't eat before the blessing is given, 8 Com le jeun a dure vie.
 A viande nulz main ne mette
 Jusques la beneisson soit faitte;
 Ne t'assiez pas, je te conseille, and meat is served.

- 12 Se bien ne scés que l'en le vueille. Ne mangue mie, je te commande, Avant que on serve de viande, Car il sembleroit que tu feusses
- 16 Trop glout, ou que trop fain éusses.

Du pain que mis as en ta bouche A ton escuelle point n'atouche. Ongles polis, et nais les dois,

Don't touch your dish with bread that you've put in your mouth.

Ainsi, ainsi tenir te dois
 Qu'aux compaignons ne soit grevance,
 Ne autres ne facent nuissance.
 Viande au sel de la salliere

Don't put your meat in the saltcellar, pick your nose, or ears, 24 N'atouche, c'est laide maniere.

Tes narilles fourgier ne vueilles,
De tes dois, ne tes oreilles.
De ton coustel tes dens ne feurges, or your teeth with your knife. Except while eating, do not clean them (?) Don't spit on the table.

28 Fors quant tu mengeue, n'espeurges, 1
Ne craiche par dessus la table,
Car c'est chose desconvenable.
En ton escuelle né doit estre

Your spoon should only be in your plate while you are eating. Don't ask again for a dish removed. Don't break wind,

S'on t'a osté ton escuelle,
Garde toy bien que la rappelle.
De.....<sup>2</sup> te garde et met paine, or put your elbow on the table.

Quant tu mengue bien te guette

Empty and wipe your mouth before drinking.

Aies ta bouche quant (tu) veulz-boire,<sup>4</sup>
 Car descort naistre en pourroit
 Dont la compaignie s'en deuldroit.
 Garde toy bien, en toutes guises,

Don't find fault with your food,

44 Viandes au mengier ne desprises,

<sup>1</sup> Ce passage est très-obscur. On y recommande de ne point frapper ses dents avec son couteau, et de ne s'en servir pour les nettoyer que dans le moment où l'on mange. Le curedent n'était pas encore inventé.

3 Coste, coude.

4 Il faut entendre ce passage comme s'il y avait: Wuidié et essuyé memoire aies ta bouche quant tu veulz boire.

or talk scandal, but be cheerful, not talking so that people hear you. Et quant tu te siés au mengier Garde toy bien de laidengier,<sup>1</sup> Ains fais grande chiere et grant joye,

S'ensuibent les Contenances de la Cable.

[MS. Bibl. Imper. 1181, ol. 73982, fol. 1 vo-5.]

Let him who would be courteous

ENFANT qui veult estre courtoys, Et à toutes gens agreable, Et principalement à table, keep these rules.

4 Garde ces rigles en françoys.

II.

Cut your nails and clean the dirt out. Enfant soit de copper soingneux Ses ongles, et oster l'ordure;

Wash your hands on rising, at dinner, and at supper.

IV.

Enfant, dy benedicite, Et faiz le signe de la croix, Ains que tu prens riens, se m'en crois, 16 Qui te soit de necessité.

Say, 'Bless ye' and make the sign of the Cross before taking anything.

Enfant, quant tu seras aux places Où aucun prelat d'eglise est, Laisse luy dire, s'il luy plaist, 20 Tant benedicite que graces.

If any prelate be present, let him say grace as well as 'Bless ye.'

VI.

Enfant, se prelat ou seigneur Te dit de son auctorité Que dies benedicite,

But if he or your lord tells you to say it,

24 Fais le hardiement, c'est honneur.

VII.

Enfant, se tu es en maison D'autrui, et le maistre te dit Que te sées, sans contredit 28 Faire le peulz selon raison.

When told to sit in another's house,

do so at once,

Enfant, prens de regarder peine Sur le siege où tu te sierras, Se aucune chose y verras 32 Qui soit deshonneste ou vilaine. but take care there's nothing nasty on the seat.

IX.

When seated

Enfant, quant tu seras assis Pour ton corps refectionner, Soit au soupper, ou au disner, for supper or dinner, be prudent and sober.

36 Monstre toy prudent et rassiz.

Take enough bread and wine, Enfant, prens du vin et du pain, Ce qu'il souffist à ta nature, Sans trop ne peu, selon mesure;

not too much.

40 Qui trop en prent est dit villain.

XI.

Don't eat too freely of the first dish,

so as not to be

Enfant, tu ne te doibs charger Tant de ta premiere viande, Se plusieurs en as en commande, Que d'autres ne puisses menger.

48

52

Don't touch any dish first;

Enfant, se tu es bien scavant, Ne mès pas ta main le premier Au plat, mais laisse y toucher let the host do that.

Le maistre de l'hostel avant.

XIII.

When you've put food in your mouth,

Enfant, gardez que le morseau Que tu auras mis en ta bouche Par une fois, jamais n'atouche, Ne soit remise en ton vaisseau.

XIV.

Don't offer any one else food that you've bitten.

Enfant, ayes en toy remors De t'en garder, se y as failly, Et ne presentes à nulluy 56 Le morseau que tu auras mors.

XV.

Don't stuff in your mouth what you can't eat, and Enfant, garde toy de maschier En ta bouche pain ou viande, Oultre que ton cuer ne demande, 60 Et puis apres la recrascher. then have to spit it out again.

XVI.

Enfant, tu doibs prendre du sel Dessus ton taillour, et saloir Ta viande pour mieulx valoir, Ou dedans ung autre vaissel. Take salt on your trencher.

XVII.

Enfant, garde qu'en la saliere Tu ne mettes point tes morseaulx Pour les saler, ou tu deffaulx, Don't dip your food in the salt-cellar.

68 Car c'est deshonneste maniere.

XVIII

Enfant, se tu bois de fort vin,
Metts y eaue attrempeement,
Et n'en boy que souffisamment,
72 Ou il te troublera l'engin.

Mix water with strong wine, or it will muddle your wits.

XIX.

Enfant, se tu es ung yvrongne Par trop boire, il est deshonneste, Et en auras mal en la teste, To get drunk is disgraceful, and it makes your head ache.

76 Et puis apres honte et vergongne.

XX.

Enfant, garde que sur ton boire Ne habonde trop en parolles, Car la maniere en est moult folle; Don't talk too much over your wine.

80 Enfant de bien ne le doit faire.

XXI.

Enfant, à table je t'ordonne
Sur tout que point tu ne sommeilles,
Et aussi que tu ne conseilles <sup>1</sup>
84 En l'oreille d'autre personne.

Don't go to sleep at table

or whisper in any one's ear.

1 Conseiller, parler bas.

XXII.

Don't talk with your mouth full, Enfant, jamais la bouche pleine, Tu ne dois à autruy parler, Ne boire aussy pour avaler, or gulp your drink down.

Ne boire aussy pour avaler,
88 Car c'est chose par trop vileine.

XXIII.

Whatever banquet you go to,

Enfant, garde, se tu es saige, En quelque bancquet que tu voyses <sup>1</sup> Soit de seigneurs, ou de bourgeoyses, don't gabble too much.

92 De trop habonder en langaige.

XXIV.

Be peaceable and courteous,

Enfant, soyes tousjours paisible, Doulx, courtois, bening, amiable, Entre ceulx qui sierront à table, not noisy.

96 Et te gardes d'estre noysibles.<sup>2</sup>

XXV.

If you have a cloth, never drink out of a cup with a dirty mouth,

100

Enfant, ce te est chose honteuse, Se tu as serviette ou drap, De boire en aucun hanap, Ayant la bouche orde et bayeuse.<sup>3</sup>

1 Que tu voyses, que tu ailles. 2 Noysible, bruyant.

<sup>3</sup> Cette pièce est du milieu du xve siècle. On se servait alors de serviettes, tandis que plus anciennement, aux xiii et xive, on s'essuyait la bouche avec la nappe. En voici un exemple qu'il ne sera pas inutile de rapprocher de ces quatrains. Il est tiré du Chastiement des Dames, poëme dans lequel Robert de Blois enseigne aux dames comment elles doivent se conduire dans le monde.

Toutes les foiz que vous bevez, Vostre bouche bien essuiez, Que li vins encressiez ne soit; Qu'il desplest moult à cui le boit. Gardez que voz iez n'essuez, A cele foiz que vous bevez A la nape, ne vostre nez, Qar blasmée moult en serez.

(Fabliaux de Barbazan, édit. Méon. T. 2, p. 200.) Le Grand d'Aussy, dans la Vie privée des François. Paris, 1782. T. 3, p. 139, assure que l'usage de s'essuyér la bouche à la nappe, et de ne pas avoir de serviettes, s'était encore conservé en Angleterre.

XXVI.

Enfant, se tu faiz en ton verre Souppes de vin aucunement, Boy tout le vin entierement, 104 Ou autrement le gecte à terre.

If you take a sip out of a glass, drink all the wine, or throw it away.

XXVII.

Enfant, garde de presenter A ton hoste pain ne viande. Prendre en peut sans qu'on luy commande; Don't offer bread or meat to your host.

108 Autre ne l'en peut exempter.<sup>1</sup>

XXVIII.

Enfant, soies plain et joyeux En tout ce que tu fais ou dis, Ne te habandonne à nulz vains dis, 112 Tu n'en pourras valoir que mieulx.

Be simple and cheerful in all you do, not giving yourself up to vanities.

XXIX.

Enfant, se aucun serviteur oste Aucun plat qui soit devant toy, N'en fais semblant, tais t'en tout quoy, 116 Il souffist puisqu'i<sup>2</sup> plaist à l'hoste.

If a servant takes a dish away from you, take no notice. [2 i pour il]

Enfant, garde toy de remplir Ton ventre si habundamment, Que tu ne puisses saigement 120 Tes bonnes œuvres acomplir.

Don't fill your belly so full that you can't work.

Enfant, se tu veulx en ta pence Trop excessivement bouter, Tu seras constraint à rupter Et perdre toute contenance.

If you stuff too much, you'll have to break wind and be shamed.

1 Robert de Blois fait aux dames la même recommandation:

En autrui meson ne soiez Trop larges, se vous i mangiez: N'est cortoisie, ne procce, D'autrui chose faire larguece. (Ibid., p. 201.)

XXXII.

Listen, and only speak at fit times.

Enfant, se tu es saige, escoute De la table les assistans, Sans parler fors qu'à heure et temps,

Don't lean on your elbow.

128 Et ne te tiens pas sur le coubte.

XXXIII.

· If your nose is snotty, don't wipe it with the hand in which you hold your food.

132

Enfant, se ton nez est morveux, Ne le torche de la main nue, De quoy ta viande est tenue. Le fait est vilain et honteux.

XXXIV.

Don't snuff up your snivel or make a loud whistle, Enfant, en quelque compaignye
Que soyes, ne veulles nifler
Ton nez, ne faire hault siffler;
136 C'est deshonneur et mocquerie.

XXXV.

Keep these things in mind.

Enfant, metz ces dis en entente Et les retiens en ton couraige. Le residu de ton potaige Jamais à autruy ne presente.

Don't offer the soup you leave to any one else. 140

144

XXXVI.

Don't rub your hands together, or your arms on the cloths. Enfant, garde toy de frotter
Enssamble tes mains, ne tes bras
Ne à la nappe, ne aux draps;
A table on ne se doit grater.

XXXVII.

After partaking of your host's food, thank him. Enfant, apres que tu as prins Des biens de ton hoste ou hostesse, Remercie lez de leur largesse;

148 Tu n'en-pourras estre reprins.

<sup>1</sup> Le linge était alors si rare, que l'on ne connaissait pas les mouchoirs; la politesse consistait à se moucher avec les doigts de la main gauche, parce qu'on mangeait avec ceux de la main droite.

Autres Contenances de Table.

[MS. Bibl. Imp. 1181, (anc. 7398,) fol. 5. vo. See another version, p. 3 of the French, Part II.]

Let the courteous observe these rules.

SE tu veulz estre bien courtois, Gardes ces reigles en françois.

Pare your nails or you'll get the scab. Asses souvent tes ongles roingne;
4 Longs ongles font venir la roingne.

Take the dirt out of them too.

De tes ongles oste l'ordure; Les avoir ors est grant laidure.

How to bear yourself at Table.

[Englished literally by Professor Seeley, M.A., of University College, London; Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge.]

He shall be called instructed who shall follow these teachings. These teachings which are written here, let him who wishes to be held polite know must needs be observed,

4 Never take up food with hands not washed.

Let no one take food until the blessing be given,

Nor take a seat, except that which the master of the house chooses.

While you are sitting at the table, think first of the poor man.

8 For when you are full of meat, you know not what the needy man feels.

Avoid eating of the dishes until they are put before you. Cut the bread which he bids you cut who wants some of it. Let not the piece of food, when it has been touched by the teeth, be put back

12 Upon the dish. Let your fingers and nails be trimmed.

Let not the salt be touched by meat in the vessel in which it is set on table.

While food still continues in your mouth, beware of drinking. Don't scratch your limb, after the fashion of a mole, as you sit down.

16 Let not persons eating, clean their teeth with their knife. Remove the spoon from the dish when you have taken up the food.

Don't spit over the table, nor down upon it ever. Be it forbidden to put the elbow on the table.

20 If you can, I warn (?) you of this, don't belch at table.

Don't say offensive things, In mensa care. quam sint res ne memorare.

Nec dicas verbum. cuiquam quod ei sit acerbum.

At table do not mention how dear things are.

Don't say a word to any one which may be unpleasant to him.

At table be cheerful, and don't speak to any one in his ear.

24 Let not a cat ever be a companion to you at the table.

If you are wise, spit beyond the vessel when you wash.

Carefully beware of this, not to offend your fellow-guests.

Never grin, but sit steady,

28 With three clean fingers touching the food.

Speak morose [grave] things always, and jocose things at table.

See, O man, that the table be clean, and remember not to rise

Until grace be said and the table be removed.

Wipe your knife, and wipe your spoon with your napkin.
When the master drinks, drink not, learner.
Put not your knife on (your) trenchers lest you be reproved.
Don't blurt out (?) into your drink & food.

36 Do not chew visibly on either side [of the jaw].

He who despises these teachings, let him be kept away from the table.

If a man loves to injure the character of absent men with words,

Let him know that this table is shameful for him.

The Page standing at Table.

(Englished literally by Professor Seeley.)

Boy, standing at thy master's table, learn good maxims. While thou speakest, let fingers, hands, & feet be at peace. Be simple in look, & do not turn the eye everywhere.

4 Let not the wall be thy looking-glass, nor the post thy staff;
Nor pick thy nose, nor scratch thine own flesh,
Nor lean thy head: let there be in thy face the expression of one speaking.

Walk demurely through the streets & roads,

8 And let not the colour in thy face change quickly through levity;

Nor must thou, in presence of thy lord, exhibit horse-laughs. These teachings hold fast, if thou wilt be held polite. With unwashed hands take not up ever thy food, 12 And sit in the place which the host shall have marked out for thee.

Refuse the highest place unless thou be ordered to take it. Until the dishes be placed, spare the bread & wine Lest thou be said to be oppressed with hunger, or gluttonous.

Be thy nails clean, lest perchance they offend thy companion.Eat up thy whole share, or let it be given to the poor.Enjoying peace, beware of chattering with much talk.

Give part of your food to the poor.

After meals, thank Christ.

Avoid loud laughter; thus mayst thou be disparaged. Beware of stretching thy jaws with a great bolus. 20 And don't eat food with a double part of the mouth at once. Thou shalt never laugh nor speak with thy mouth full, Nor shalt thou make a noise with thy dish by too much stuffing.

24 Let not the spoon stand ever on the dish or on the plate. And if thy mouth be stained, thou shalt not drink until it be wiped.

A dish taken away from the table, thou shalt not recall. Nor shalt thou spit over the table, nor down upon it ever,

Nor scrape nor scratch thine own flesh with thy fingers. 28 Be thy hand ever clean; let it avoid to wipe the nose. At table beware of cleaning thy teeth with thy knife. When thou holdest in thy mouth meat, beware of superadding drink. 32

Beware of touching ever at table what may offend your companions,

Of stroking ever the cat & the dog.

Beware of staining the cloth with the knife at table.

Thou wilt always beware of blurting out with (thy) drink & food.

Let not the salt be touched by meat in the vessel in which 36 it is served up.

If thou art wise, spit beyond the vessel when thou washest. Let there be fear at meals, benediction, reading, time. Let thy speech be short, thy countenance cheerful; let part be given to the poor.

Let luxury be away, detraction, gluttony, quarrels. 40 And when the food is taken, let thanks be paid to Christ. Let him be deprived of the table who rejects these teachings.

. The May of Dining.

[Englished literally.1]

Hear & learn the way of dining, if to you happy, Distinguished, cheerful, fulness of wealth abounds.

Seek the church in the morning when mass is performed.

4 That you may live in sounder health, seek for yourself quiet labours

By which you may be able yourself to purge hurtful humours. If you seek, you will find for yourself a thousand sorts of labours.

To a man in good health every kind of labour before food is commendable;

8 To him, too, rest is expedient, when his stomach is replenished with food.

Moderate exercise relieves swelled stomachs; It dissipates noxious humours & phlegm[?];

It excites warmth; it is said to brace the framework of the stomach.

12 Inactivity with rest is exceedingly hurtful to persons in good health,

Especially to those whom a gross diet nourishes.

If you would make yourself safe, if you would (make) yourself sound,

Remove burdensome cares, count it a sin to be angry,

Avoid rising up after meals, & sleep at midday.

If doctors fail thee, thus let doctors be made for you:

Let there be to you a cheerful mind, exercise, & moderate diet.

When time & inclination for banqueting are given to you,

20 In the first place let there be made a purgation of the bowels; Next, let a napkin & water be given for the hands to one standing [?].

If it be winter, let water be presented to you warmed.

Let the napkin be snow-white; see that the water be from the

Let clean knives be put on the table for the eatables.1

Let the salt be snow-white & clean, & likewise the salt-cellar.<sup>2</sup>

Let an upper slice of fine bread be taken off for the master,

Let it (the bread) be cut<sup>3</sup> through the middle, but not entirely

Do not put on table [?] a half loaf for one eating. Let the dishes, bowls, & cups, be without dirt. On the table, let not dishes too [ample] or deep

32 Be laid; let cups & goblets be had

At the pleasure of the master, large, small or middling-sized. Let no hand presume to pour water on the dishes.

If basins 4 are wanting, let the cups be pressed to hold water.

36 Let a succession of eatables & drink minister to the feasters. Let not your table be rustic while you are counted rich. When the table is set up,<sup>5</sup> let a white table-cloth be placed on it,

If it be white, though crumpled (or ragged), it may avail to serve the table:

40 If it be dirty, (and) crumpled (or ragged), let it be made fine by the laundress.

With the salt, the pages place knives & bread.

Let them serve potage when the spoons are brought.

Let them serve with food at the tables, the water having been well touched (=with clean hands?)

44 At first, dishes are brought to the more important person, Flesh of pork, with cow beef, & mutton, Goose flesh, chickens, & fat capons.

Lambs' flesh, sucking pigs, yeal.

48 Let hens' flesh, hares, & afterwards boars' flesh, be served; Flesh of fawns, hinds, kids;

Let very fat birds which the air produces be given.

When these have been served, let there be served between the dishes, pies,<sup>6</sup>

6 Pye, bryd [t i. bird]. Pica. Withals.

&lt;sup>2</sup> The huge salt-cellar was the chief ornament of the board; it was usually of silver, & the cunning of the silversmith was exerted to render it ornamental & grotesque. It formed a conspicuous object on the table before or on the right hand of the master of the house. It appears in various shapes. . Edmund, earl of March, in 1330, left to his son and daughter each a silver salt in the shape of a dog. Sometimes they were wrought in the form of a chariot, with four wheels, with which they could be passed down the table with ease. See a MS. in the Brit. Mus., Addit. Muffett, speaking of Wheat, says, 'it shall be sufficient for us to describe the sorts of this Country, which are especially two: The one red, called Robus by Columella, and the other very white and light called Siligo, whereof is made our purest manchet.' p. 231. In England our finest Manchet is made without Leaven. p. 241. 'Siligo dicitur Gallice segle.' John de Garlande, p. 127.

Barley braces, cools, & gives strength;

White wheat wastes away the gout, & burns up the heart.

Bread not fermented nourishes the body well;

180 It is good for the stomach: heats are furnished to the stomach in this way.

Soft pottage softens the coat of our stomachs.

The bean nourishes the body; with the husks, binds the stomach,

Dries up the phlegm, binds (?) 4 the stomach & eye.

184 Old wine, believe me, dries up & burns the body,
And excites bile; it is said to constipate the stomach
If it be mixed with water; when mulled (?) it nourishes the body,

It provokes urine; when mixed, it relaxes & inflates.

- 188 New wine gives greater warmth to the drinker;
  Sweet white wines are more nutritious,
  They produce urine, they minister mischief to the head.
  All wines, as a general rule, are heating.
- 192 A man is made more quickly drunk by drinking dark wines,

They constipate the stomach, burn it, & hurt the bowels. Too large draughts of drink weaken & dry up,

Also very little food, & salt food fried,

- 196 Sleep before food, study, old wine,
  And perpetual labour, & the fiery heat of the sun,
  Frequent bloodletting, fear, immoderate lust,
  Excessive care, sweat, long fasts, pains.
- Ale nourishes gross humours, affords
  Strength, & increases the flesh, & produces blood;
  When new, it provokes urine, softens & inflates the belly.
  A draught of water too much taken may be hurtful to a person eating;
- 204 It cools the nutriment . . . & spoils the food.

Sucking pig & lamb are exceedingly unwholesome;

When young he is laudable salted, & (also when he is) old.

- Veal is exceedingly nutritious,
  Old flesh, salted too much, dries (one) up.
  Boars flesh dries up the body, & nourishes (?) it more;
  (?) The sheep with its cleft feet is more wholesome than all (other beasts.)
- A wild bird is more to sick people than a dry one (!)
  Every kind of ' bird is said to be softer,
  And that (bird) is praiseworthy whose flesh remains white.
  A fish having red flesh hurts sick people excessively;
- The flesh of a goose, of eel, never suits sick people;
  River fish swimming through rocky places
  Are better for sick persons to eat;
  A sea fish nourishes bitter humours;
- 224 Fat fish & fat flesh nourish fevers.

  Cheese, salt & old, heats the stomach,

  Is digested late, is said to constipate the bowels;

  And cold (?) salted cheese nourishes more than sheep's (flesh),
- 228 And is said to bind the stomach moderately;
  Cheese unsalted digests food well, & dissolves it.
  Butter moistens the stomach, & produces heat,
  Softens the bowels, & is said to dissipate humours.
- 232 Milk nourishes the (new-)born, comforts the limbs, & tempers
  The immoderate heat of the liver & stomach,
  Provokes urine, is beneficial; the fat being taken away,
  It dissipates the noxious influence of warm humours.

  Food is of no use until the stomach is emptied;
  While from the beginning of the meal the hungry stomach seeks agreeable food,

Which soon it will attract from the whole body,

And so the brain will be very much disturbed.

Vomiting is useful in every month, because it purges Noxious humours; the mouth relieves the disordered stomach. Spring, autumn, winter, & summer reign in the year:

- In spring the air may be warm & moist,
  No time is better adapted than that for blood-letting;
  Then the moderate use of copulation will benefit man,
  Bodily exercise, & the loosening of the belly, & sweat;
- Then let baths purge the body, with medicines.
  Summer afterwards dries such. Let it be known that in that Time red choler especially prevails.
  Let damp, cold, dishes be given; let copulation be avoided.
- 280 Baths do no good; let bloodlettings be rare:
  And let useful rest be (practised), with moderation of drinking.
  In harvest time let cold things be joined with the dry;
  Let that which nourishes black choler be avoided by every one,
- And let the bodily motion and use of Venus be greater Than it may be in summer; medicated baths profit (you).

  (When) winter grows moist, grows cold, let us be strict(?) in

  (our) food.

In winter time let your food be delicious (= dainty);

288 Let there be no purging of the belly in it, nor bloodletting.

Moderate copulation itself is advantageous, let her [Venus] be friendly to the couch.

The change of season renders not a few sick.

It is beneficial to preserve the proper heat of nature;

- Damp things can not hurt men's strength
  While nature is able to enjoy its own heat.
  Let joyous songs very often gladden your spirit,
  Cultivate pleasant words, abandon litigious ones.
- 296 Let a very showy newness of garment be to thee often;
  Take dishes which have a flavour, & cups unadulterated.
  Beware of indulging thy throat; despise luxurious things;
  Study to live scrupulously; beware of vicious things;

In The doctrynall of good servauntes, printed by John Butler, and reprinted by Dr Rimbault for the Percy Society in 1842, in Ancient Poetical Tracts of the Sixteenth Century, the servant's three qualifications are given thus, at p. 9:

To save the repetition of p, and l, for page and line, I have adopted Mr Morris's plan, in his Chaucer Glossary, of putting a / between the numbers of the page and line, and have left 'Part I.' to be understood before those references to which no Roman numeral is prefixed, so that 5/115 stands for Part I. page 5, line 115. Where no line is named, then p, for page is prefixed. II. stands for Part II. The French references are to Cotgrave, except where otherwise specified. The Index, though long, does not pretend to completeness. The explanations of words given in the notes to the text are not repeated here.
